FORD WIRELESS TO CALL STRIKE IN WAR TRENCHES

Auto Maker, as Walking Delegate, Sure He'll Silence Guns Christmas.

SHIP NOT CHARTERED; OTHER DETAILS IN AIR

Expedition Based on Faith and Moral Suasion—Strike Breakers Not Feared.

A general strike on Christmas Day of the millions of fighting men in the trenches of Europe will be declared by wireless by Henry Ford. Should Mr. Ford be successful and the strike be similar to other strikes that have preceded it, the foremen of the soldiers, that is, the officers, will not go on strike, but will stick by their employers. So that there is a possibility of the European war being fought out by the officers of the warring nations. But it is not altogether improbable that walking delegates Ford may be prevented from achieving his object by the United States government. The quiet could be put on Mr. Ford or any other walking delegate who undertook to call such a strike without obtaining permission from the government by applying the provisions of section 5 of the United States Penal Code, as the Logan act is known in matter of fact law books.

Mr. Ford's bid for fame as the greatest strike maker in the world's history was learned through an announcement made yesterday by his secretary and spokesman, Louis P. Lochner.

Mr. Ford has no doubt of the success of the peace expedition, for it is founded on faith and moral suasion. It is a faith such as the world has hardly ever known before. Faith and moral suasion are the keystones of the peace expedition.

This, however, is the only part of the plan that is at all definite. Everything else is in the air. Just who will go to the trenches, to date, is not a prominent American invited who has accepted was John Wamaker. Last night Mr. Lochner said he was not quite certain that Mr. Ford would be in a better position to talk definitely after he had a conference with him on Monday in Philadelphia.

Wamaker Seeks Details. But that Mr. Wamaker is interested keenly you can judge from the fact that he wants to learn minutely details of the trip," said Mr. Lochner.

Mr. Ford has not chartered the Oscar II, as at first reported. Only the first and second cabins on the Scandinavian-American liner have been engaged. The third cabin will be occupied by ordinary passengers.

Mr. Lochner conceded that the Ford peace expedition might not be on land on Christmas Day, but nevertheless he has been determined to send a wireless message to the soldiers in the hundreds of miles of trenches ordering them out in their walking delegate style would reach them.

"What all that message be?" Mr. Lochner was asked.

"Out of the trenches on Christmas Day, never to return," was Mr. Lochner's description of the message.

Wireless Tower of Babel. The message is to be sent by a wireless of powerful range, and it will be in German, English, French, Russian, Serbian, Italian and in all the dialects known to any of those countries where a common language is spoken.

"And all the way over we will be sending wireless messages from the Oscar II," said Mr. Lochner.

Mr. Lochner was reminded that this would require a very powerful wireless and that consent from the United States government or from European governments would not be given for the fitting of such an outfit on the Oscar II.

"I don't think they will dare to silence our wireless," said Mr. Lochner.

Margaret Mary Roberts, the defective baby born Tuesday, may live two days or two weeks, according to physicians at the Babies' Hospital last night. There was no change in the child's condition yesterday, the hospital authorities denying that blood poisoning had set in. They pointed out that the chances for blood poisoning were great if the child did not receive proper attention, but added that it was being well cared for.

Cadets Score 14 Points to Nothing for the Midshipmen, While 43,000 Enjoy the Spectacle Made Sombre Once, but Full of Rattling Cheers and Some Color.

By GRANTLAND RICE. Elmer Oliphant, or Olmer Elephant, the Purdue Projectile, yesterday proved to President Wilson, Secretary Daniels and 43,000 others that our Navy has no defence against a torpedo even worthy the name. For, operating in a silver-tinted fog, over a field that was strictly neutral—half water and half land—Elmer Oliphant torpedoed the Navy craft in two vulnerable spots and left it sinking at the finish through the fog and the slime.

BILLY SUNDAY HERE IN 1917

Formal Invitation to Be Given Soon by Committee of Twelve. Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Billy Sunday will go to New York during the latter part of 1917, if his present plans do not miscarry. He promised to-day to conduct the campaign, but did not fix a date. This will be decided Tuesday, when a committee of twelve, representing the Committee of One Hundred in charge of the New York campaign, arrive formally to present the invitation.

