

The Ad-visor

Conducted by Samuel Hopkins Adams.

This department has entered the second stage of service to Tribune readers. Primarily it was intended merely to separate the sheep of advertising from the goats—and hang a bell on the goats. But now it goes beyond mere identification. It embraces a human nature study of both sheep and goats. You are invited to assist. For every letter printed in this department describing experiences—pleasant or unpleasant—with advertisers of merchandise, excepting only patent medicines, The Tribune will send $2.00 payable in any merchandise of any Tribune advertiser. For the most important letter each month a special prize of $50.00, payable similarly, will be awarded. Name printed or withheld—as you prefer, but must be signed or we will not know where to send the prize order. Address: The Ad-visor, The Tribune, New York.

In Peabody, Mass., twenty-one children were recently burned to death in a school fire in a Brooklyn factory about thirty men and women were burned to death or seriously injured. These calamities strike us full force, but to those who know the fact that 5,000 people are burned to death every year means much more than an occasional holocaust.

The Prevention Commissioner Charles W. Schuyler, of the State of Tennessee, an expert who indorses fire regulations with teeth in them, is appealing to the newspapers to help fire prevention by refusing to print dangerous advertisements.

Recently the Solvite Company has flooded the newspapers of the United States with advertisements which urge women to buy two ounces of Solvite, put it in two gallons of gasoline and use the compound for home dry cleaning. Elliott Middleton, manager of the Tennessee Inspection Bureau, says about Solvite: "The fire hazard attending an operation of this sort is one about which we have a great deal of knowledge, and I shudder to think of the innocent women who may be courting a horrible death by burning by following the scheme as advertised. It occurs to me that the newspapers need some additional education along the lines of conservation of life and property."

Commissioner Schuyler publicly appealed to the newspapers of the State of Tennessee, and other states that for humanity's sake they refuse to print such advertisements as the one mentioned above, and instead impress upon our people the great danger in the use of such volatile fluids within the home or elsewhere, except under the above precautions.

WIFE'S TEARS WIN PLOT CONFESSION

Never Met D. F. Mallory He Had Impersonated, Newark Prisoner Admits.

Weakened by the tears of his wife and two small children, William Rixon, who posed as Dwight F. Mallory, the Baltimore man believed to have been drowned in Chesapeake Bay, confessed to the Newark police yesterday that he and New York City had met and the imposture with the idea of getting money from Mallory's relatives.

Rixon, while admitting at first his part in the fake telephone messages which he admitted he had made a number of friends, insisted that a stranger had induced him with the promise of $10 to make the telephone calls. The stranger, he said, talked with the published pictures and description of Mr. Mallory.

Even the pleadings of detectives with the prisoner to relieve the suspense of Mallory's relatives by stating truthfully whether he believed he had met Mallory failed to shake Rixon. Then his wife and children were brought in. Mrs. Rixon, who declared she and the children were in straitened circumstances, wept. When Rixon saw this he broke down. He declared that a gunman named John E. Stone, who recently did an eleven months' term on Blackwell's Island under the name of Charles White, planned the scheme to mulct the relatives of Mallory.

With Stone, the prisoner said, he consulted the Baltimore directory in the New York Public Library and obtained enough information to enable him to make the Baltimore call to William Hoffman, treasurer of a concern with which Mallory was connected. The plan was that one of them was to represent himself as Mallory, telephone friends of the man and request that $500 be forwarded to pay for expenses and new clothing. The plan miscarried because Hoffman, who is a plumber, telephoned, referred the plotters to Charles J. Symington, a business associate of Mallory, who lives at Short Hills.

The pair tried the scheme on Symington, but because he insisted upon hurrying to the Holland House in Newark, where they represented Mallory was staying, it again failed. As he told his story Rixon hugged his wife and two children.

At first it was intended to accuse Rixon of conspiracy, but this was changed to a charge of attempting to obtain money under false pretenses. He will be arraigned this morning.

