BREMEN SAFE, SAYS CONFIDANT OF STARS

Hoboken Prophet Expects Second Submarine Trader To-Day.

The Bremen, Germany's second submarine merchantman, is safe. The stars have said so, and Gustave Meyer, of Hoboken, their confidant, let go the secret last night. The Deutschland is to reach Germany safely, too. The Bremen will get in to-day, and just in time, too, for the stars told the astrologer that the weather man was going to begin to cut up to-day.

"Big storms, cold wave and very peculiar atmospheric disturbances over land and sea will occur on July 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30," said the stars to Gustave.

Concerning the fogs lately, "The Nation's Counselor" has got a lot of information from his familiars. In a paragraph marked "N. B." in yesterday's bulletin, was some advice for Republicans from which the inference might be drawn that the intimate of the stars thinks Hughes will be elected. It is as follows:

"Will say that I think a very good Republican campaign slogan for our coming President would be 'Hughes, Hughes; he can't lose.'"

BRITISH CRUISER PROWL UNDER GUNS OF MONROE

Submarine Hunter Makes Run Inside the Virginia Capes.

ANSWERS SIGNALS FROM U. S. WARSHIP

Washington Officials See No Violation by Trip Within Three-Mile Limit.

Norfolk, Va., July 25.—Pilotless and without warning to United States officials, one of the British cruisers lying off Cape Henry awaiting the appearance of the German submarines Deutschland and Bremen steamed through the Virginia capes early to-day, proceeded to the vicinity of Fortress Monroe, cruised about for an hour or more, and then returned to a point just outside the three-mile limit. The United States warship Louisiana and the collier Neptune were the only government vessels which sighted the ship. A detailed report of the incident was made to Washington to-night by naval officers. Authorities here said that while the entrance to American waters without warning was very unusual, they could see in it no violation of international law or navigation regulations.

The cruiser was of the type of the Berwick. She was said to carry twenty-six guns, ranging from three-inch to six-pounders, and eighteen-inch torpedo tubes. The Louisiana was proceeding up the bay, and was preparing to anchor off Lynn Haven Roads when the unidentified ship almost alongside was noticed. The mysterious cruiser put out man-of-war lights, and upon being pressed for her identity, signalled "British cruiser" through the darkness.

Soon after the warship moved on up the bay. According to reports the ship steamed to a point half way between Thimble Shoals and Fortress Monroe, or about fifteen miles from the entrance to the capes. It is thought she remained about two hours before putting to sea.

Apparently the commander of the cruiser was satisfied with his investigation of the lower Chesapeake for to-day. The Allied warships drove further away from the shore than they have for many days.

Washington, July 25.—Officials here were inclined to believe to-night that the British cruiser which made an incursion into Hampton Roads early to-day had acted wholly within her rights under international law.

A warship of a belligerent nation may enter the territorial waters of a neutral with impunity, it was said, provided she conforms to navigation laws and does not remain more than twenty-four hours. She could not, however, repeat the entry. Should she come again, or remain more than twenty-four hours, she would be liable to internment unless urgent need for repairs or supplies was shown.

Although the United States government is taking all legal steps to prevent the Deutschland being handicapped in her departure, it generally is supposed that the Allied patrol off the capes has means of keeping informed up to the time of her sailing.

U-Liner's Light a Beacon to Spies

[From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.]

"On Board Tribune Launch, Patapsco River, Baltimore, July 25.—If the purpose of the resourceful little captain of the Deutschland is to wear out the fleet of enemy boats that hopes to send him and his craft to the bottom of the Atlantic by an excess of watchful waiting it seems that he is in a fair way to succeed.

Drawn from their several hiding places about the murky inlets of the Patapsco River by the sudden movements aboard the great submarine last night, scores of eyes to-night are glued to the one green light that marks the position of the undersea boat behind its barricade of barges and boxes. The eyes have watched this spot for more than twenty-four hours, now, and nobody knows whether the moment for action will come within half an hour or a week.

It is evident that the crew of the Deutschland has everything in readiness for the dash to open waters and the lunged for protection of a smooth ocean bottom. The tug Thomas Timmins has moved over where it is in a position to carry out the threat to ram any craft that gets in the path of its charge after that boat gets in motion.

Submarine Ready to Depart. Smoke from her funnels and the occasional spurt of blue gray vapor from the exhausts of the Deutschland prove that her engine is keeping a close watch on the mechanical parts.

All of last night the nose of the submarine protruded mockingly from an opening in the burlap hangings between the barricading barges, and all night it succeeded in keeping the crews of several boats, whose masters are concealing their identity, in states verging on nervous prostration. That the German sailors welcomed the respite of at least one day—possibly more—from the task of plunging into the unknown perils of Chesapeake Bay was evident from their rejoicing to-day. Instead of the nervous irritability that was so evident yesterday, the sailors smiled and seemed almost cheerful to-day.

The harbor looks mighty good this morning even if it is foggy and drizzling, said one of the Deutschland's crew as he gazed at the uninspiring picture presented by the Patapsco. "I had an idea last night that we might never see it again."

