is a man—a man with personal force and energy enough to keep the peace by commanding the respect of the civilized world. I have been an admirer of ex-President Fairbanks, but his nomination being impossible, leaves my choice between Hughes and Roosevelt. For this hour I greatly prefer Roosevelt.

Mr. Egan assured the Colonel of his support. The importance of this support rests in the fact that as an Irish leader and former president of the Irish National Labor League, Mr. Egan has taken up the cudgels for Mr. Roosevelt, it is understood, because he represents the attempt to make the Irish vote a hyphenated one.

Chancellor Day's telegram read: "I am not advocating any one for the Presidency. It is not necessary to say that I have been disappointed in Mr. Wilson. Not since Buchanan have we had a man so utterly unsatisfactory. A man like Mr. Roosevelt would have saved us from humiliation in both Mexico and Europe. There was a time when I was opposed to Mr. Roosevelt for obvious reasons. The whole country has a saner view upon those issues now, and the Colonel with the rest.
