

HOW HOLLAND GUARDS HER NEUTRALITY. Observation towers such as these are scattered along the borders of Germany and Belgium. They are forty or fifty feet high, and are festooned with tree branches to disguise them from absent-minded, bomb-dropping aviators who violate the laws of war by flying over Holland.

Underwood & Underwood