

THREE TWINS! Jackies on the U. S. S. Oklahoma truly in the jaws of death—otherwise the mouths of the famous "triplets" which guard the forward deck.

Exclusive photo Central News Service

All that remains of the chancel of the great cathedral of Arras—now a monument to Hunnish "Kultur."

Photo © American Press Association.

War training in all its branches is being taught at Dartmouth, for here is a squad of rookies learning how to make barbed wire entanglements on the college campus.

Photo © K. D. Smith.

All the trenches are not being dug abroad, or in the training camps, for the Dartmouth student is active with the pick, up in the hills of Hanover.

Photo © K. D. Smith.

Colonel William W. Page, the sole survivor of General Lee's staff, Army of North Virginia, who attended the Confederate Veterans' Convention at Washington. He is now the rector of St. John's Episcopal Church at Cornwall, N. Y.

Photo © Vernon Raddiffe.

A lonely coast-guard on the rocky shore of Brittany. The wild waves are probably saying that it is better to live and do your bit in solitude than to die in a crowd a few hundred miles further east, in the trenches.

Photo Central News Service