He did not finish the sentence, but it was evident that he referred to the thought that is uppermost in the minds of all his associates—that the plunge into the open waters beyond the Capes Henry and Charles may be the last of the Deutschland and its daring crew.

Bernstorff Due To-day?

During the afternoon several visitors who had been of the fortunate few now permitted to go beyond the barriers surrounding the submarine casually announced that Ambassador von Bernstorff probably would dine with Captain Paul Koenig and his officers to-morrow.

The remarks were so obviously casual, and bits of information from the interior of the barrier are so few and far between, that it is generally believed they must have been let drop for a purpose. Those who are presumptuous enough to endeavor to guess what is passing in the mind of the resourceful master of the Deutschland assert that this announcement can serve no other purpose than to throw watchers off the trail and cover a sudden departure of the boat to-night.

BRITAIN HOLDS UP $50,000 FOR IRISH

Kelly, Treasurer of Relief Fund, Detained on Steamer.

TO BE SENT BACK TO UNITED STATES

London Says Money Must Be Sent to Revolt Victims Through Other Channels.

London, July 25.—Thomas H. Kelly, of New York, treasurer of the Irish Relief Fund, and his wife and his assistant, Joseph Smith, were refused permission to-day to land in England from the American liner Philadelphia and to cross England to take a Dutch steamer back to the United States from Falmouth.

The American Embassy, to which Mr. Kelly protested, was informed by the British Foreign Office that the Kelly party must return to the United States by the American Line steamship Philadelphia, on which vessel they arrived at Liverpool yesterday. Under no circumstances, officials of the Home Office said, would the party be permitted to land in the United Kingdom.

No definite reason is given by the authorities for their refusal to permit the landing of Messrs. Kelly and Smith, except that their presence here is not approved of.

On July 18 the Messrs. Gill and Murphy, of the Irish Relief Fund, arrived in England and were allowed to proceed to Ireland.

There is no disposition on the part of the government to hold up funds contributed by persons in the United States for relief in Ireland, but certain individuals will not be permitted to enter Ireland.

Kelly was en route to Dublin with $50,000, the second instalment of a $75,000 fund raised in this country for Irish sufferers in the recent revolt. His wife was Emerance A. de Sallier du Pin, of Watertown, N. Y. Smith is a journalist and lecturer, of Lowell, Mass.

George J. Gillespie, chairman of the executive committee of the Irish Relief Fund, when informed of Kelly's predicament, at once communicated with the State Department. He said he was informed that action would be immediate.

Gillespie said he could not understand the action of the British authorities. Kelly had a personal letter from Secretary Lansing, introducing them to Ambassador Page.

"Their passports," said Gillespie, "were obtained through my efforts, and I assure you their mission to Ireland was none other than the relief of the Irish sufferers in the country are honorary vice-presidents.

ASQUITH FACING ARMY OF CRITICS

Men of All Parties Denounce Failure of Home Rule Compromise.

PREMIER CONFERS WITH KING GEORGE

Still a Chance for Agreement as Party Leaders Hold Many Consultations.

[By Cable to The Tribune.]

London, July 25.—A storm of criticism broke to-day from all directions around the heads of Premier Asquith and the government for the failure of the vitally important Home Rule bill and the bad faith charged against them. Men and papers of all parties and shades of opinion joined in denunciation, though from different points of view.

Officially there was a day's lull in the contest, except for a statement by Premier Asquith that the parts of the Home Rule agreement approved by John Redmond, Nationalist leader, and Sir Edward Carson, Unionist leader in Ulster, would be published as soon as possible, and that if there was a general desire by the House the Premier would offer facilities for another discussion of the Home Rule question.

The feeling to-night is more favorable to an agreement ultimately being reached, the belief being that with Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson in harmony means will be found to override objections from other quarters.

Asquith Sees the King.

No formal Cabinet meeting was held to-day, but Premier Asquith conferred privately with David Lloyd George, Secretary for War; Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Andrew Bonar Law, Secretary for the Colonies. After this conference Mr. Asquith went to the palace for a conference with the King, which is supposed to have been connected with the Irish difficulty.

Several informal conferences among party leaders were held to-day. A meeting of the Irish Parliamentary party will be held to-morrow in the House of Commons to discuss the situation and consider plans for future action.

John Dillon, Member of Parliament for East Mayo, has given notice of a motion in which he will ask the government, in view of its failure to produce the promised Home Rule bill, to disclose its plans for the future government of Ireland during the continuance of the war.

Heated Comment Certain.

Further heated comment is certain, and it is likely that some move will be made that will indicate the intentions of the opposition. It is certain nothing will be done that will interfere with the prosecution of the war in any way, and that a crisis will not be forced until war credits have been arranged and all necessary provisions made. But to-morrow may show whether an appeal to the country will be sought as soon as this has been done.

Comment in the afternoon papers is extremely critical of the situation. Several papers hold that he has suffered a serious loss of prestige, while all agree that the breakdown must be repaired immediately.

The hopeful feature of the present Irish situation, says "The Times," is "the fact that most of the members of the House of Commons do not accept the existing deadlock as a permanent barrier to the eventual solution of the problem."

