

The Conning Tower

TO DOROTHY BEATRICE NICHOLS.

WHO MAKES HER STAGE DEBUT TO-NIGHT IN "THE HAPPY ENDING." Dot, do you remember all the dreams we used to weave, Fairy dreams and airy dreams, spun o' Make-Believe?

You would be an actress and would set the world afire; I would be a poet, and the world should praise my lyre.

Cynical we were—how we used to mock the scheme o' things! Cynical and wary—but how we used to dream o' things!

How we used to laugh at the people who had "missions"! How we mocked each other—and clung to our ambitions!

Mocked each other's struggles—and urged each other fight—Jeered at all the Moral Codes—and wondered which was Right.

Jeered at all the Moral Codes—called believers fools; Said the Game was rotten—and followed all its rules.

Earnest were we when we held the Game up to derision, Meant it, every sneering word—and yet we kept our vision.

So, to-night, you hit the trail—the trail that leads to where? Does it lead to Happiness—or ends it in Despair?

Wherever it may lead, only Fortune knows, But—the Gods of Chance be praised!—it's the road you chose.

Long the path and difficult—but with the gods attending, May you finish as you start, with THE HAPPY ENDING!

MORRIE.

THREE CARDINALS JOIN IN SERVICE

Mass at St. Patrick's Opens Convention of Catholic Societies.

THRONG OF PRELATES IN BRILLIANT SCENE

Bishop in Sermon Denounces Mexican Persecution of Clergy.

A pontifical mass made memorable by the presence of the three American cardinals, the apostolic delegate to Washington and a multitude of prominent churchmen and laymen from all parts of the United States, was celebrated at St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday morning.

The occasion was the first divine service of the fifteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies. A feature of the impressive ceremony was the sermon of the Right Rev. Thomas P. Hickey, Bishop of Rochester, N. Y., mild and theological in the beginning, ending with a protest against Mexican persecution of Catholic clergymen, nuns and laymen; the toleration of divorce by the American judiciary and the use of the mails for the circulation of anti-Catholic propaganda.

For fully two hours before the mass began thousands of persons gathered about the cathedral. Thousands without cards sought admission, but were forced to wait until the reserved seats had been filled. Later a few hundred of the patient communicants were admitted to vacant seats. The attendance was about 8,000. Persons of many creeds were present at the unusual spectacle.

Brilliant Spectacle.

Looking over the great assemblage from the choir loft, the spectacle was one of grandeur. Among a multitude of colors red predominated, due largely to the throne draperies and to the robes of the cardinals and their suites. The Roman purple vestments of the monsignori stood in relief against the background of crimson.

Streams of canary and white, the pontifical colors, were draped in loops about the columns of the chancel, and over the altar. On either side of the altar, bearing the coat of arms of Cardinal Farley. Plain white bunting covered the choir loft, on which was displayed the national colors of arms. Probably the most prolific decoration in the cathedral was that of the American flag, which hung from all the pillars of nave and chancel.

There was no music to herald the ecclesiastical procession. A few muffled drums beat the time of a slow march for the laymen. The entrance of two acolytes carrying tall brass crosses was the signal for the organ procession.

John Whalen, president of the federation, led the lay division, which was followed by the monsignori. Then came the titular bishop, the apostolic delegate and his attendants, Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, and his suite; Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and his assistant priests and deacons of the honor, and last Cardinal Farley, celebrant of the pontifical mass.

Anxiety for Cardinal Farley.

The procession moved with precision, but it was not until 11:50 o'clock that the mass began. The air was hot, and some anxiety was felt for the strength of the venerable Cardinal Farley, for, as celebrant of the mass he had been fasting since midnight, and the occasion compelled him to wear three sets of silk vestments, heavily with gold trimming. The aged prelate bore up well, however, and sang the mass with clear and forceful intonation.

He sat on the left, or gospel, side of the altar in the permanent throne, attended by Monsignor Mooney, of New York, his assistant priest; Monsignor Lynch, of Utica, and Monsignor O'Brien, of Kalamazoo, his deacons of the honor. On his left a temporary throne of scarlet sat Archbishop Bonzano, the Apostolic Delegate.

Cardinal Gibbons occupied a temporary throne on the right, or epistle, side of the chancel, opposite the altar, with Monsignor Edwards, of New York, as his assistant priest, and Monsignor Kaupert, of Brooklyn, and Monsignor Fox, of Trenton, as deacons of the honor.

