

MID-JUNE BRIDAL COUPLES.

C. E. HUGHES, JR., WEDS MISS STUART

Ceremony in St. Saviour's Chapel Is Witnessed by Company of 125.

MISS EDISON BECOMES BRIDE OF J. E. SLOANE

Marriage Is Performed at Home of Inventor, in Orange—Miss Mary Sturges Married.

In St. Saviour's Chapel of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at noon yesterday Miss Marjory Bruce Stuart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clarence Stuart, was married to Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., son of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Charles E. Hughes and Mrs. Hughes.

The chapel was simply decorated with palms and Easter lilies. The Rev. Dr. John P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of about 125 relatives and intimate friends, and a reception and breakfast followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore soft white satin trimmed with duchess lace, and her tulle veil was held with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. She was graduated from Vassar College this month, and had five of her classmates as her attendants.

The bridesmaids were Miss Sylvia Crowell, of Montclair, N. J.; Miss Martha B. Strang, of Boston; Miss Audrey W. Thompson, of Portland, Me.; and Miss Marjory Woods, of Sewickley, Penn.

Miss Hughes was dressed in pink tulle and white lace, with a hat of pink straw trimmed with pink and white roses. The bridesmaids wore a lighter shade of pink tulle, with girdles of lilac satin, and their pink straw hats were trimmed with bows of turquoise blue velvet ribbon. They all carried bouquets of pink roses.

Lawrence C. Bennett, of New York, was best man, and the ushers were George Henderson, of Cumberland, Md.; Timothy N. Pfeiffer, Charles V. Graham and Newton G. Chase.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hughes will reside in this city.

Among those present at the ceremony were Justice and Mrs. Hughes, the Collector of Port and Mrs. Dudley Field Malone and George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General.

Miss Madeline Edison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Alva Edison, of Glenmont, Llewellyn Park, Orange, N. J., was married yesterday to John Eyre Sloane, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. O'Connor Sloane, of South Orange, N. J., at the home of the bride. The Rev. Dr. Brann, of New York, officiated.

The house was decorated with rare ferns and hanging baskets of orchids and roses. And old tapestry curtain formed a background across the end of the room where the ceremony was performed. This room was filled in with scarlet and flowering mimosa plants. On either side of the prie dieu was a tall silver candelstick.

The bridal couple used the kneeling cushion that was used by the bride's parents at their wedding.

The maids of honor were Miss Margaret Miller, of Akron, and Miss Rachel Miller, of New York, cousins of the bride, and the bridesmaids Miss Elmina Ambrose, Miss Carol Douglas and Miss Florence Walton, of Orange; Miss Marie Cozzens, of Montclair, and Miss Elsa Denison, of Denver.

The bride's gown was of cream-white chiffon velvet, the bodice being of the old rose-point and duchess lace used by her mother on her wedding dress. A wide piece of this lace also formed part of the train. She wore a veil of tulle edged with the same lace and trimmed with a narrow wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaids' gowns were of palest mauve tulle, the skirts being draped with turquoise blue tulle. They wore hats of blue tulle and carried shower bouquets of pansies. The maids of honor wore gowns similar to those worn by the bridesmaids. They wore leghorn hats and carried bouquets of yellow roses.

The bride's mother wore salmon pink chiffon having a girdele of tango color trimmed with ostrich feather tips tipped to match the gown. Her hat, a French creation of brown, was similarly trimmed. Charles O'Connor Sloane was his brother's best man.

After the ceremony there was a small reception on the lawn, during which refreshments were served at small tables. Mr. and Mrs. Sloane will live in New York.

Miss Mary Fuller Sturges, daughter of Frederick Sturges, of 26 Park ave., was married at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in the Chantry of Grace Church, to the Rev. Andrew Chalmers Wilson, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Brooklyn. About 100 relatives and intimate friends were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slatery.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was in a gown of lavender chiffon, with which she wore a lavender hat. She was unattended.

Dr. Paul M. Pileber, of Brooklyn, was best man, and the ushers were Charles W. Wilson and his bride took their marriage license on Tuesday at the Municipal Building.