The Ad-visor's original comment, to which Mr. Wolf objected was as follows:

"The American Truth Society is engaged in the perfectly reputable project of stimulating and focusing pro-German sentiment in this country."

This opinion was derived from the publications and proceedings of the society itself; fairly direct evidence. When Mr. Wolf objected, stating that the society was stimulating not pro-German but pro-American sentiment, the Ad-visor, in the interest of peace and compromise, suggested as a substitute "pro-German-American sentiment," the innocent phrase which Mr. Wolf so readily with his shafts of derision. As for his charge about "lying newspapers," it did not occur to the Ad-visor that he expected anything more than silent sympathy. He must know, as a reader of his column, that "combating lying newspapers" (the quotation is from his description of the American Truth Society's purposes) is one of the chief activities of the Ad-visor. Here perhaps is an opportunity of co-chieftest activities of the Ad-visor's sins of drivelling flubdubbery, cheap wit, English obliquity of mind, obtuseness and ignorance of what true Americanism is. Contact with a spirit as moderate, judicial, and courteous as Mr. Wolf's is always a privilege.

As I have been a constant reader of The New York Tribune for the last five years and also a close follower of your column, "The Ad-visor," since it first came into existence, I take the liberty of sending this complaint. While it may appear slight to the casual observer, still it may be included as one of the things you have been endeavoring to remedy among advertisers for some time. For the best account of the game, see to-morrow's Tribune. Following these instructions, I read the account of the Yale-Princeton game, which undoubtedly the notice referred to, and I also read the ones published in "The Times" and "The Sun" of the same date. Contrary to the "Ad-visor's" account, I found the papers' accounts equally as good, and one of them, I think, better. Would it not be advisable, as long as you are trying to out-step this style of advertising among other people, to watch your own more closely?

Prophecy about an unaided egg is ticklish business. Just how The Tribune could confidently speak in advance that its account of the football game would be superior to all others is not clear to the "Ad-visor." Past performances, of however high a grade, are no guarantee. "Herbert" might have had an off day or Grantland Rice might have risen to those hitherto heights which The Tribune's experts habitually preempt. Furthermore, the "best" in writing is a matter of taste. Mr. Ramsey is as surely entitled to his view as are the many Tribune readers who wrote enthusiastic letters to this paper in praise of its Yale-Princeton game reports. In the Ad-visor's opinion Mr. Ramsey's criticism of the advertisement itself is justified. The unprovable superlative is best left to the sleek shope and the fraudulent patent medicines.

Last spring I bought a raincoat at Wanamaker's for a member of the family. Shortly afterward one of the pockets was either torn or ripped. I took the coat back to the salesman and explained the matter. Without a moment's hesitation, he gave me a new coat. In a very short while this coat began to leak at the shoulders. I took it back, and was given a third coat without any question. All through there was the utmost cheerfulness and courtesy displayed, the salesman saying that it was the store's one and only desire that its customers' satisfaction should be secured at all costs. I think this is an instance of honest merchandising that is worthy of record.

There are raincoats and raincoats. No concern can absolutely guarantee this kind of garment against imperfections. But, whereas this correspondent, had been bought at one of the fake rubber concerns, preying upon the name of reputable trade long Broadway, would still have been in possession of a damaged or leaky coat, by buying at a store with a reputation to conserve and the will to conserve it, he secured a practical guarantee which is worth all the loudly-heralded "bargains" on earth.

BLAST NOT A BOMB PLOT

Two Hart. But Commissioner Woods Is Not Imperturbed.

An explosion in the New York Die Works, 245 Centre Street, opposite police headquarters, at 5 o'clock last night, filled the streets with crowds attracted by a rumor that a bomb had been set off in the office of Commissioner Woods.

James Sergeant was forging a red hot steel die and Edward Harrison a fellow workman, was mixing paint on the die company's quarters on the fifth floor, when a spark from the metal flew into some wool alcohol. The explosion covered both men and James Vaughan, who was working beside them, with flames. From the Hudson Street Hospital, treated the men for burns about their faces and arms and severely injured Sergeant, who was severely burned, to the hospital, his condition being critical.