OLIPHANT THE HERO

It was Oliphant who sent the Army cheering section into its first frenzy in the opening quarter. Coffin, of the Army, had just dispatched a long, floating punt through the fog to Craig, the Navy quarterback. The ball flipped from Craig's arms, and Redfield, the Army end, gathered it.

SECRET SERVICE MEN

Secret Service men, plainclothes men and uniformed policemen surrounded the party, but their lines were shattered by a gallant charge by a little army of newspaper photographers and movie camera men.

REAR GUARD

Rear Anafarta enemy battleships destroyed some machine guns of the enemy, as well as killed a great number of soldiers of the enemy who were sheltered near the landing place at Ari Burnu.

THE MURDERS

That the murders were not disclosed until to-night was due to the remoteness of the Weitzmann farmhouse. It is located in a lonely crossroad, a quarter of a mile back from the Cranbury turnpike.

THE PRESIDENT

With his fiancée, Mrs. Norman Galt, at his side, the President occupied a flag-draped box in the forefront of the Annapolis contingent during the first half of the game. As a Navy rooster he shared the disappointment of the blue-coated middies at his back when the Army made its first score and continued in the second.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

The Presidential party, distributed among four automobiles, arrived on the muddy battlefield shortly before 2 o'clock, the hour originally set for the beginning of the game. Passing through the center field, the machines rolled along the side lines and delivered their passengers at the box entrances.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

At that time the middies, fogbound on a teryhor, had not yet arrived, and the cadets did all the welcoming. Their cheers rolled across the field as the President escorted the future first lady to her seat.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

With the President and Mrs. Galt were Mrs. A. W. Howe, the Chief Executive's sister; Miss Margaret Wilson, his daughter; Mrs. A. H. Cochran and Miss Helen Woodrow Fones, his nieces; Dr. Cary T. Grayson, his physician; Miss Bertha Bolling, Mrs. Galt's sister, and Secretary Tumulty.

TURKS CAPTURE ALLIED LINES AT GALLIOLI

Penetrate Trenches and Destroy Gun Positions in Surprise Attack.

London, Nov. 27.—The capture of a large section of Allied trenches near Ari Burnu, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, as a result of a surprise attack by the Turks, is reported from Constantinople to-night.

Heavy losses are also reported to have been inflicted on the British and French troops, together with the destruction of some of their gun positions by the Turkish artillery.

For several days now, following the arrival of German munitions and heavy guns at Gallipoli by way of the Danube, the Turks have maintained a general offensive in the hope, it is believed, of preventing the withdrawal of Allied troops, as reported, from the Peninsula.

Most of these attacks have been repulsed by the British, and no report has yet been received in London regarding the successes claimed by the Turks to-night.

British warships and monitors were forced to come to the assistance of the hard-pressed troops in the Anafarta region, according to the Constantinople report, but their fire proved ineffectual. One monitor is declared to have been forced to retire as a result of the accurate fire of the Turkish artillery.

The French report on the Gallipoli operations, however, claims an advance in the center of the French front as the result of a successful sapping operation. No mention is made of the Turkish claims, except to confirm the activity of the artillery.

Large numbers of Turkish wounded are reported to have been transferred to Constantinople.

TURKISH OFFICIAL. The report as issued from Constantinople is as follows:

In the Dardanelles since November 24 there have been violent artillery fire and bomb fighting near Sedd-ul-Bahr.

Near Anafarta enemy battleships destroyed some machine guns of the enemy, as well as killed a great number of soldiers of the enemy who were sheltered near the landing place at Ari Burnu.

Near Anafarta a gun of large calibre which had been directed against our position at Kirech Tepe was put out of action. The gunners were killed.

FRENCH OFFICIAL. From Paris the following report has been received:

Expeditionary Corps of the Dardanelles, number 24 and 25 were characterized by activity on the part of our artillery, which succeeded in taking under its fire several Turkish guns of large calibre. An appreciable weakening of the fire of the enemy artillery resulted.

