

The Conning Tower

VAIN WORDS.

O, we think it would be great
Could we spring "enclenche."

"Not since the big blizzard of 1888 has the electric system of the New Haven road been tied up as it is to-day," wired The Tribune's Greenwich correspondent Wednesday. Those who recall details of that blizzard assure us that the storm that year so disrupted the N. H.'s electric system that it was at least fifteen years getting started again. "The subway service," notes P. S. H., "also was noticeably had during the 1888 bliz."

IT'S A CHOP-HOUSE, IF THAT'S WHAT YOU MEAN.

Sir: Can't a naturally-and-savily-funny paragraph be squeezed out of the fact that the Conning Tower is to be at Kenzie?

Sir: Whom do I wish to sit next to at the Conning Tower? I'd like to sit next to that leucophaea who rides on the train with what's-his-name. She must know a lot of words. If the conversation dragged a bit, she could start in at A and go as far as she had time. That and the speeches would be interesting.

In answer to dozens of inquiries, we beg to submit that the Conning Tower is in charge of A. R. F., who may be addressed in care of this department. We are tired of opening his mail.

AND TOUCHING AT HARDANGER FJORD AND CARLSTADT?

Sir: Pardon the belated inspiration, but the logical initial stopping place for the Ford Peace Expedition was Flivverpool.

How is it that out of six million people in this metropolis, it should only occur to me that the logical landing place of Henry's new vehicle should be Flivverpool?

TEXT OF TENANTS' NOTE TO JANITOR

Please call upon the Janitor of Domestic Affairs and ask him to deliver a note to the Elevator Boy, textually as follows: "After a period enduring more than eleven months of mendacity, some of it malicious, most of it merely stupid and careless, your employer's representative to wit: An Elevator Boy, uttered the following remark in the presence of witnesses whose strict truthfulness is such that a doubt upon it would lead to a severing of relations diplomatic and commercial between your government and the interests herein represented: 'This is a fine day, sir.'"

"The day in question, as reports issued by a weather bureau whose work in the behalves of truth and humanity never has been aspersed, was one of incessant rain, mist and snow. The only thing fine about it was the rain in the morning, which descended in drops smaller than is usual; but the history of international law and the annals of tenantry disclose no such connotation of the word 'fine' as applied to weather."

"As, then, the day was far from fine, one interpretation can be placed upon the remark: A desire on the part of the assailant to incur the good graces of the tenant, with a view to having the tenant endow the assailant with a gratuity at or near Christmas Day, December 25."

"The assailant's previous acts having been deliberately unfriendly, such as neglect to receive and give messages, to answer promptly the elevator bell and to purloin the tenant's newspapers, a complete and utter disavowal hereby is demanded. Failure to accede to the reasonable demands of the note will bring about hostilities unpleasant as they will be unnecessary."

Isn't "But" Omitted between "Club" and "The"? (From the Advertiser, published by Taylor-Crichfield, Chicago.) H. H. Hershey, business and advertising manager of the Peruna Company, has been elected president of the Columbus, Ohio, Advertising Club. The scope of the club, as outlined by the new officers, will be to promote legitimate and truthful advertising.

Mrs. L. B. Sutton, as the whimsical sweetheart, and Mrs. E. T. Wilkins, as her girlhood friend, deserve especial mention for the delightful manner in which the little drama was happily solved, by the reuniting of the recalcitrant lovers who have had a misunderstanding over the affections of a dog belonging to her sweetheart, which part was played with merit and understanding by Mr. H. Chalmers Stuart and Mr. Morris E. Smith as his faithful friend, with a great deal of satisfaction to the audience, aided in the happy ending of the play.—Swarthmore, Pa., News.

What G. M. can't learn, from a careful reading of the preceding, is who played the dog.

What Good Counsel Will Do. Sir: Your advice to a young man to write what he himself enjoys reading is gratefully received. I enjoy reading my contributions in the Tower. Again I thank you.

It's a Small World, Isn't It? (From the Farmington (Me.) Chronicle.)

F. P. Adams cordially invites you to attend an Edison Concert at the show room of the Franklin Light & Power Co., the Saturday afternoons and evenings of December 11th and 18th.

After five days return to F. P. Adams, manufacturer and dealer in black barrel staves, heading and hoop iron, Bluffton, Indiana.

The Diary of Our Own Samuel Pepys. December 16.—Came to my office a lad from L. Robertson's, bearing a fine leather wallet, from L., which was a graceful thing for him to do, forasmuch as I did but mention in his presence my lack of one. Home to dinner, and found Mistress Lura Fitch there, and went with her to the play house to see "Hobson's Choice," which I did enjoy greatly, in especial the fine playacting of Mr. A. G. Andrews.

