

Whitman Faces Revolt in Senate Against Kracke

Jacob A. Livingston and Others Tell Governor They Oppose Appointment

Parley Is Fruitless

Hylan Expected to Have Slate Ready Few Days Before Christmas

When Governor Whitman arrived in New York yesterday, after his brief visit to Florida, the first news that reached his ears was the disquieting information that he was confronted with another serious revolt in the State Senate.

He was told his appointment of F. J. H. Kracke as member of the Public Service Commission, First District, would not be confirmed by the Senate and that the wisest move on his part would be the withdrawal of the plan.

The result was a series of conferences in the Governor's suite in the St. Regis that failed to bring about any definite result. Numerous Brooklyn leaders, including Jacob A. Livingston, were summoned to the conferences and—according to the information that emanated from behind the closed doors—Livingston was among those who refused flatly to approve of the Kracke appointment.

"The Senate discovered that it could refuse to confirm an appointment when it compelled the withdrawal of Kracke's name, and it is going to make use of this newly discovered power, apparently, whenever it feels so disposed," said one of the men who participated in the final conference of the afternoon.

There was opposition to Kracke among the Brooklyn leaders when his name first was mentioned by Governor Whitman as the probable successor of Henry W. Hodie, now in the Federal service. It was believed that this opposition had been overcome completely when the Governor officially announced his determination to make the appointment a week ago.

At the same time he named Charles Pulkley Hubbell, a New York lawyer, to succeed Colonel William Hayward, who is commanding the 15th New York Regiment. Thus far no definite opposition has been offered to the appointment of Hubbell.

When Governor Whitman departed for Albany last evening he refused to make any comment on the situation, but he is expected to meet with Adjutant General Sherrill, who is usually engaged in a plan to supply the 10,000 Guardsmen, fully equipped, which the law says must be kept within the borders of the State at all times.

Mayor-elect Hylan spent the day visiting the constant stream of office seekers, who were ushered through his headquarters at the Business Men's Building, 40 East Forty-second Street, during the day, but continued to hold off any announcement of appointees.

He renewed the hopes of numerous need applicants for places under him by announcing that nearly every vacant position in the municipal payroll. This struck particularly at retired policemen, who had hoped to obtain easy berths.

During the day the name of Major J. Franklin Dunsath, formerly in charge of the Bureau of Institutions, was presented to Judge Hylan, with the endorsement of twenty-eight charitable institutions, for the office of Charities Commissioner. Since Dr. Dunsath is credited with possessing the support of Tammany Hall, along with that of the majority of institutions, it is believed that he will have control, his chances of success are considered bright.

Confess Smuggling On Relief Vessels

4 Plead Guilty, 2 Indicted and Seventh Goes on Trial Following U. S. Inquiry

Determined efforts on the part of Federal authorities to put an end to organized smuggling on Belgian relief boats was productive yesterday of two indictments and four pleas of guilty. The trial of a seventh man on a similar charge of smuggling begins to-day.

The men who pleaded guilty were Louis Finck, of 512 West Twentieth Street; Frank and Jan Hollaert, firemen on a Belgian relief ship, and John De Bruyn, a wholesale jeweler, of 100 Canal Street. Charles von Lens, Bremen on the steamer Pannonia, and Joseph Gorvecke, formerly an officer at the Port of Rotterdam, were the two indicted. Joseph B. Cooper, of 1477 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, goes on trial to-day.

The four men who confessed admitted to Federal Judge Feeder that they had smuggled 12,000 gross of jewelry, valued at $48,000, into the country on the steamships Liege, Gotland, Samland and Sprie, of the Holland Relief Expedition.

In addition to those admitting smuggling goods into this country, Louis Finck, John De Bruyn, August C. Maas and John Jan and Frans Hollaert pleaded guilty to having smuggled several rubber goods into Holland, from which country they found their way to Germany. The government has been working on these smuggling cases since last August.

Comfort Leagues Not Rivals

Mrs. Satterlee Declares All Are Working Together

Far from being a rival of the Navy League, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, chairman of the league's comforts committee, declared yesterday that Secretary Daniels' newly established Woman's Advisory Committee on Naval Auxiliaries will be a clearing house for the products of the comforts committee.

"The Woman's Advisory Committee as a branch of the Red Cross is a thoroughly neutral body which welcomes knitted goods from any source," said Mrs. Satterlee. "It has been established since October 9, and our relations with the New York branch, of which Mrs. James Roosevelt is chairman, have been most cordial and friendly. Until the organization of this committee, the Navy League was forced to contribute to comforts through private individuals, as the Red Cross would accept no specially designated goods. This committee, however, solved the problem of distribution very ably for us. We have been able to get our goods promptly to the designated ships, and have been delighted with the practical working out of the plan."