"Nobody who heard the speeches of Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson," says "The Times," "can doubt that an enduring settlement will some day be built on the foundation laid during the last ten weeks. The Cabinet, having failed to devise a scheme whereby Nationalist Ireland could govern itself, had now set its face to a complete system of government for United Ireland."

"There will not be any resignations from the Cabinet, but the Parliament has been influenced by the new attitude which the Nationalists threaten to take. The Nationalists probably will align themselves as a permanent opposition, with freedom to criticize the government."

"Irish Times" Calls for Political Truce

Dublin, July 25.—Commenting on the Irish situation, "The Irish Times" to-day says:

"A political truce must be restored. There must be an agreement on the necessity for a just and firm administration in Ireland during the period of the war. The present blunders have increased that necessity and only disloyal or short-sighted Nationalists will arrest measures which the government must take without further delay for the maintenance of peace and safety. If this necessity is generally accepted, the way may become clear for further developments in the unity among Irishmen."

"The Irish Independent" says: "Every honest Irish Nationalist will rejoice at the disappearance of the hateful and nefarious scheme of Lloyd George and the government to divide and dismember Ireland.

"But, unfortunately, the manner in which the plan was introduced, together with the trickery and chicanery by which the government sought to impose it upon the country, will constitute forever an unedifying and dishonorable episode in our history."

The plan of the Most Rev. William J. Walsh, Archbishop of Dublin, has issued a letter to the public condemning the conduct of the Home Rule cause in Parliament and holding that it could only lead to disaster. He says the country now "faces a truly awful prospect, and that Nationalists should no longer be fooled by party cries that Home Rule is on the statute book."

restrictions was held as late as June in Mr. Morgan's library," he said.

"Ah, in Mr. Morgan's library!" exclaimed Mr. Peabody. "That certainly tells the whole story."

Mr. Fox made a plea for the old Murray Hill residential district, which he said was fighting for its very existence.

The Board of Estimate disregarded the Astor objection when the matter came to a vote. The block in question was restricted for residential purposes.

Rush Plans to Dodge New Building Rules

Plans for twenty-six buildings, more than a perpendicular mile of them in all, were filed with the Buildings Department yesterday, which would lead to plans were accepted under the old law. Owners fear that under the new restrictions as to height the value of their properties may be decreased.

Most of the plans were legal skeletons, such as can be filed with a rough summary of cost and are good for a year.

Criticism May Force Blacklist Modification

[By Cable to The Tribune.]

London, July 25.—Increasing criticism of the blacklisting of American firms by this country, and fear among business men that the harm resulting from the government's action will far more than offset the possible advantage, have led to a growing belief that there will be an early modification of the original order. Francis W. Hirst, former editor of "The Economist" and one of the leading experts on trade and finance, declared to-day that he would not be surprised to see some such action taken.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, said to-day that the American press criticism of the British blacklist was based largely on misapprehension. The act under which the statutory list of American firms was issued, he said, was passed last December, and lists referring to most of the neutral countries already had been published. Nor were the provisions of the act, he added, unduly stringent.

TRAPS SNAKE INVADER WITH SAUSAGE STRING

Patrolman Teases It Into Overturned Barrel.

A seven-foot black snake peeked into a rear window of Mrs. Rosa Beckstein's pork shop at 793 Columbus Avenue last night. A delightful aroma from some pork chops on a shelf beneath the window greeted him. About three feet of snake slid quietly down toward the chops.

"Oh, mamma, see the snake," shrieked an ecstatic small boy.

Fourteen customers, mostly women, left the store without stopping at the cashier's desk.

Meagher got a string of sausages from the ice box, cast one end of it in front of the snake's mouth, retaining the other. The snake moved forward. The patrolman moved toward it, reached a barrel Meagher had overturned. Meagher hung the sausages inside, and when the snake had followed and slapped a barrel on its bottom and slapped a barrel on it.

PEACEMAKER KILLED; 8 BULLETS IN HIS BODY

Jealous Italian Resents Interference of Friend.

Attilia di Simone and his Rosa, of 136 Sullivan Street, figured again in the police records last night. The jealousy of Attilia has long been a byword in the neighborhood. A month ago friends told Alexander della Rosa, of 158 Sullivan Street, that he had better carry a revolver. Alexander did so and was arrested. He got his gun, and was approaching Vincenzo de Vito's cafe, at 169 Sullivan Street, last night, when he saw Attilia and the proprietor disputing hotly.

"I tell you you tried to get my Rosa," shouted Attilia.

"Now, now, Attilia," he began, "Vincenzo never—"

Attilia drew an automatic pistol. "So you are in it," he cried, and pulled the trigger. There were ten shots. Della Rosa fell, shot through the heart, and with seven other bullets in his body. Pasquale Machiano, sixty-two, a pedler, who stood by, got a bullet through each arm. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, and identified Attilia as the man who had shot him and della Rosa.

Less than half a block from the shooting Attilia was captured by Patrolman Schachne, of the MacDougal Street station, and locked up in Headquarters.