Up by times, and to the office, where at work till W. Eaton comes for luncheon and he took only a salad of endives and a cup of tea, which it rejoiced me to pay for and I bade him come again. To the office to work, which I did do after C. Edson and E. Kirchnerberger and Mistress D. Barnes did leave, albeit none of them stopped for long. Home to dinner, where I found C. Beck, very cheery and merry.

Up, and to the city, walking here and there, and venturing in shops to buy gifts for a friend or two, against the Yuletide. E. Benchley to see me, and tells me he is to come to work on our Yuletide, which rejoiced me greatly. My Lord Woodrow wedded last night to Mistress Edith Galt.

LOCAL NEWS. Last night at the home of the bride Mrs. Edith G. Galt, one of the reigning belles of the nat'l capital, was united in marriage to Thos. W. Wilson of Staunton, Va. The bride looked charmingly in a gown of all over white and carried a shower bouquet of flowers, the gift of the groom, who is a Princeton man, class of 1879, and is employed by the U. S. gov't. Their many friends wish the pair, who left on a honeymoon for Southern pts., the happiness they so richly merit. The groom wore the conventional black and white.

The Lafayette Fund, which is sending comfort kits to French soldiers, received contributions of $118 yesterday, making a total of $66,610.73. The Armenian Relief Fund has recently acknowledged gifts amounting to $1,467.03.

OBITUARY. JOHN HEMON.

(By Telegram to The Tribune.) Passaic, N. J., Dec. 18.—John Hemon, pioneer coal dealer and a wealthy resident of this city, died this morning at Saranac Lake, where he went to regain his health. He was seventy-eight years of age.

Born in the Ramapo Valley, New Jersey, the son of a farmer, Mr. Hemon, after his marriage, in 1874, purchased the coal business of the late Aaron Millington, father of Mrs. Hemon, and organized the Hemon Coal and Grain Company, which he operated until his death. Mr. Hemon was a member of the North Reformed Church, the Masons and the Passaic City City Gun and Acquaetank clubs. He cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln.

CHARLES HEBER DICKERMAN. Charles Heber Dickerman, seventy-two years old, president of the First National Bank of Milton, Penn., died at his home, in Milton, on Friday, Mr. Dickerman, who was born in Harford, Penn., first engaged in the coal business in the Harleton region. In 1881 he moved to Milton, where he was treasurer of the Milton Car Works. In 1890 he entered the banking business. He was a Democrat and was a representative in the 64th Congress. His wife died in 1904. Surviving Mr. Dickerman are four children—William C. Dickerman, vice-president of the American Car and Foundry Company; Mrs. H. H. Williams, of Plainfield, N. J.; Mrs. Guido C. Vogel, of Milwaukee, and Mrs. George W. Fletcher, of Philadelphia.

COMMUNITY TREE TO SHELTER PLAY

Christmas Fantasy To Be Enacted in Madison Square Park.

PANTOMIME STORY IS KEPT A SECRET

Hymns by Great Chorus To Be Feature of Yuletide Entertainment in the Open.

Father and Mother Knickerbocker and all the little 'bockers, friends and neighbors are invited to a theatre party on Christmas night at Madison Square. With the illumination of the community "Tree of Light," which has come to be a Yuletide institution, the Portmanteau Theatre folk will don costumes to enact a pretty fantasy by Stuart Walker, written for the occasion. The curtain will be drawn at 5:30 o'clock.

First on the programme, after an opening salute of trumpets, will be a great chorus which will sing Christmas hymns. Then the lights will twinkle "Merry Christmas" to the throng in the square. On a stage forty feet long, placed in the open space around a fountain, the players will give their fantasy. It will be a Christmas fantasy, but the details of the story to be told in pantomime will be kept secret until the opening hours.

The chorus will be led by Victor Harris. Members of the St. Cecilia Society, Oratorio, Schola Cantorum and the Singers' Club will make up a large part of the ranks, but any who wish to sing the "Peace Hymn." This will be followed by some of his Indian songs. Gustave d'Aquin is to be the bandmaster.

Since the first "Tree of Light" in Madison Square, several years ago, many other communities have been interested, and this year similar trees will be lighted at the same time in other cities. Inquiries regarding the tree have come to the committee from all parts of the United States and Canada. A "Tree of Light" on a motor truck, starting at West Sixty-third Street near the North River, will tour the neighborhood. A negro chorus will gather at the foot of the tree and sing Christmas carols and love songs. No Columbia man made the board this year. However, there are two more men to be elected after midyear marks are reported and Columbia may tie with Yale this year.

MUSICAL AND LUNCHEON

Mrs. A. G. Learned Adds Vegetarian Menu to Art Programme.

