

LORD ROBERTS
HERO OF INDIAN
AND BURMA WARS

Took Part in the Relief of Lucknow in the Mutiny of 1857.

RETRIEVED BRITISH
TRANSVAAL LOSSES

Had Warned England of Her Unpreparedness for Present Struggle.

Despite his eighty-two years, Lord Roberts was more active than many a campaigner whose days were much less. The example of his sixty years of fighting has proved of wonderful assistance to England in the present crisis, and his supreme optimism, the belief that his successors would be on the winning side, has done much to alleviate fear at home.

"Suppose that Germany wins" a friend asked him. "I will not suppose anything of the sort," was the reply. "This never failing answer to any suggestion that the English arms would fail at this time was always intelligently returned to any one who dared to express doubt. This war has vindicated his foresight. For ten years he has been engaged in the preparation. His tours of the country are now recalled, his emphasis of weakness, deficiencies and the great necessity for a modified conscription system. England's military resources in India equal to the responsibilities imposed by the empire's political supremacy.

The year before he had been elevated to the peerage a harem, and he was made commander in chief of Ireland. Then came the appointment to South Africa in 1899. Efforts to put down the Boers had not been successful when the Kaiser came. For Lord Roberts to proceed to the command of Cape Colony, while the unfortunate Buller remained in Natal. The position of "Bobs" enlisted the sympathy of the press. His only son was mortally wounded at Colenso, and scarcely had the news been received in England than the grieving father was on his way to South Africa.

"Bobs" Becomes Popular Idol. Lady Smith was relieved. Then followed the advance on Kimberley. Relief came when the British at Paardeberg, where Cronje was defeated. Cronje surrendered on the anniversary of Majuba Hill. England was seething with joy and jubilation reigned at Pretoria, July 5. That was the end of all except guerrilla warfare.

The Boer war over, Lord Roberts became commander in chief of all the British armies, serving until his retirement.

Lord Roberts Gives His Life to Cheer Britons

ing that the Germans, although he praised them as soldiers, could not win. The news of the death of Lord Roberts came as an entire surprise to England. The veteran's devotion to the interests of the army, his hard work in this campaign and his good health had been the subject of comment since the beginning of the war. He was the most popular military figure in Great Britain and a national hero without rival in the affections of the people.

[By Cable to The Tribune.] Mexico City, Nov. 14.—The people of the capital were greatly pleased with the news of the order for the evacuation of Vera Cruz on November 15. The newspaper "El Pueblo" publishes the text of the note of Minister Cardoso of Brazil, in charge of United States interests, to the Foreign Office, containing a warning to Carranza.

Acting War Minister Pesqueira has declined the request of members of the diplomatic corps for legation guards. He said he saw no ground for such a request, but added that if it should become necessary he would readily accede.

Pesqueira showed a telegram from General Carranza stating: "Deny report of my intending to withdraw troops from the capital. On the contrary, I am getting together forces from the isthmus and the State of Vera Cruz to reinforce the garrison for the protection of the capital."

Acting Foreign Minister Favela telegraphed from Cordoba denouncing a statement which he says has been made by Carranza or of his agents to the effect that Carranza is preparing to abandon Carranza's homes when the American troops sail.

WILSON TIGHTENS
CANAL NEUTRALITY

Airships Forbidden to Descend or Rise in or Pass Over Zone.

USE OF WIRELESS
ALSO PROHIBITED

Strict Regulations Proclaimed for Belligerent Vessels in Territorial Waters.

Washington, Nov. 14.—President Wilson issued a proclamation to-day which tightened the regulations for the preservation of neutrality on the Panama Canal and in the Panama Canal Zone during the European war.

The proclamation extends its prohibitions to air craft of all kinds, of belligerent powers, which are forbidden to rise from or descend upon Canal Zone territory or "to pass through the air spaces above" the land or water of the zone. It also forbids the use of wireless telegraph by belligerent vessels within the zone jurisdiction, except on business in connection with the canal.

Belligerent powers are forbidden by the proclamation to embark or disembark troops, war munitions or warlike materials in the zone except through the waters of the Panama Canal. Belligerent vessels are not to remain in the Canal Zone territorial waters longer than twenty-four hours at a time, except in distress, and the oil required for the twenty-four hours between the departures of opposing belligerent ships is restricted.

Only in case of actual distress and to make a vessel seaworthy may the vessel be repaired in the zone, and such work must be done speedily under supervision of canal authorities. Except by special arrangement, there shall not be at any one time more than three war vessels of any one nation, including those of allies, in either territorial port or its adjacent territorial waters, or more than three such vessels at one time in all the territorial waters of the zone.

The proclamation defines a warship as a public armed vessel commanded by a duly commissioned government officer with a crew under regular naval discipline, the vessel being qualified by armament and personnel to take offensive action against the enemy's public or private ships. Except as to hospital ships, which are treated as neutral, all other vessels, belligerent or neutral, armed or not, that do not fall under this definition when it is employed by a belligerent power as a transport, fleet auxiliary or otherwise are prohibited.

The Logical
Place to Buy
Your Piano

After all is said and done the satisfactory purchase of a Piano resolves itself into a logical proposition.

If you build a house you get a reputable architect not a jack-of-all trades.

If your eye-sight is failing you seek a reputable oculist not a general practitioner.

And so the making, the selling and the expert knowledge of a Piano is a special business in itself.

Buying a so-called Piano is simple enough, perhaps, but at the same time to buy a service that is going to be permanently helpful to you cannot possibly be got from those who merely merchandise pianos of various unknown makes, no matter how honest the intention may be.

Sterling Piano

Co. the logical place to buy if you consider that we have been successful manufacturers for over 50 years?

That our Pianos and Player-pianos have an established value.

That the prices are known and the same to every one.

That there can be no chance of misrepresentation, no lack of knowledge about service, and that the real music giving qualities of your purchase are permanent.

There are lots of so-called cheap Pianos for sale but don't forget that there is no new way of making them better than they are. Honestly built pianos cost just as much to make now as they ever did.

We believe the Sterling Product is the most logical purchase that can be made to-day—that means in art value, price and permanent service. Ask any one who has one of our instruments.
