

WOMAN'S VARIED INTERESTS

LITTLE GIFTS FOR LITTLE PERSONS

AMONG new toys that have recently made their appearance is the washable dog. His head is formed of a small rubber ball and his body of felt and has bright bead eyes and may be had in either black or white. This dog is a clever woman's invention.

Another nursery delight is the gracie which is stuffed with cotton. He is made like the soft ninepins that have on them the faces of men of different nationalities and a weight in bottom to keep them upright. No matter how much he is pulled around by his long neck, there is nothing about him to be broken or to hurt the children.

Fascinating bibs for children are made of heavy linen, with a rabbit, cat or dog embroidered on them having pink, blue or green bead eyes that make them very realistic in appearance. Naturally youngsters adore them.

Little ribbon rose trimmed clasp pins for the baby's cap or bib come in two sizes and in both pink and blue.

Bridal lingerie bands of white satin ribbon shirred over elastic have drawn through the big bow or fancy rosette on top a bunch of artificial orange blossoms. In sets of six they make delightful engagement gifts from girl friends.

Linen embroidered napkin rings are very popular for the breakfast tray for children's use or for week-end guests.

Menu for a Child's Party

Chicken Bouillon, Croutons.
Chicken Croquettes, Peas.
Baked Asparagus.
Iced Rice Pudding, Ice Cream
with Maple Syrup and Nut Sauce.
Vegetable and Fruit Candies.

CHILDREN from eight to eleven or twelve years enjoy dancing at their afternoon parties, and it is a good idea to devote an hour to dancing, an hour to games and then refreshments. Or, if preferred, begin with the games and have the refreshments early enough to allow three or four dances afterward.

The invitations should be sent at least a week in advance, and, as most children of that age attend school, it is wise to arrange the party on Saturday, if possible.

Substitutes for "Donkey Party."

Pinning the tail on Mary's Lamb and sticking the chrysanthemum in the pot are newer versions of the Donkey game, but quite as much fun. A puzzle contest is great fun, especially for the boys, and a dozen good ones may be purchased in a box for a dollar. Prizes, of course, are given for those who solve them first. If preferred, a professional may be engaged to amuse the children.

For supper cover the table with a cloth of plain damask and place in the center a large glass plateau banked with smilax and ferns, and, on the surface of this apparent lake put little boats, ducks and tiny water fowls which may be found in the toy shops. If place cards are used pretty pink birds with cards in their mouths may be poised on the water glasses. Four birch bark canoes at the corners may be laden with the bonbons.

Dangerous Looking Wasps' Nest.

Beside each plate a tiny sack of sea-shell candies may be placed. Above the table a great big gray wasps' nest may be fastened, and, though it looks dangerous, it is really a "Jack Horner pie," and the gray ribbons protruding from it are attached to many interesting things inside the sombre casing.

Make the bouillon in the usual way and toast the croutons.

Salad Recipes

Shrimp and Tomato.

Take one pint of boiled shrimp, break into small pieces and marinate for one hour in French dressing, to which add the juice of an onion. Pare, slice thin and chill the tomatoes. When ready to serve drain the shrimp, lay a slice of the tomato on a lettuce leaf, cover with the shrimp, lay another slice on top and cover with mayonnaise. Garnish with olives.

Salmon and Asparagus.

Free from skin and bone one can of salmon, or have boiled one pound of fresh salmon if preferred. Flake it with a silver fork. Cut the tips from a bunch of boiled asparagus (the rest of the bunch may be used for creaming, baking or for soup), mix and dress with light mayonnaise in which one gherkin and a half dozen green celery leaves chopped fine are mixed. Garnish with olives and green pepper strips.

Cream Cheese with Macdoine Vegetables.

A tablespoon of finely chopped pimento, of green pepper and of olives is the right proportion for a ten-cent square of cream cheese. Moisten with a little French dressing and pack in after-dinner coffee cups. This makes a pretty-sized slice when turned out, and served.

