

APPEALING AS GOVERNOR TO THE VOTERS FOR SUPPORT OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION BILL—The Legislature and the bosses of New York fought Governor Hughes's bill for the creation of the Public Service Commission. He told the people about it at the county fairs. The bosses and the Legislature heard the voice of the voters and the bill was passed.

Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States, as he looked in various stages of his career.

©Photos Brown Brothers

THE HUGHES SMILE WHEN HE WAS FIGHTING THE GAMBLING INTERESTS—The New York gamblers and Legislature fought Governor Hughes on his anti-gambling race track bills. He went to the voters for support and spoke at meetings throughout New York State. Result—the bills became law.

Charles E. Hughes at the age of eight. He was through his public school course at eleven and had to defer entrance to college on account of his youth.

The mother of Charles E. Hughes. She was Mary Catherine Connelly and came from Irish stock.

The father of Charles E. Hughes, the Rev. Dr. Daniel Charles Hughes. He was a Welshman and a Baptist minister.

Charles E. Hughes at the age of 19. This is his class picture when he was graduated from Brown University in 1881 with high honors.

The house at Glens Falls, New York, in which Charles E. Hughes was born on April 11, 1862.

Charles E. Hughes at the age of 14 when he entered Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., where he remained for two years.

Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, jr., and Charles E. Hughes, IIIrd. Charles E. Hughes, jr., is a Plattsburg training camp "rookie." ©Mishkin from Medem Photo Service.

CHARLES E. HUGHES, THE INSURANCE INVESTIGATOR—This photograph was taken in the library of his home in West End Avenue, New York, while he was acting as counsel for the Insurance Investigating Commission in 1905. All the world knows that he revolutionized the conduct of life insurance business in New York.

Charles E. Hughes at the age of three years.