Swann to Examine Campaign Fund of Fusion Committee

District Attorney Will Subpoena Check Stubs, Bankbooks and Records

District Attorney Swann announced last night that he had assigned John J. Buckley, his official auditor, to examine the expenses of the Mitchell-Fusion campaign committee. The District Attorney also said he had arranged to have all the check stubs, bankbooks and records of the committee subpoenaed to aid his auditor in checking up the disbursements of the $1,200,000 which have been filed in Albany.

"I am taking this action solely on account of the tremendous amount involved," said Mr. Swann. "I am making no accusations nor insinuations as to any wrongdoing. It will be a laborious investigation, because the accounts filed in Albany are apparently nothing but copies of books which are so arranged as to make it difficult to get head or tail to the lump sums."

"All contributions and payments are so distributed among the 300-odd pages as to make it difficult to credit all the contributions of any individual or to get at all the payments. They must all be classified day by day, as the check stubs are received, and the money paid out and added up. Another difficulty I find is that no addresses of contributors are given or of persons to whom money was paid, and in many cases only the individual's occupation is given to be had."

Mr. Swann appeared interested over the items which showed that William Church (Osborn, former Democratic state chairman, and other Democrats who have been regarded as "regular" were liberal contributors to the Mitchell fund or to the City Democracy. Others singled out by the District Attorney were Justice David Lovett, Mark Alter and Max Steinert, and were referred to by Mr. Swann as "certain regular Democrats who received money as 'party workers' in the master's vineyard."

Anti Felicitates Suffragists

Miss Price Wins Applause in Letter to Miss Hay

Miss Lucy Price, formerly an anti-suffrage speaker, won loud applause and the title of a "good sport" yesterday at a meeting of the New York City Woman Suffrage party, at 13 East Thirty-eighth Street. A letter which she wrote to Miss Mary Garrett Hay, chairman of the suffrage party, was read, as follows:

"This is rather tardy congratulation on the victory of your cause, but because it was not until yesterday I can now add to my congratulations to you for the various stunts you have taken since election.

"Of course, I was opposed to woman suffrage, and I do not say that I do not regret the election results. However, you did win, and now all that is left for us to do is to be just as intelligent and conscientious in our fight as you were in yours. I am sure you must do, I think.

"No one is more anxious to have it work well in New York State than I am, and that is why I talk so much these post-election days."

Reynolds Wants Jury Books

He and Associates Claim Statute of Limitations

Ex-Senator William H. Reynolds, Frank Bailey, William M. Greve and Charles O'Malley, who were indicted before election for conspiracy to defraud the city in the sale of Seneca Park to the city, argued yesterday through their counsel before Justice Goff, in the extraordinary term of the Supreme Court, for an inspection of the minutes of the grand jury. Each of the defendants maintained that the indictments were barred by the statute of limitations, as an inspection of the minutes would show.

District Attorney C. A. Perkins, representing Mr. Bailey, argued that his client's appearance before the grand jury was obtained by legal coercion. William Harman Black, Assistant District Attorney, said Bailey had waived immunity and testified before the grand jury after he had been advised by counsel to the contrary. He quoted from a statement by Bailey to the effect that he was glad to waive immunity. Justice Goff declined briefs from counsel and announced that he would defer decision.

Exhibit of War Posters

Charles Dana Gibson Opens Display in Fifth Ave. Studio

Charles Dana Gibson opened yesterday an exhibit of war posters, for the benefit of the Red Cross, in the Arden Studios, 259 Fifth Avenue. The exhibit contains eminent posters of England, Australia, New Zealand, Canada and the United States, and was arranged by James Bliss Townsend.

"We must be sure that our art grammar is right in our war posters," said Mr. Gibson, who is the author of many American posters, "in order to get the message over. These posters have got to bring results. We're going to have coal posters, posters for Red Cross, war stamps and food, and they must convey the idea absolutely or they will be of no value. It is therefore up to the artists of this country to help the government, and they're going to do it."

Mr. Gibson will leave this week for Washington to complete details before beginning work on posters for the third Liberty Loan.

William Schlemmer, of the firm of Hammacher, Schlemmer & Co., hardware merchants, who died December 23, 1916, left an estate officially appraised yesterday at $1,676,076. Under the terms of his will $750,000 of the estate is to be placed in the Schlemmer Hospital and Dispensary $118,098. Mr. Schlemmer owned 2,015 shares in his hardware firm, valued at $844,856.

