ERRORS BEAT SUPERBAS

Eight Misplays Pave Way to Victory for Cardinals.

BARGER AND STACK EASY

Both Hit Freely, While Harmon Holds His Opponents

Well in Hand. [By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

St. Louis, July 18 .- After playing any quantities of errorless innings and going through three or four full games recently without a misplay, the Brooklyn Superbas went all to pieces in fielding today, and were soundly trounced by the St. Louis Cardinals. The score was 10 to 2. Eight errors were chalked up against the record of the visitors, who make up one of the classiest fielding teams in the league. Six players were guilty of miscues, Moran and Miller contributing to o

Stack contributed one. Such being the case, the Cardinals hardly needed the thirteen hits which they secured off Barger and Stack to win the game. Cy started in the box, but he soon was buried under an avalanche of seven hits, and retired in favor of Stack, who allowed six in five innings of work. They were well enough bunched with the errors to net seven runs.

apiece, while Northen, Tooley, Barger and Harmon had no trouble at all in holding the Superbas in check, although he did not receive the best of support. His teammates contributed four errors themselves, making a total of twelve miscues for the game. The St. Louis twirler allowed only nine hits, which he kept well scattered.

Big Ed Konetchy, the St. Louis first baseman, had a day of hit it with the bat, rapping out three hits, a triple and a double being included in the number while Evans connected for three singles The Cardinals scored three runs in the singles by Evans, Oakes and Wingo, coupled with an error by Tooley. netchy opened the fourth with a triple and scored on Evans's single. Hauser bunted safely, and Barger picked up the ball, throwing it to the fence, letting Evans tally and Hauser reach third. This finished Barger, and Stack went in to stem the tide. Oakes beat out a high bounder to Daubert, scoring Hauser Oakes died stealing, but Wingo singled, stole second and took third on Miller's wild throw, scoring on Huggins's single. Hits by Konetchy and Hauser, with three errors, accounted for three more in the fray.

Brooklyn got two runs in the fourth on with errors by Morwey and Wingo. The score follows:

which has rarely been seen in this city.

Bombardier Wells, the heavyweight champion boxer of Great Britain, defeated Tom Kennedy, of this city, in eight rounds at Madison Square Garden last night. The end came toward the middle of the eighth round. When the men went to their corners at the end of the sev enth session both were in distress, Kennedy from the terrible beating he had received and Wells from his own efforts, They had not been boxing long in the eight round when Wells shot a stinging left to the nose, quickly whipped over a right to the chin and Kennedy dropped like a log.

He crawled up on one knee and looked about in a dazed sort of a way, but the fighting instinct was there, and as he shook his head to clear his brain he nodded to Billy Joh, the referee, who was ounting off the seconds.

At the count of eight Kennedy got to Wells measured his man fully, and after staggering him with a left, stepped in close and shot over a short righthook that did not travel more than two feet. The blow landed on the right spot and down went Kennedy with a crash, his shoulders striking on the lower rope. There he lay with eyes glazed, powerless to help himself. Before the referee had tolled off the fatal ten seconds a sponge was thrown in from Kennedy's corner, thus saving him from a knockout. When the big men appeared they looked ready to fight for their lives, and, oddly enough, both weighed exactly the same-1914 pounds. Kennedy was the first to crawl through the ropes, and he received a fine reception, but it was nothing as to the ovation given Wells. The smiling Briton had to bow his acknowledgments for a couple of

As he sat in his corner waiting for the bell the Briton had his legs crossed and looked as cool as could be. Kennedy had a worried expression. From the moment they put up their hands it was seen that Wells was the superior boxer. In and out with long, clean lefts, perfectly timed, he began to send Kennedy's head back. At close quarters he crossed his man with a right, and down went Kennedy. For an instant the spectators had views of a repetition of the Wells-Palzer affair, but this was different, for Kennedy was unhurt, and jumped up quickly. They fought hard to the bell, with the honors in Wells's favor. In the succeeding rounds Wells landed lefts and rights so often that Kennedy at times appeared bewildered, yet he always fought back, sometimes taking a blow in the hope of getting over the desired wallop, but the wary Briton was tired at the bell. At one star as if Wells, despite the hard and frequent punches that he was landing, would be unable to "get" his man. The Briton wasted few blows, however, and when he did cut loose he rarely missed the mark When he dropped Kennedy in the eighth round it was seen that the end was near, for the latter, although same as & pebble, was weak from loss of blood, smaller schooners that also are coming Just before Wells put over the finishing blow he turned with an appealing expression to the referee, as much as to say, "Must I do it?" Joh made no sign, however, and then Wells continued about the work with an air of one who felt sorry. He patted Kennedy affectionately