Miss Harriet Totten, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Bleeker Totten, of 206 West 54th st., was married last night to Wilfred Mostyn Thompson, at St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church, at the Rev. Dr. John P. Peters. The church was decorated with flowers of the season, interwoven by daisy chains, while large palms filled the chancel.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin trimmed with duchess lace. The tulle veil was arranged in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Margaret Phelan, of Newark, was the maid of honor. Mrs. Lester R. Davis and Mrs. Wallace Gibson, sisters of the bride, were the matrons of honor, while the little Miss Ruth Davis, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. The bride was given away by her brother, Milton Totten.

REPLIES TO ATTACK ON CARNEGIE FUND

Foundation Secretary Says Denominational School Is Aided.

SECTARIAN COLLEGES GIVEN $20,000,000

Churchill's Statement as to Abstract Scholarship Aim Called Absurd.

Clyde Furst, secretary of the Carnegie Foundation, replied yesterday to the bitter arraignment of the work carried on by the Foundation, which President Churchill of the Board of Education made in an address at the Manhattan College commencement exercises Wednesday night. Andrew Carnegie is out of town.

Denying that the Foundation deliberately made a mark of the small religious college, Mr. Furst said: "The only reason for the provision that retiring pensions shall be paid only to teachers in institutions not under the control of a sect and not imposing any theological test as a condition of connection therewith is administrative expediency. It is impossible, or at least most difficult, to deal alone with a college owned or controlled by another organization. This Foundation cannot, for instance, deal with a national organization such as the Roman Catholic Church.

"The Carnegie Foundation has never objected to the small denominational college as such. It has most cordial relations with denominational institutions, such as the University of Chicago, Baptist, and the Catholic University of America, in Washington. We have recently given aid to a large denominational organization which desired to spend $5,000,000 on education."

Mr. Furst characterized Dr. Churchill's charge that the Foundation has striven for abstract scholarship as "absurd." He cited the vigorous criticism it has been subjected to for belittling the need of such scholarship in Vermont.

"There have been no other gifts to denominational institutions," he added, "which approach those made by Mr. Carnegie. He has given over $20,000,000 to such institutions in this country, including college buildings and libraries. His Church Peace Foundation of $2,000,000 included all denominations, the Roman Catholic being represented by Cardinal Gibbons as a director.

"The Foundation has no way of enforcing its will except by the spreading of information, nor does it desire to have educational institutions conform themselves to a common pattern.

"As for the pensions to retired professors, our aim is to be simply an object lesson in the pension system. Any college that wants to can start its own pension system at the cost of a building or two, and we will gladly help them make the plans. The new pension system of the Protestant Episcopal Church was planned in our office, and the church pension fund has taken over one of our men to run it.

"Criticism like Mr. Churchill's is not representative. The study of medical education was carried on in co-operation with the American Medical Association. The study of legal education was begun at the request of the American Bar Association. Urgent requests are coming in for advice and assistance, even from the small denominational colleges which are not admitted to our list of those participating in the benefits of our retiring allowance system."

Friday night will be Professional Women's League night at the Globe Theatre. The members of the organization will see Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter."

Hazel Dawn, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tout, her sister Eleanor and her brother Irving, will sail to-day on the Cedric for a short trip abroad. Miss Dawn will return early in August to rehearse for "The Debutante," the new musical comedy in which she is to star next season.

Miss Dazie will sail on the Cedric this morning, accompanied by her husband, Cornelius Fellows, Jr., to be gone until August.

Borough officials of Brooklyn will attend the opening of Marcus Loew's show at Ebbets Field Monday night as guests of Mr. Loew and Colonel Charles Ebbets.

Wednesday afternoon, June 24, will be Auld Lang Syne day at the Cort Theatre, where the film "Home, Sweet Home" will be shown. "The Escape," which is now running at the Cort, closes Sunday night. "Home, Sweet Home" opens Monday afternoon.