Cardinal O'Connell, whose throne was erected to the right of Cardinal Gibbons, was attended by Monsignor Spaine, of Boston, as assistant priest. His deacons of honor were the Very Rev. John A. Delaney, of Albany, and the Right Rev. Francis H. Wall, of this city.

Pittsburgh Choir Takes Part.

The ceremony of vesting the celebrant lasted ten minutes, and at noon Cardinal Farley had removed his mitre, cappa magna and pallium. After bowing to the two cardinals and the Apostolic Delegate he ascended the altar, the tabernacle as the cathedral male choir of Pittsburgh, composed of 150 voices, chanted the Introit.

Monsignor O'Hara, of Brooklyn, sub-deacon of the mass, sang the Epistle; the Gradual was sung by the choir, and Monsignor Roche, of Watertown, N. Y., deacon of the mass, sang the Gospel.

Monsignor Lovell, vicar general of the Archdiocese of New York, ascended the pulpit at the conclusion of the gospel and extended to the members of the federation and to all persons present the welcome of Cardinal Farley.

"His eminence has commanded me to utter to you the hearty welcome he gives you," said the vicar general. "He welcomes you as the spiritual father of all Catholics in New York. He hopes you will enjoy your visit here, and will leave with you some knowledge of our real affection and respect for you. He has empowered me to bless you one and all, to bless your families and you hold dear, and to bless before the altar the work of the convention. His hand and his heart is as large as New York itself."

Bishop Hickey's Sermon.

Bishop Hickey, who was introduced by Monsignor Lovell, took for his text the eighteenth chapter, thirty-seventh verse, from St. John—"Pilate therefore said unto Him: 'Art Thou a king?' Jesus answered: 'Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end I am born, and for this cause I am into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice.'"

"Jesus taught a dogmatic faith," said the speaker. "He taught His Messiahship, His divine sonship, His oneness with the Father. He was not only a teacher of dogma, but a saviour and a regenerator. 'What to-day are the serious and threatening forces that are opposing the Church—the Kingdom of God? They are first, the tendency to do away with positive belief, the teaching that dogma is unimportant, an unnecessary burden on the intellect; that the need of the hour is conduct. 'Secondly, the attractions of worldly gain and possessions; the allurements of pleasure, so often tinged or filled with sin and vice, the unwillingness to make sacrifices and the desire for ease and comfort. 'Thirdly, there is that fearful blow at family life in the assumption of the statistics of divorce in the United States are nothing less than appalling; while against all this stands the edict of Christ for the indissolubility of marriage. 'We inculcate truest patriotism, founded upon divine law. We are here to help men to keep alive the light of their souls, the hope of heaven, the love of God. That, and that alone, is why we are working here. And for that we demand and insist upon our perfect liberty—a liberty which in the end brings far more help to you than you can summon from any other organization living under your flag. 'Should we remain inactive and almost indifferent when we know that in the world to-day there are mighty forces at work against faith and morals. 'Perhaps a brief survey of the conditions of our day may give emphasis to this treatment and appeal. 'It is a matter of general information that across the border and at our very doors indignities have been heaped upon bishops, priests, nuns and people—what united actions have we taken in protest? 'It is a fact that the mail service of our government, which we support, has been used to vilify and calumniate the Church. What efforts have we made to stop this? 'What a deplorable condition is found in current literature and the present day exhibitions on the stage. What united action are we taking against this end? 'Prominent among the visiting prelates were Archbishop Prendergast, of Philadelphia; Archbishop Averga, of Nuncio to Brazil; Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal; Bishop Gabriels, of Ogdensburg; Bishop Cusack, of Albany; Bishop O'Connor, of Newark; Bishop McFadden, of Trenton; Bishop McDonnell, of Rockford, Ill.; Bishop O'Connell, of Richmond; Bishop Canevin, of Pittsburgh; Bishop Fitz Maurice, of Erie, Penn.; Bishop Hoban, of Scranton; Bishop McDonnell, of Grand Rapids; Bishop Currier, of Havana; Bishop da Silva, of Portugal; Bishop O'Reilly, of Baker City, Ore.; Bishop Schrems, of Toledo; Bishop Nussbaum, of Corpus Christi, Tex.; Bishop Richter, of Grand Rapids; Bishop Lillis, of Kansas City; Bishop Allen, of Mobile; Bishop Donahue, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Bishop Gallagher, of Galveston; Auxiliary Bishop Hayes, of this city; Bishop Corrigan, of Baltimore; and Bishop Shahan, of the Catholic University.