3-Year Term for F. H. Clarke, Head of Kent Motors

He Conducted $75,000 Automobile Stock Swindle, Exposed by The Tribune

Aid to Jail for a Year

His Aged Father and One Other Accomplice Escape With Heavy Fines

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 3.—Frederick H. Clarke, president of the Kent Motors Corporation, a get-rich-quick fraud exposed by The Tribune several months ago, was today sentenced to three years in Atlanta prison and to pay a fine of $2,500. Fred J. Nagel, his chief assistant, was sentenced to a year and a day in jail. Dr. Henry F. Clarke, his father, was fined $2,500, and John A. Simpson, another accomplice, was fined $2,000.

Dr. Clarke's seventy-two years and feeble health saved him from a prison sentence, while Simpson escaped a stay at the Atlanta jail because he had helped Archibald Palmer in the prosecution of the case.

The sentencing of the quartet ends so far as the criminal courts are concerned one of the most brazen swindles attempted in this section in many years, by which, up to the time of The Tribune expose, the swindlers had obtained about $75,000 from small investors in New Jersey, New York and New England.

To get this money through the sale of stock, Frederick H. Clarke founded the Kent Motors Corporation in an ancient shack at Belleville, and advertised that the company had beaten all American records for production—making records that made Henry Ford's look like a packing box compared to this claim, an article was retained to draw a picture of a motor car factory. He did so, adding by way of good measure great chimneys which belched forth clouds of smoke, freight trains hauling away the finished product and other freight bringing in the raw material.

Whirling machinery, too, was shown, and also the hard working mechanics bent on making even better records. About the time the swindlers were displaying great signs proclaiming the institution to be the home of the Kent Motors Corporation, the art exhibit also included a portrait of Mayor Raymond of Newark, billed over his protest, and against his will as a director of the company.

Many investors, on the principle of looking the barn door after the visit of the horse thief, visited Belleville to see this great plant. Some went away convinced that there was no plant whatever, others, more glibly, saw the aged swindler. Then they saw lawyers and put the company into bankruptcy.

It is still there, with small change of emerging with anything more tangible than a few cents on the dollar for those who were to become rich through its operations, the $75,000 collected having vanished in advertising, promoters' salaries and other expenses.

New Draft Director Begins Work Here

Philip J. McCook, of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, yesterday took the duties of director of the draft in this city. Officially, he became the New York City representative of Adjutant General Sherrill for the administration of the selective service law. He moved the draft headquarters from the State Arsenal to the Hall of Records, opposite City Hall.

Accord by the act of finishing up the first draft by sending the last 30 per cent of the quota to Camp Upton and of getting ready for the second draft, Mr. McCook spent the day going through the records which were brought to his office. He conferred with Mr. Wood in the morning, and received a pledge of his cooperation. In the afternoon Adjutant General Sherrill visited him, and announced that the headquarters of the 600 lawyers who are being organized into legal advisory boards to help draft registrants would also be at the Hall of Records.

The Mayor's Committee announced that Adjutant General Sherrill, of the Department of War, had ruled that even those men of draft age who have been called for physical examination by local exemption boards will be permitted to enlist voluntarily in the army or navy up to December 15. If they are not needed to fill the last 30 per cent of the first quota. All volunteering men who have registered must cease to do so after December 15, it is announced.

The first draft for this city will be nearly completed this week, when 20 of the final 30 per cent of the first quota will be sent to camp. Beginning to-morrow, 6,000 selected men will enter for Camp Upton this city.

Britannia Thrills Hero Land Audience

Full Tank Goes on Rampage and Smashes Obstacles Before Being Stopped

"Britannia," the famous British tank at Hero Land, which climbs a trench every twenty minutes for a per capita charge of 25 cents, celebrated the opening of the second week of the great war bazaar yesterday by "going over the top" in a way that had not been rehearsed.

In the tank's path were carefully prepared trenches reinforced only in those parts which were expected to bear the weight of the great war machine. Uter demolition was the fate of these and also that part of the wall against which the tank finally came to a full stop. That play-to-caper settled the tank show for last night, but with the aid of willing workmen, all was in order by late this afternoon.

Yesterday was Serbian Day at Hero Land, as planned were Serbian guests, Serbian food in the restaurants and a Serbian pageant. The Serbian Minister, Ljubomir M. Mihalovic, received a hearty reception from a delegation of United States women in the great hall to see the pageant.

Today is Polish Day, and the feature will be a "fake" play-to-night under the patronage of prominent society women for the benefit of the Queen of the Belgians' charities. Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mrs. James W. Gerard, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. E. Henry Harriman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson are associated in the effort to make the event a success. Any sort of a simone or a false beard is the sole camouflage.

To-morrow will be Belgian Day. Thursday, instead of being Russian Day, as planned, will be changed to General Pershing Day. This change is made because of the chaotic conditions now prevailing in Russia.

Musical Couple File Counter Divorce Suits

Mrs. