

NATION'S SPELLBINDERS WILL INVADE JERSEY

Bryan, Johnson, Borah and Cummins to Take Part in Campaign.

STOKES MEN SEE VICTORY

Republican Chairman Says He Will Carry 17 Counties— Democrats and Moose Confident.

(From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.) Trenton, N. J., Oct. 19.—William Jennings Bryan, Governor Johnson of California and United States Senators Borah and Cummins are a few of the political headliners who are billed to speak in New Jersey during the next two weeks—the closing days of a campaign which will make this state the centre of the political whirl of the whole nation.

A Governor is to be chosen on November 4, but a glance at the speakers who have been hauled from the capital to participate in the contest is enough to make one believe that a Presidential election is at hand.

The mere selection of a Governor would not cause such great interest outside of New Jersey if the contest were not for the place that President Wilson gave up to go to Washington and also for the further fact that the President has picked the candidate whom he wants to succeed him as Executive of New Jersey.

This is the President's home state, and it is only natural that he should want to see it go his way, because that would mean that the people closest to him had endorsed his administration as far as it had gone and that they approved of the tariff bill and the other reforms he was energetically pushing. On the other hand, a defeat for the Democratic candidate for Governor will be construed as a defeat for the President also.

In addition there is also the question as to whether the Progressives will continue as a strong party, for should Mr. Colby, the Progressive candidate, poll comparatively few votes it will mean that the Progressives no longer will have to be reckoned with.

Each of the three candidates—ex-Governor Stokes, the Republican; James F. Fielder, the Democrat, and ex-Senator Everett Colby, the Progressive—have been talking nightly, but it seems probable that each and every one of them will have to step aside in the next fortnight to make way for the galaxy of statesmen who are coming to New Jersey to tell its voters who they should elect Governor.

Mr. Bryan will head the Democratic invaders, and with him will come Senator Ollie James, Speaker Champ Clark, Representative Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania; Representative Warren Gardner of Ohio; Representative George O'Shaughnessy, of Rhode Island; Representative Thomas W. Sisson, of Mississippi; Representative Baker, of California, and Representative Thomas L. Reilly, of Connecticut. There has been some talk that the President himself will make one or two speeches in his home state, but it is not probable that he will, if he listens to the advice of his friends, who say no good reason exists for his coming here.

United States Senators Cummins, of Iowa; Borah, of Idaho, and Sherman, of Illinois, will be the Republican headliners who will get into the fray. In addition there will be Congressman T. W. Kelly, of Michigan; Job E. Hedges, of New York; Representative Sidney Anderson, of Minnesota; Representative Philip P. Campbell, of Kansas, and Representative Frank Plumley, of Vermont.

Governor Johnson of California will be the "heavy man" for the Progressives, while others in their list include United States Senators Clapp, of Minnesota, and Poindeexter, of Washington; ex-United States Senator Beveridge, ex-Governor Stubbs of Kansas; Henry J. Allen, of Kansas; Representative Victor Murdock and Bainbridge Colby, of New York.

According to Newton A. K. Bugbee, chairman of the Republican State Committee, Mr. Stokes will carry at least 17 out of the 21 counties, and consequently Mr. Stokes is going to win handsily. Edward E. Grosscup, the Democratic State Chairman, says that Mr. Bugbee has his figures transposed and that Mr. Fielder will carry 17 out of the 21 counties. Axel Becker, the Progressive campaign manager, says that both Grosscup and Bugbee are "talking through their hats" and that Mr. Colby, the Progressive candidate, is going to nose through.

From a layman's point of view ex-Governor Stokes looks like a winner at this early date, with a majority somewhere between 20,000 and 30,000.

STORY OF "TREACHERY" MAKES HOBOS WAKE UP

'Outrageous,' They Shout, Then Fall Asleep Again, as Tale of Betrayal Unfolds.

Indignant protests arose yesterday at the Sunday meeting of the hoboes in the Brotherhood Welfare Association at the Manhattan Lyceum when a comrade told them that a socialist orator appointed a week or two ago to organize the migratory workers along new lines had confessed to him that he was ashamed of his mission.

The audience, which had been listening apathetically to what was going on, became aroused, and several hoboes were almost asleep at up and shouted "Outrageous!" For several minutes the weary auditors found it difficult to compose themselves to rest.

The occasion for the announcement, which was made by Benjamin Novak, representing a committee to find jobs for the hoboes, was the reading of a letter to Alexander Law, secretary of the hobo organization, from J. Eads How, its founder, in which he asked what progress the organizer was making.

"He is not doing anything or making any progress at all," interrupted Novak. "He told me the other day that he felt ashamed when he was among his friends for being identified with the hoboes. After this I will have nothing more to do with the organized socialists."

The protests against the organizer's inconsiderate conduct then arose, and continued in a sort of murmur, hoboes never hurrying in anything. It is expected that the organizer, who was promised a salary, will be asked to resign as quickly as possible.

Novak also asserted that when he went to the headquarters of a number of the unions in the American Federation of Labor to suggest mutual co-operation his reception was not encouraging. All the leaders decided that he must bring credentials before they could do anything.