Mrs. A. G. Learned, of 36 Gramercy Park, gave a musical and vegetarian luncheon yesterday at her home for Miss Gertrude Atherton, Miss Jessica Lozier Payne, Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, Jr., Mrs. Marion Cox, Mrs. Henry Seligman and Mrs. Benjamin Prince, president of the Sorosis Clubs of Canada. The artists included Miss Mildred Dilling, harpist; Miss Eleanor Shaw, pianist; Miss Pauline Hall Graves, soprano, and Hugh Allen, baritone.

The guests at the musical were R. B. Hawley, Colonel Tarnoff of Cuba; Charles Keeler, Miss Belle Green, Miss Ethel Bret Hart, Miss Emma Thursty, Mrs. Ponsonby Ogil, Miss Cora Moore, Mme. Bell-Ranske, L. L. Lewis, Dr. and Mrs. Simon Baruch, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Rockhill, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Redman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wald Trine, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Post, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Whitmarsh and Mr. and Mrs. William B. Kennedy.

MUSIC FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Second Symphony Concert, Assisted by Cathedral Choir.

The second of the Symphony Concerts for Young People, held yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, drew a large and interested audience of all ages. The orchestra of the Symphony Society, under the direction of Walter Damrosch, was assisted by the choir of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Niles Farrow conductor, in a programme of Christmas music. The choir is exceedingly well trained, and in the "Adeste Fideles" in the old Alsatian carol, "Sleep, Little Dove," in Gounod's "Naxos" and in Adam's "O Holy Night" it won golden opinions from all. It was sure in attack, firm in volume of tone, and was controlled with exquisite justness by the conductor.

The Haydn "Surprise" symphony was given by the orchestra. The concert was, all in all, one of the most delightful offerings given in this series of recent years. At Aeolian Hall there was during the afternoon a recital by three artists: Diana Lister, pianist; Mary Zentgraf, violinist; and Morton Adkins, baritone. An audience of very good size attended.

The programme included the Beethoven Romance in D major and the Vieuxtemps Concerto in D minor, played by Miss Zentgraf; piano numbers by Blumenfeld, Scriabine and Brahms, including the latter composer's Ballade in G minor, played by I. Lane Lavioie-Herz, and songs by Schumann, Novacek, Woodman, Parker and Hammond, sung by Morton Adkins.

YALE LEADS AT COLUMBIA

Has Plurality of One in 15 Years of "Law Review" Representation.

Yale has nosed out Columbia in the race for representation in the board of Columbia's "Law Review." Having won the last fifteen years thirty-six former Yale men have made the "Review," while thirty-five Columbia men have been appointed.

Princeton comes next with twenty-two, and Harvard close behind, with twenty-one. After that there is a big gap with Amherst and C. C. N. Y. tied with twelve men each. Other colleges have contributed men as follows: Williams, 10; University of Georgia, 9; Leland Stanford and Cornell, each 8; Hamilton, 4; Oberlin, 3; University of Nebraska, 2; Kenyon, South Knox, Utah, Indiana, Colgate, Wellesley, Alleghany, Whitman, Rutgers, Georgetown, each 2. Then come Seton Hall, Vanderbilt, Dowd, Haverford, Richmond, University of Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Washington, William Jewell, Emory, Kansas, Ripon, Dickinson, McGill, Whitworth, Baylor, Rensselaer, Missouri, Pomona, Minnesota, Lafayette, Dartmouth, Illinois, Vermont, Simpson, Sacred Heart, Ohio, Wesleyan, Notre Dame, Denison and Wyoming with one man each.

No Columbia man made the board this year. However, there are two more men to be elected after midyear marks are reported and Columbia may tie with Yale this year. Columbia is represented on the board by two men elected last year—G. Forrest Butterworth, Jr., 13, and Duane R. Dills, 14. These men are seniors in law school and unless a Columbia man makes the board at midyear there is danger that next year's board will not have a Columbia man on it.

The following men were recently elected: D. D. Robinson, Colgate; E. I. Devlin, Georgetown; Harry Rotkowitz, C. C. N. Y.; Walter J. Wolf, Princeton, and Seth V. Eiting, Cornell.

The officers this year are H. G. Hochstetler, editor in chief; Williams; Owen C. McLain, business manager; Alleghany; P. W. McQuillan, secretary; Georgetown; M. N. Gates, assistant manager; Williams; G. F. Butterworth, Columbia book review; H. H. Freeman and V. H. Hatch, recent decisions editors, from Georgia and Harvard, respectively.

ARTS AT TEACHERS COLLEGE

Demand for Vocational Supervisors Taxes Facilities for Supply.

To meet the large demand for supervisors, directors of vocational and industrial education, the trustees of Teachers College plan a reorganization of the Department of Industrial Arts. To make room for the new work two of the shops that have been devoted exclusively to advanced technical work will be discontinued.

With the largest enrolment in industrial arts in the history of the college, the proportion of students requiring advanced work in woodwork and metal-work is the smallest. The shopwork of these students has been