Arrangements are being made at the Globe Theatre which will lighten the hard work of rehearsals for all who are to appear in the new productions which Charles Dillingham will make next season. The dressing rooms will be used as rest rooms, in charge of a matron. Shower baths have been installed in the basement. The top floor has been fitted out for rehearsals of the ballet which will be one of the features of the new Montgomery and Stone production. The rose room of the Globe will be used as a dining room, and luncheon will be served there every day for all who are rehearsing.

BENNET BURLEIGH DIES IN ENGLAND

Dean of War Correspondents and American Civil War Veteran on Southern Side.

London, June 17.—Bennet Burleigh, oldest and most widely known of war correspondents, died to-day.

In 1862 he began the connection with "The Daily Telegraph" which lasted till his death. He followed for that year and all subsequent years down to the recent Balkan conflict. For many years he was able to visit his home on only rare occasions, owing to his constant service in the field.

At one time Bennet Burleigh went into politics and stood for a Scottish constituency. Outside of his newspaper writing he was the author of a number of books which were widely read.

With Bennet Burleigh disappears one of the last of the old-fashioned, hard-driving war correspondents of the British press, of the Russell-Burnaby-Forbes-Prior-Stevens type; one of the last but not the least so far as American interest in him is concerned. For Burleigh was well known here a generation ago, and a good many Americans were desirous of anticipating his demise by something like half a century. Twice he was sentenced to death here, but—as is obvious—he escaped execution of the sentence, and in time came to be regarded with friendly if not affectionate interest by his would-be slayers—a change of sentiment which he reciprocated.

Burleigh was born in Glasgow, Scotland, nearly seventy years ago, and in his boyhood came to the United States. His adventurous disposition inclined him to sympathize with the Confederacy, and so, early in the Civil War, he set out afoot from Washington toward Richmond. At Gordonsville he was arrested by the Confederates and taken to their capital, where he was imprisoned for a time in old Castle Thunder. Thomas Johnston, a member of a British firm in Richmond, presently secured his release, and as the latter did not resent his treatment, but, on the contrary, was eager to enter the service of the Confederacy, Mr. Johnston introduced him to Stephen R. Mallory, the Secretary of the Confederate navy, who, by the way, himself a Briton by birth, Mallory assigned him to torpedo service on the James River, and there he did some of the most daring and gallant work of the Confederate navy in the whole war. He planned and executed the capture of a Federal steamer in Chesapeake Bay, the flag of which is now in the Richmond Public Library, and he engaged in many of the most hazardous undertakings. Having contracted malarial fever, he returned to Richmond on sick leave for a few months, and there wrote much for "The Southern Illustrated News," and also appeared on the stage of the Richmond Theatre in O'Driscoll's play of "The Guerilla." On resuming the health he resumed active service, and while on a secret expedition within the Federal lines he was captured, sent to Johnson's Island and sentenced to death, but made his escape. He then joined the Canadian expedition under John Y. Beall and was in Canada when the war closed.

With soldiering done he turned his attention to newspaper work and came to New York. For some years he was a reporter on the staff of "The Titon Times," and reported for it the Titon trial. In 1873 he returned to Great Britain and attached himself to the staff of the Central News. His first important assignment was to report Wolsley's campaign in Egypt against Arabi, and he distinguished himself by beating all competitors in sending home the news of Tel-el-Kebir. At Tamal he fought as a soldier, as well as wrote. He was also sent with the belated expedition which vainly sought to relieve and rescue Gordon at Khartoum. Near Wady Halfa his boat was wrecked in the rapids and he narrowly escaped drowning. At Abu Klea he and Melton Prior saved the lives of many soldiers, and with Stewart's Desert column he joined in the fighting all the way to Metemneh, and was several times mentioned in official dispatches for valor.

Whenever possible Burleigh took his place in the fighting line, and thus, at the greatest risk to himself, picked up those individual details of battle which made his dispatches more than ordinarily smelt of powder, and dramatic. There were the sight of blood all through them. He wrote several books—"Two Campaigns," "The Empire of the East," etc. He was married and had five sons and three daughters.
