LAST EXPERT FOR STATE

Physician Unshaken on Cross-Examination by Shearn-Thaw Smiles at Many of the Replies.

Dr. Carlos F. Macdonald, the third alienist to testify for the state, was on the witness stand for seven hours at the hearing on the sanity of Harry K. Thaw before Justice Keogh at White Plains yesterday. He was the only witness called and the last alienist to testify for the state. Thaw's counsel, Clarence J. Shearn, occupied almost the entire time in cross-examining the state's witness. He had not finished when court adjourned, and said he expected the cross-examination would take another half day of court, on Friday.

William Travers Jerome, who was ap pointed a Special Deputy Attorney General to conduct the case for the state, made a short direct examination of the witness, bringing out Dr. Macdonald's expert opinion that Thaw was an incurable paranoiac and would be a danger to the peace and safety of the community if released from Matteawan state asylum. Mr. Shearn tried long and hard to break down the alienist's testimony without any apparent success.

Piece by piece Thaw's counsel interrogated the witness in regard to the numerous letters and memoranda constituting the exhibits in the case in an effort to analyze the alienist's opinion of Thaw's mental condition. He asked the witness to point out the "insane delusion" in each particular piece of evidence. Over and over again Dr. Macdonald testified that it would be impossible to do so in any particular writing taken alone, but that in connection with other exhibits and the history of the case each scrap of evidence played an important part in diagnosing Thaw's mental malady as paranoia.

Lawyer and Doctor Cross Swords. Mr. Shearn endeavored to explain away the indications of persecution, exaggerated ego and other symptoms of paranoia in Thaw's letters and notes by assuming from the evidence that all the so-called delusions were founded on fact. The examination resolved itself at times into a scientific discussion of psychiatry.

It appeared to be Mr. Shearn's purpose to read paranoia out of the case by a process of elimination, by discarding each particular piece of evidence as it came up, in which, considering it alone, the physician expressed the opinion that there was no real indication of insane

In answer to Mr. Jerome's questions Dr. Macdonald testified that the act of violence connected with the dominating delusion in paranoia sometimes relieved on of the mind, so to speak, and the delusions might not be so pronounced after that. But it was no eviquestion, which he asked Dr. Macdon-

"Now, laying aside the testimony of persons other than Thaw, please consider only the writings of Thaw which you have seen and which are in evidence, coupled with the testimony Thaw gave in this and other hearings, and your observation of Thaw at the first trial, the hearing before Justice Morschauser and the hearings at White Plains, are you able to form an opinion as to the present mental condition of Thaw?"

Says Thaw Is a Paranoiac. Dr. Macdonald then gave his opinion that Thaw was a paranoiae and would be a dangerous person if set at large. Mr Shearn began his cross-examina tion. He wanted to know if some evidences of insanity in Thaw's remote relatives would have any bearing on a diagnosis of paranola in Thaw's case. The witness said it would have some significance in regard to heredity. 'What is an insane delusion?" asked

"An insane delusion is a false belief emanating from a diseased mind, without any foundation in fact, and one which would appear incredible to the person having it if he were of normal mind." Dr. Macdonald replied. Fixed, systematic delusions of a morbid character, exaltation or insane vanfty was an essential symptom of paranoia, the witness said "If you find fixed, systematic delusions of persecution are you able to diagnose a case of paranoia from that fact alone?" asked Mr. Shearn. "That is essential, but I would not diagnose paranola on that fact alone," replied Dr. Macdonald. "I would strongly suspect paranola, but I should heavily for several days. want a history of the case." "Does the existence of insane delusions alone establish the fact of insanity?"

asked Mr. Shearn. "I object," said Mr. Jerome, "Such a question in itself presupposes insanity."

Shearn Turns Laugh on Jerome. "Yes, it does; you are right for once," said Mr. Shearn, and the court attendants had to rap for order because of the laugh that followed.

In the next question Mr. Shearr "Can you determine what kind of in sanity Thaw has by looking at his

"No." the witness replied.

Mr. Shearn wanted to know if Dr. Macdonald considered it an insane delusion on Thaw's part when he said he had been told that Justice Dowling only intended to commit him to Matteawan for thirty days after his second trial Dr. Macdonald said he would consider that an insane delusion.