Twenty Overcome by Heat at Mass in Cathedral

Twenty persons were overcome by the heat in St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday while attending the Pontifical mass. Only five failed to respond to the effects of the heat outside the edifice and required medical attention. An ambulance was called several times, but none of the heat victims was removed to a hospital. After being treated all were able to go to their homes.

Those who required medical attention were Thomas Ferricelli, eighteen years old, of 154 Perry Street; Leon Miller, thirteen, of 248 Steinway Avenue; Alphonse Wadano, seventy-two, of 2082 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn; John Harris, thirty-six, of 438 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, and Lillian Smith, twenty-six, of 207 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn.

15,000 HEAR CARDINALS' PLEA

The Catholic Church, Cardinal O'Connell said: "We are strengthening your hand as a nation by strengthening the moral fibre of the whole people. We teach them to love America even when often they can see small reason for unselfish affection. We teach them to obey your laws and respect your authorities; we care nothing for your mines, your wealth or your riches. We are neither a trust nor a syndicate who seek to control your franchises or exploit your resources. 'We inculcate truest patriotism, founded upon divine law. We are here to help men to keep alive the light of their souls, the hope of heaven, the love of God. That, and that alone, is why we are working here. And for that we demand and insist upon our perfect liberty—a liberty which in the end brings far more help to you than you can summon from any other organization living under your flag. 'Should we remain inactive and almost indifferent when we know that in the world to-day there are mighty forces at work against faith and morals. 'Perhaps a brief survey of the conditions of our day may give emphasis to this treatment and appeal. 'It is a matter of general information that across the border and at our very doors indignities have been heaped upon bishops, priests, nuns and people—what united actions have we taken in protest? 'It is a fact that the mail service of our government, which we support, has been used to vilify and calumniate the Church. What efforts have we made to stop this? 'What a deplorable condition is found in current literature and the present day exhibitions on the stage. What united action are we taking against this end? 'Prominent among the visiting prelates were Archbishop Prendergast, of Philadelphia; Archbishop Averga, of Nuncio to Brazil; Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal; Bishop Gabriels, of Ogdensburg; Bishop Cusack, of Albany; Bishop O'Connor, of Newark; Bishop McFadden, of Trenton; Bishop McDonnell, of Rockford, Ill.; Bishop O'Connell, of Richmond; Bishop Canevin, of Pittsburgh; Bishop Fitz Maurice, of Erie, Penn.; Bishop Hoban, of Scranton; Bishop McDonnell, of Grand Rapids; Bishop Currier, of Havana; Bishop da Silva, of Portugal; Bishop O'Reilly, of Baker City, Ore.; Bishop Schrems, of Toledo; Bishop Nussbaum, of Corpus Christi, Tex.; Bishop Richter, of Grand Rapids; Bishop Lillis, of Kansas City; Bishop Allen, of Mobile; Bishop Donahue, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Bishop Gallagher, of Galveston; Auxiliary Bishop Hayes, of this city; Bishop Corrigan, of Baltimore; and Bishop Shahan, of the Catholic University.

The audience rose when Cardinal Gibbons was introduced and acclaimed him until his repeated mite appeals brought silence. The venerable Baltimore prelate's voice was rather faint at first, but it became stronger and frequently stirred the vast audience to new applause, especially when the Cardinal attested his "abiding faith in the perpetuity of American institutions. 'A ripple of applause broke in on the Cardinal's speech when Governor Whitman made his appearance at the door. It was quickly hushed and the Governor's entrance delayed until the close of the Cardinal's remarks. A passing cheer and a hearty "amen" greeted Cardinal Gibbons as he received without demonstration.

Governor Whitman, introduced as one "unfortunately for himself not of our faith, but always a friend," found a substantial welcome. The Governor read his remarks, but with sufficient appeal to arouse frequent approbation. The Governor continued the patriotic vein, and was cheered when he urged America first in honor, in justice, in fraternity, in humanity and in righteousness. 'It is not the nation that makes a people free," said Governor Whitman, "but the people that make the nation free. Just so it is not the government that can make people good, but the people that can make government good. America first in honor, in justice, in fraternity, in humanity and in righteousness. 'The cardinal urged that the child be given "the saving benefits of Christian tradition" in the classroom and in the parochial school, and urged "protest" against the present "narrow conception of education."