When Novak began denouncing the police the hoboes became appreciative listeners. The police, he said, always made it a point to treat a hobo with scant courtesy and to push and jostle "hobo ladies and gentlemen" out of the way in a scandalous fashion when the latter went with the crowd to see anything that was happening in the streets.

Among those at the meeting was the Rev. Irwin Tucker, of the Church of St. Mark's in the Bowery, who reported on behalf of a committee of three appointed to arrange for winter quarters for the hoboes. He said that the members of the committee were to have met one day last week, but that he was the only one who kept the appointment. He wound up with a general address to the hoboes.

Delegates from two unions of tailors, whose organizations wanted to know what the Brotherhood Welfare Association was, were allowed the floor. They said they were sent to investigate matters before their unions took any action in the matter of co-operation, and were convinced that the association might do some good. They advised the association to send a committee to get credentials from the United Hebrew Trades. The meeting decided, however, to apply to President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor for general credentials, through which they could visit any A. F. of L. union.

Antagonism Between Autoists and Public, Due to Unfairness, Factor in Problem.

Albany, Oct. 19.—Declaring that the police had been far too lenient in their treatment of drunken chauffeurs and speed maniacs, who were responsible for the majority of serious highway accidents, and that apparently public indignation had not been sufficiently aroused against these pests, for whose continued existence there was absolutely no excuse, Mitchell May, Secretary of State, pointed out to-day one recent case in which a young child was run down on a much-travelled highway and instantly killed by a speed fiend who dashed along without stopping.

"This act was one little short of a willful murder," said Mr. May, "and while, of course, not intentional, nevertheless the perpetrator should have been placed in the same category of criminals as the burglar who enters a home in the dead of night armed and prepared to kill or maim if the emergency arises. The law provides imprisonment for a murderous burglar and should provide a similar stringent penalty for the speed fiend or intoxicated driver."

Secretary May said that there had to be considered those owners of automobiles, who, both daring and resourceful, simply could not control their aching for speed and who would never be entirely satisfied until they had drawn the last ounce of power out of their engine.

"The exhilarating effects of motor speed," continued Mr. May, "seem to cause loss of a sense of proportion, which under different circumstances would ordinarily enable persons to weigh their rights against others, and it is in this point of view, so insistently acquired, that makes the problem more difficult to solve, because the average motorist continues to sympathize with the more or less reprehensible offender, whom he should be first to condemn and whom he should make vigorous efforts to punish."

Mutual Antagonism. Secretary May declared that the antagonism between the autoists and the public, due to malicious prosecution, speed traps, road "hogs" and inexcusable carelessness of pedestrians, had only aggravated this problem, now defying successful control.

Knew Their Alphabet—Were Valued at $50,000. Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Bettina and Borneo, the orang-outangs which had been educated by Dr. William Henry Furness, of Wallingford, so that they would pronounce simple words, are dead.

By constant teaching Dr. Furness had hoped to demonstrate, through education, that the orang-outangs really were the "missing link," capable of sustaining thought and doing almost everything of which a human being is capable. Borneo was eight years old and Bettina was four, and both were as highly educated as children of the same age.

Each knew the alphabet perfectly and could pick it out on lettered blocks. Borneo also could pronounce such words as "Cup" and "Papa" and Dr. Furness declares that his orang-outangs were proving gradually that they were capable of human reasoning.

He valued the orang-outangs at $50,000.

Montclair Teacher Searches for Heirs of Men Who Just Picked Up Money.

Montclair, N. J., Oct. 19.—If you are a member of the Pasener family and are so situated that you don't know where your next plate of ham and eggs is coming from give ear.

J. Luria-Pardo, a teacher of languages of this place, is seeking the heirs of three brothers who have left, all told, $80,000,000.

Mr. Luria-Pardo says that a member of the family now in Germany has asked him to find all the heirs. Here is the reason:

Moritz Posener, or, as it is spelled in this country, Pasener, came here from Zerlow, Germany, fought in the Civil War, liked the country, sent for another brother and then returned to Germany.

The second brother went West and made $15,000,000. A third brother came here, sold supplies to the Union army in the Civil War and made $20,000,000. Then he went to London under an assumed name, and, so the story goes, deposited his entire fortune in the Bank of England.

A fourth brother went to South Africa, and, by tinkering around the diamond fields, was so cursed he could gather in only $45,000,000. Now they're all dead, and it is up to somebody to see that the money does not go to waste.

Three armed men robbed Charles Bredroth, of No. 126 South 1st street; Albert Wuencok, of No. 176 Mauler street, and August Young, of No. 181 Mauler street, Williamsburg, early yesterday morning at Bedford avenue and South 1st street, within two blocks of the Bedford avenue station. When Wuencok resisted he was shot by one of the robbers. Then followed a running fight between Patrolman Cummings and the three thieves, during which at least a dozen shots were exchanged. It culminated in the arrest of one man. The same three desperadoes are believed to have attacked another man in Williamsburg early yesterday, seriously stabbing him.

Bredroth, Wuencok and Young were on their way home, and had turned out of Bedford avenue into South 1st street, when the three robbers sprang from a dark doorway. With their revolvers threatened death if their victims raised an outcry. One of the robbers then pro-

TWO HELD AS SWINDLERS

Charles H. Lawrence and Henry Clark, who said they lived in the Belleclaire Apartments, were arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday, charged with being swindlers.