"Even if Justice Dowling told that to Mr. Littleton, Thaw's counsel, and Mr. Littleton told it to Thaw?" asked Mr. "I don't believe Justice Dowling ever gaid it," said Dr. Macdonald. "Well, it is possible that he did, isn't

"Yes, possible, but highly incredible," the witness replied.

if Thaw was told that and he repeated it would it?" asked Mr. Shearn. "No, not under those circumstances re led Dr. Macdonald. SAYS DR. MACDONALD Mr. Shearn asked the witness to state the systematized delusions he found Thaw had prior to the shooting of Stanford White

"He had delusions that White and Another Alienist Testifies It other men maintained certain houses for immoral practices, and that his life OILERS DESERT THE CAUSE was in danger from these persons, and that it was his mission to break up the practices," said the witness.

"Any other delusions at that time? asked Mr. Sheam.

"That was the central delusion," Dr Macdonald replied.

Thaw took a lively interest in all of Dr. Macdonald's testimony. He frethe three alignists who are to testify on his side. He seemed displeased with some of Dr. Macdonald's answers and smiled broadly at others, as if they were satisfactory to him. Thaw also apparently discussed points in 15. testimony with his mother, who sat beside him.

The hearings will be resumed on Friday, and Justice Keogh will hold court all day Saturday to make up for the holiday to-day

Union Committee Considers Openly Throwing Up Sponge.

Several Ships Delayed in Clearing, While Others Sign Fresh Crews Without Trouble.

While coastwise shipping owners placidly declared the strike of their employes was all over, the strike committee of the union quently leaned over and conferred with held stormy sessions vesterday, debating whether or not it should throw up the sponge and admit that there was no hop of winning.

The first open break came from the oil ers, who found things going so strongly against them that they held a meeting an secided to form a separate union and reurn to work. Leaders declared they wer induced to strike against their will and were dissatisfied with the way in which the union officials were attempting to prolong he strike, instead of making efforts to bring about peace.

One of the causes of the weakening was said to be the failure to get as much support from the longshoremen as had been counted upon. Another was the announcement from the cooks and stewards that they would refuse to join in a sympathetic

Company, operated to the Canal Zone by the government, sailed yesterday with a bluejacket crew, as did the Cristobal on the day before. At a mass meeting held at the union headquarters, James Vidal, secretary of the ritory organization, said that the action of the overnment in putting enlisted men on the Panama boats would probably result in union seamen and engine room hands refuzvessels.

"We can fight the government, if necessary," he said.

Americans Appeal to Police.

Alleging that the Spanish and Latin ele ment, which is said to largely outnumber them, was not given them a voice in or ganization affairs, a delegation of twenty Americans from the firemen's, oilers and water tenders' unions went to Police Head quarters late last night and told Detectiv Lieutenant McNally that they were not having a fair show and that the foreign members of the union were preparing to resort to violence to gain their ends. The men said that the secretary of the inion, James Vidal, was a Spaniard, and that he refused to recognize them at an of the union meetings. They had even been denied access to their meeting place at No. 229 West street, they said, and from what they had overheard the Spanlards were planning to make trouble

One of the delegates declared that last audience with Vidal another Spanjard rushed into the hall and said that the Morgan Steamship Company had a force of strike breakers which it was planning to out to work. According to the delegate Vidal told his men to beat them up and he police, too, if necessary.

Wilson is travelling around the world to bring about an amalgamation of the labor unions of Great Britain, the Britsh colonies and the United States. He recently arrived in San Francisco from Australia, and was in Chicago on Tuesday. Half a dozen ships got away from their locks yesterday after delay. The Sabine suffered most, being held up three hours before she finally cleared. The others had better luck, getting non-union crews to nan them without trouble. He told of how, in 1882-'83 and preious to that, the trunk lines out of New York paid various commissions to steamship companies for the immigrant business.

At one time, he said, the commissions were as low as 5 per cent of the fare, but competition forced the rate up as high as per cent. In 1886, he said, the trunk lines got together and fixed 10 per cent as a fair commission. At the present time, the witess said, the trunk lines pay 10 per cent on all immigrant tickets where the fare is more than $2.50. VACATION SEASON BEGINS

Delay of Starting Time This Year Adds to Fourth's Great Rush.

Railroad stations and ferry houses in this