At the conclusion of his remarks the applause reached its highest tide. The noise was deafening. Cardinal Farley was presented by Mr. Whalen as "considered by many, myself included, the first citizen of the State of New York." This was the signal for a prolonged ovation. The audience stood and cheered and it was several minutes until it would be quieted.

"In the minds of many men who have the interest of the public at heart," asserted Cardinal Farley, "the theatre has departed from the best traditions of the dramatic profession and begun openly in some cases to pander to lower tastes. This is due to the loose moral convictions of the times, and also to the fact that people of flitting belief and practice patronize plays that deal with indecency dramatized. The officers and members of the federation have done a good work in trying to correct this evil, and in showing men the evil of their ways. The end is good, but the means are faulty. The object can be obtained less suggestively and less picturesquely than is now to some extent the fashion. 'Before the throng filed from the great auditorium the audience rose and sang, "Holy, We Praise Thy Name."

Among the Knights of St. Gregory who attended the mass and sat within the chancel were John D. Grimmins, Henry V. Cunningham, Michael J. Mulqueen, Justice Victor J. Dowling, Bernard Coleman, Joseph J. Dr. James J. Whelan, John F. O'Reilly, Justice Eugene A. Philbin, Thomas F. Hynes, W. Bourke Cockran, James J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, and Anthony Matre, of Chicago.

Among the three thousand laymen were large delegations in uniform from the Knights of Columbus and the Lokal Verbund, of the German Catholic Central-Verein.

The uniformed bodies remained with covered heads until the elevation of the host, and then, removing their plumed hats, drew their swords and held the feature of the ceremony was over. The main aisle of the cathedral was filled with about two hundred priests, who sat four abreast after the procession had entered the chancel.

Those who required medical attention were Thomas Ferricelli, eighteen years old, of 154 Perry Street; Leon Miller, thirteen, of 248 Steinway Avenue; Alphonse Wadano, seventy-two, of 2082 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn; John Harris, thirty-six, of 438 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, and Lillian Smith, twenty-six, of 207 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn.

The Proof in Sales!

THE proof of the newspaper advertising puding is not so much in the eating as in the delightful after effects.

To illustrate: A large Philadelphia manufacturer had used other media, and it was only after much persuasion he was induced to try newspapers.

After one year's experiment his sales manager wrote the BUREAU OF ADVERTISING:

"Results have been so encouraging as to sell our company a national campaign of advertising through the newspapers."

When all is said and done it is results that count. And newspaper advertising gives results.

The BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, 806 World Bldg., New York City, will be glad to present facts to manufacturers and distributors on the use of newspaper advertising.

CALL CONVENTION CATHOLIC VEREIN SUFFRAGE CRISIS ATTACKS WILSON

Two Thousand Women to Frame Platform and Choose Party.

Two thousand suffragists of America will meet in Atlantic City on September 6 in a great "emergency convention." It has taken its name from the fact that the officers of the National American Woman Suffrage Association regard the present moment as a crisis in the struggle for political equality. They say that it is to be the most important convention ever called. For the first time the women are to frame a platform and to determine their election party at a suffrage convention. For the first time they are to consider a Presidential campaign in its relation to equal franchise issues. The delegates will vote on whether or not their association is to remain neutral in political matters, as it has been in the past.

Suffrage Indorsements.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, points out the significance of the fact that every candidate for the Presidency of the United States is a believer in woman suffrage, and that all, except the Democratic candidate, have indorsed the Susan B. Anthony amendment. President Wilson, who she thinks, will be persuaded to vote for the Federal amendment when he reflects upon the causes that are driving women to fight for it. President Wilson may even be persuaded to address the suffrage convention on Friday, September 8, right in the midst of a discussion of the political policy of the national convention. The women may decide on this day whether they are to continue in their non-partisan attitude of the past, or whether they shall follow the lead of their women's organizations all over the country, and come out in the support of a candidate.

Women to Debate.

"Why Women Need the Vote" will be the topic of debate at the Friday evening session, at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw will preside, and Katharine Bement Davis and Julia Lathrop will be the chief speakers. Mrs. Mary Garrett, Bay, chairman of the committee of arrangements, urges those who need suggestions about hotels and similar matters, to write her at the national headquarters, 17 Madison Avenue.

Questions for Congressmen.

"If elected will you vote in Congress to submit to the states a Federal amendment to enfranchise the women of this country?" "If appointed on a committee in whose jurisdiction such an amendment should fall, will you do all in your power to expedite the passage of such a measure?"