Wounded Turks in very large numbers have arrived recently at Constantinople.

A New Note Perhaps one reason why the tired business man used to be so tired was because his only way of telling whether a play was good or not was to see it for himself, and the search for a good one wore him out. But that was before Heywood Brown began to cover the theatre.

DROPS 10,000 FEET IN A PARACHUTE

British Aero Officer Wanted to Answer Official Query, and He Did.

London, Nov. 27.—Colonel Maitland, of the Royal Naval Air Service, is probably the most expert balloonist in Great Britain, has just made a daring parachute descent over London from a height of 10,000 feet.

The question recently has been discussed officially whether an airman could make a safe landing from a parachute at such an altitude. Maitland believed the idea was practicable, and it was just a question of some one trying.

So Maitland said: "Some one must do it. There is only one person I care to ask to do it. I shall make the attempt myself."

He went up in an aeroplane in a temperature of 12 degrees below the freezing point, despite the fact that he is well over forty. The parachute fell hundreds of feet before opening, and Maitland's hands were so chilled that at one time he believed he must let go. But he managed to hang on and landed just outside of London.

ALLIED TROOPS NOW 125,000

Greece Allows Use of Additional Ports to Land Men Now on Way.

London, Nov. 27.—London's cheerful view of the Greek situation has been succeeded by something in the nature of a reaction, and the prevailing opinion at the present time is that the press and public jumped too quickly to the agreeable conclusion that Greece would concede readily all the Allied demands.

Although all the forecasts and speculation regarding Greece's reply to the Entente Ministers' new note, embodying the detailed demands of their governments that Greece guarantee security and liberty of action to the Franco-British troops on Greek soil, continue to be optimistic, the latest information from Athens clearly indicates that Greece has not yet definitely abandoned the dilatory tactics which caused the Allies such uneasiness.

It is now reported from Athens that the Greek government probably will propose that military experts representing the Entente Powers shall be appointed to discuss with the Great General Staff the demands which it has heretofore been assumed were already satisfactorily answered.

The Bulgarian operations in the neighborhood of Monastir apparently have frustrated the hopes of a union of Serbian and Allied troops in Southern Serbia; hence the use of the railroads in Greek territory to effect such a union has become of the utmost importance.

Allies to Use More Greek Ports. Earl Kitchener, British Secretary for War, according to an Athens dispatch to the Milan "Corriere della Sera," obtained permission from the Greek government for Allied troops to land at Greek ports other than Salonica.

Athens reports that a new collective note has been sent to Greece by the Ministers of the Entente Allies outlining measures which it is desired Greece shall take in conformity with the preliminary agreement. A consultation between King Constantine and Premier Skouliodis and a Cabinet meeting followed the presentation.

The note was in response to the Greek government's request to the powers to indicate precisely their views respecting the desired greater freedom of movement for the troops of the Allies in Greek territory and the nature of the responsibilities which the Entente powers consider Greece's neutrality entails.

It is considered probable here that a solution will soon be reached based on the outlines of the agreement previously outlined, with unimportant modifications—that the Allies are to have liberty of action on Greek territory for their own security, and railway and traffic facilities, and that they are not to be disarmed should they be forced to retreat into Greece.

Early Reply Demanded. An Athens dispatch to "Lloyd's News" says that the note demanded a reply at the earliest possible moment. The interview of Premier Skouliodis with the King last an hour, after which the Cabinet Council discussed the various questions at issue for several hours, and held that several of the points formulated are acceptable to Greece. The situation, this dispatch adds, is regarded as grave.

Field Marshal Earl Kitchener's conferences with Italian military authorities in Rome and on the Italian front have resulted in strengthening the accord between Italy and her Allies, and have helped shape the plans for active assistance by Italy in the Entente campaign in the Balkans, a Rome dispatch says.

The Germans officially announce further progress beyond Pristina and Mitrovitz, and Central Serbia apparently is almost cleared of Serbian troops. But in the southern sector, in the neighborhood of Kriovitsa, the French are at least holding their own, if they have not gained a slight advantage in the series of attacks and counter attacks which have given the
