"Hoss" Car to Double-Decked Electric Tram

Progress of Surface Traffic Facilities.

To show what progress has been made in street railway traffic facilities the New York Railways Company had a parade yesterday. It served to impress upon the minds of those who saw it that while horsecars still run in New York, though not on Breadway, there is coming a time when, perhaps, there may be room for just one more passenger during the rush

A dumpy little bobtailed car of the vintage of 1890, that used to be pulled by a single horse, had the right of the line when the procession started from Seventh avenue and Fith street. The ancient car was drawn by two milk white steeds that were better a comed than the average horse required to pull a horsecan and got an ovation all the way to the Battery. It was followed by a car of the type that ran along the main street of the town in the days when cable was an innovation. Then came the pay-as-youenter car, which is now the principal means of surface transportation, followed by the low step open-in-the-middle car, No. 5,000, of which as yet there is only The rear of the procession was brought up by No. 6,000, the big double decker, which made its first appearance on Broadway last spring and created a

The guests were aboard this car. They were William R. Willcox, chairman of the Public Service Commission, and Commissioners Eustis and Williams. Accompanying them were Theodore P. Shonts, president of the company; Frank Hedley, vice-president and general manager; D. W. Ross, vice-president, and Alfred Craven, chief engineer.

COL. HARDY ACQUITTED OF STRIKING MRS. KRUG

Jury in Metuchen Decides He Used Only Legitimate Amount of Force.

DAMAGE SUIT IS PENDING

Loser in Case Says She Will Press Action for $25,000 Damages for Alleged Rough Handling.

Metuchen, N. J., Nov. 21.-After deliberating for four hours and a half, a jury in the Middlesex County Criminal Court decided to-day that Colonel John M. Hardy, owner of racehorses, had a right to eject Mrs. Sarah P. Krug, of Rahway, from his house on June 21, when she refused to obey his order to get out, and that by using force the former resident of Virginia was not guilty of assault. Immediately after the verdict was rendered Colonel Hardy said: "What! An old Virginian kick and strike a woman? Whoever heard of such a thing?"

The whole trouble grew out of Mrs. Krug calling at the Hardy home to see Finally Agrees That rerminal Dr. F. J. Parker Provides for Mrs. Hardy, who is eighty-three years old and wealthy, after Colonel Hardy had requested that she cease such visits.

In submitting the case to the jury Judge Daly ruled that a man was the master of his own home and had a right to exclude any one from it that he desired. He said that if Mrs. Krug had intruded after a warning to keep away, the colonel had a right to keep her out, and the question for the jury was whether more than the necessary amount of force was used. Mrs. Krug asserted that the colonel kicked her out of the house and bruised her about the body.

The taking of testimony ended at noon, and ex-Judge Coddington, of Plainfield, for Colonel Hardy, and Assistant Prosecutor Stricker for the State of New Jerwas Miss Martha S. Griggs, who testified

"I have been in the Hardy house for five years; for three years as a graduate nurse, and the last two years both as nurse and housekeeper. I had to take care of Mr. and Mrs. Hardy, and I am still in Mr. Hardy's employ."

"Anne Morehouse, the cook, came upstairs on June 21 and said that Mrs. Krug squitable Building, in lower Broadway. and he finally agreed it would be well to Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, said not to let her in. As I went down her at the head of the stairs. Then he kept her back with his hands and told me to call the men. Anna had already to the Yale Medical School, the income called Randolph, the farmer, and I called Joe, the colored man. Mrs. Krug called her chauffeur and told him to knock Colonel Hardy down. Then I went to my room and saw nothing more."

Mrs. Krug took the stand in rebuttal and swore that she didn't threaten to kill Colonel Hardy, that she didn't order her chauffeur to knock him down, that she poor and unfortunate. The faculty of the didn't tell the gardener that Hardy was worse than the worms of the ground, that she didn't call him a coward, blackguard or brute, and had not received requests to remain away from the Hardy household.

Colonel Hardy, when cross-examined, swore that it took from ten to fifteen minutes to get Mrs. Krug out of his house. "Why didn't you withdraw when you got her out?"

"I wanted to get her off the grounds." "Did you think it necessary for three men to force her off? "Yes, to do it gently."

"Did she offer resistance?" "She certainly did when she tried to kill us with her hatpin." The feud between Colonel Hardy and the Krugs apparently is not over. There is a $25,000 damage suit pending against Colonei Hardy growing out of this disturbance. It was said to-day there would be an action in chancery soon over $300,000 worth of property which it is said Mrs. Hardy transferred to her husband since their marriage. Mrs. Krug and her husband waited in the courtroom until the verdict was rendered. With a toss of her head she said: "Colonel Hardy needn't think this settles the case. I am not through fighting." Mrs. Krug is the wife of William B. Krug, secretary of the Franklin Savings

Sales are part of our Advertising.

We sacrifice a part of our Profits on certain Sales just as we spend a part of our profits in certain newspapers.

For purpose of extra Publicity we have Marked Down certain Winter Overcoats from $18.50 and $22.50 to $14.50 and $16.50.

These are quite out of the ordinary from an artistic viewpoint. The fabrics are most tasteful and are unusual in coats at even their former prices. The linings are in keeping. Sleeves satin lined. Velvet collars are to be found when they improve appearances.

They are coats for coldest weather yet are light in weight. In length, they drop just below the knee.

Tan Shetlands in delicate tones of cream and toasty brown. Some rich, fleecy coats-the pink of fashion-diagonal weaves of broad brown stripes spaced with stripes of white; English horn buttons. Also similar weaves on roughish cloth-deep browns and reds alternating on the same colorings more lightly tinted Similar motifs in gray as well, and basket weaves, the modest herringbones and also the new indefinable twisted designs of gray on gray or gray on white which are so much favored. And these but a small hint of the complete offering-a display worthy of any gentleman's attention.

ciety of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers opened yesterday in the Engineering Societies' Building, in West 39th street. After the meeting was called to order the president, Stevenson Taylor, urged support for the navy in an address following his announcement that the nominating committee had selected Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of this city, to be the president for the ensuing term of three years, beginning January 1. Colonel Thompson was elected unanimously.

In his annual address Mr. Taylor said the United States navy had grown steadly greater, and it was necessary only to have the support of our citizens to have hold its rightful place in the world. Of the merchant marine, he said it was doing as well as it could, and while the ship-yards were fairly busy, it remained to be desired that there be a much greater demand for ships.

president said ship builders in the future must be sure the plating of a vessel had ductility, so that rupture in case of severe indentation would be reduced to a minimum. He said as the law stood he thought it was possible there might be more lifeboats or life rafts than could be properly or quickly handled in time of

Captain Dyson said that, basing the choice between reciprocating engines and turbines for battleship propulsion upon comparisons of the relative advantages of both types, the advantage appears to rest decidedly with the reciprocating engine, and the Navy Department had ruled accordingly.

Captain A. P. Niblock and G. W. Dickie were elected vice-presidents to fill, respectively, the vacancies caused by the deaths of Rear Admirals Robley D. Evans and G. W. Melville. Rear Admiral H. I. Cone, G. E. Weed and Lewis Nixon were elected vice-presidents for the term expiring