EVIDENCE SOUGHT IN NEGRO'S THROAT

U. S. Agents Peeped Down It When Seeking New Haven Papers, Witness Says.

The government's attorneys in the New Haven trial, prevented from putting in evidence regarding the Westchester deal, yesterday took up the New Haven's agreements with the Grand Trunk for the alleged purpose of suppressing competition.

The main points brought out by documents and testimony of Charles S. Mellen, who continued as a government witness, were that the Grand Trunk gave up the construction of competitive lines and that the New Haven gave traffic advantages to the Grand Trunk over its own lines equal to those which the rival company would have enjoyed if it had built parallel lines into New Haven territory.

Mr. Mellen amused the court by his story of how he bought what he termed a perpendicular farm at Starbridge, Mass., on which to spend his declining years.

The farm was located, he explained, in a gap that a railroad would want to put a line through if it were building into that territory, at the Grand Trunk later did. It is a fact, not produced in evidence, that Mellen later sold his perpendicular farm to the railroad for twice what he paid for it.

Much of the Grand Trunk matter brought out yesterday was fresh material, because at the time the New Haven was investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission hearings in Washington last year Mellen was under indictment for the Grand Trunk transactions, and was not forced to tell all he knew.

He told how he used $50,000 to get information in regard to the Grand Trunk when the fight between it and the New Haven began, prior to the amicable relations finally established. Among other things, he said, he learned that the Grand Trunk, a Canadian company, was subsidized by the Dominion government to extend its operations in the Canadian Northwest, and that this money was being used to promote its interests in New England.

He took steps, he said, to make these facts public, not only in New England, but in Canada, so that the people there would know what the company was doing.

BOHEMIA JAILS LEGISLATORS

Oxford Professor's Daughter Also Imprisoned, Uncensored News Reveals.

News from Bohemia, depicting conditions there, that escaped the censor, was given out here yesterday by Engelbert Schella, editor of the "New-Yorkische Bohemia" newspaper published in this city.

"Alice Masarykova, whose father is a professor at Oxford, has been thrown into jail in retaliation for her father's position," declared Schella. "Years ago he was a representative from Bohemia to the Austrian Reichstag. I have also learned that at present thirty-three members of that body are in jail because of their sympathies with the anti-war party."

The Bohemian press has suffered, the local editor said; Dr. John Herben, editor of "The Time," has been imprisoned because of the publication of anti-war matter.

NEEDLE-WORK ARTIST HELD

Six-footer's $1 Capital Detains Him at Ellis Island.

The largest needle-work artist in captivity arrived yesterday on the Zeacaps, of the United Fruit Company fleet. This handy person with the embroidery silks is a six-footer, a long-tender, a long-tender, a long-tender, and want having a good time at all.

He appeared on the passenger list as Charles Alonzo Genrov, of 180 Grand Avenue, Detroit, Mich. When the immigration inspectors found Genrov had only one dollar capital they recommended a visit to Ellis Island. Thereupon the six-footer went to Ellis Island.

"I don't want to go to Ellis Island," he said, "I don't want to come to America at all. Oh, don't make me go over there."

Genrov explained that he had made his living for the last few years by teaching art needlework in South American towns, but had been forced to leave and was now on his way to visit relatives in Detroit. Despite his tearful appeals, he will be detained on Ellis Island until he can prove his citizenship.

Music in Home She Will Live.

Anna Krauss, eighteen, who attempted suicide last week because her brother took away her photograph, was discharged yesterday by Magistrate Cobb in the Morrisania Court. As a piano has been installed in the Krauss household, at 851 East 138d Street, Anna was sure she cared to live, so the court agreed to free her, subject to his papers in his New Haven office for the Interstate Commerce Commission, he said that "they even looked down my colored man's throat. Asked if that was Johnson, the negro who testified earlier in this trial, Mellen replied: "Oh, no. This one I mentioned died shortly afterward—scared to death, I guess."