It's Unfair--to the Cats--to Call Women "Catty," Demurs Authority on Felines

They Are as Faithful as Dogs, Affectionate and Docile, Miss Champion Contends.

CATS are coming into their own in this Occidental world. They are not being worshipped in the Eastern manner, but they are losing the stigma of comparison with human beings of unpleasant character.

"It's horribly unfair to call women cats--unfair to the cats, I mean," exclaimed Miss Ethel R. B. Champion, secretary of the Bide-a-Wee Home Association for Friendless Animals.

Miss Champion knows almost as much about cats as she does about women, and she speaks with humorous authority. Her cats at the recent New York cat show won nine firsts. She has about forty beautiful long-haired, pedigreed animals, all Persians and all silvers and oranges. She raises and breeds them, so she, if any one, should have an intimate acquaintance with the feline nature.

And she objects strenuously to the evil reputation that clings to this most cherished of household pets.

"I have no idea where the word derived its origin as to the nature of these gentle animals, for I have never known a faithless cat. They are affectionate, docile, and bite only in moments of extreme fright. I have never been really hurt by any cat, and I have judged numbers of them."

"Cats are just as faithful as dogs;

they are intelligent, and they are the cleanest pets known. People must have been thinking of the tiger when they ascribed horrible emotions to a cat. I have known very spiteful women, but I wouldn't call them catty."

Country Home for Cats.

The love Miss Champion has for animals is evinced by the care under which her own animals live. In the country they have two beautiful little homes. They have a competent keeper and lots of love. They have a doctor, and are not given too much milk, but enough good meat to keep them healthy.

They are never sent all over the country on exhibition, as are numbers of prize felines, for their mistress will never let them go where she cannot accompany them.

"I could never sell any that I exhibited at the show, because I love them all," said Miss Champion. "You have no idea how intimate and indispensable they become. Why, with thirty or forty cats, I soon learn to know them all, as individuals, as personalities. They learn to know us, too. A stranger disturbs them, sometimes pleasantly, if he has a soft and quiet, soothing manner and voice. But if he is harsh, and fusses about, or for any other reason psychically transmits antipathies to the cat, it will show its dislike of the person, just as, for no apparent reason other than instinct, a dog distrusts certain strangers. You see, they are really very intelligent creatures."

She Objects to Evil Repute Attaching to Woman's Cherished Household Pet.

"A Cat Calls Forth a Woman's Love, or Her Extreme Hatred, Disgust and Fear."

"Some Catteries Are Adorable Little Buildings."

"Faithful? I should say a cat is. I have known a man who trained his, a gorgeous white pet, to follow him all about the city. It would never run away, and it never was lost. That, of course, is a precarious thing to do. In the first place, it attracts great attention. And, then, cats are the most nervous animals that I know. The least sound startles them."

Cats Most Nervous Animals.

"You have seen the street cat, which wanders about, dodging from side to side. That cat has doubtless grown up in that fearsome atmosphere, but it never overcomes its nervous fear. It scampers, whirls and vanishes at a sound. That is why most cats could not be trusted to follow one in the city; they would run away from fright at the multitude of sounds around them. Most white cats are either wholly or partially deaf, so that makes it easier."

"Cattery" a Small Palace.

"Cattery" is an ugly name, is it not? But we do not think of them in such terms, nor would you think of that when you see the adorable little buildings that are made for them," said Miss Champion. "Why, some of them are literally palaces, with separate chambers for each furry person, large main chambers for receptions and play, gardens, with carefully laid out walks, and all the conveniences and luxuries that most persons are unaware enter at all into the life of the cat."

Helplessness Appeals to Women.

"A dog calls forth a man's love. A cat calls forth a woman's love, or her extreme hatred, disgust and fear," explained Miss Champion. "The dog is playful, philosophical, a good listener. The cat is tender, soft, must be treated with great consideration, and must be ever protected. A cat, because of its lack of virility, is beneath a man's admiration, generically speaking, but a woman loves its appealing, apparent helplessness."

"They may be taught tricks, too. Patch, an orange and blue kitten, comes up to my room and jumps on my bed. "There is one curious thing about a cat's tricks--they won't do a thing if they don't want to. You know, in vaudeville stunts, how dogs are forced to walk up ladders and do really terrific things. These a cat has never done. You cannot punish a cat into doing something. By kindness it can be taught many games, but you cannot whip a cat into antics. It's dignity rises, and it absolutely refuses. All the coercion in the world may be used; you may kill it, but it won't do it."

A Spider-Web Doily for the Tea Table

A large dance was given last night at the Elitz-Carlton for the benefit of the Big Sisters organization, to assist them in their work in the Children's Court. Many of the guests arrived from the opera, the theatre and from dinners given by some of the patronesses and others.

Among the hostesses were Mrs. Johnston Livingston, at her home, 167 East 78th st., who had among her guests Mayor and Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and by Miss Laura C. and Miss Mary C. Canfield, at the home of their mother, Mrs. F. Gray Griswold, 13 West 49th st. Mrs. Griswold was a guest at one of the other dinners given before the dances.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Miss Janet Alexander, Miss Mary Pyne, Frank Crowninshield, Chalmers Wood, Jr., and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth came on from Washington for the dance, and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw brought a party of young people from Boston.

The patronesses included Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Willard D. Edey, Margaret Warren, Katharine Oakman, Annie Gilbert, Mary Gilbert, Mildred Rice, Elise Rice, Anna Sturgis, Marie Rising, Prudence Sterry, Almy Gilford, Olivia Erdmann, Margaret H. Peabody, Priscilla Peabody, Marjorie Smylie, Wealthy Lewis, Ada Norfleet, Mable Verner and Helene Underwood. Others were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rutherford, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Edey, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Earle Hayward, Mrs. William Lowe Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Washburn, Dr. and Mrs. John F. Erdmann, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston Clarkson, Mr. and Mrs.

completed. On the next row the chain is of seven stitches, crocheted into the middle stitch of the previous row, and so on until there are five rows of loops of seven stitches each. Then add three rows of nine chain loops, three rows of eleven chain loops and three rows of thirteen chain loops, which completes the spider web.

The plate daily is made in the same manner, the piece of linen being half an inch wider in diameter.

The size of linen for the centerpiece may be taken from an ordinary round dinner plate. The web around the centerpiece is proportionately larger than that of the doilies. The first row of loops is of five stitches each, the next five rows are of seven stitches, increase the loops in size every three rows by two stitches each until the centerpiece is of the desired size.

MISS MARJORIE DODD A BRIDE

Marriage to Leonard Sullivan Takes Place in St. Thomas's Church--Miss Elsie Aldrich to Wed To-day.

Miss Marjorie Dodd, daughter of Mrs. Edward Menocal, was married to Leonard Sullivan, of this city, yesterday afternoon in St. Thomas's Church. The church was simply decorated with palms and Easter lilies. Bishop Leonard, of Ohio, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, performed the ceremony. Afterward a small reception was given at the Wyoming, the home of Mrs. Menocal.

The bride, who was given away by her stepfather, Edward Menocal, wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with old rose point lace and a veil of old point lace. She carried white bridal roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Elizabeth S. Sands, of Newport, was the maid of honor, and Miss Alice Y. Dickson, Miss H. Dorothy Cramp, Miss Margaret Kempt and Miss Marie C. Cozzens the bridesmaids. The attendants were dressed alike in pale pink satin, veiled with cream colored lace, and hats of amethyst velvet. Their bouquets were of Taft roses and white orchids.

Arthur B. Sullivan, of Allendale, N. J., was best man, and the ushers were Hugh J. Chisholm, David Dows, Walter C. McClure, F. Bailey Vanderhoeft, C. R. Stuart, Courtlandt P. Dixon, 2d, H. Dutton Noble, Jr., and Clarence Young, who took the place of George W. Vanderhoeft, who was kept away by illness. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan will live at the Wyoming.
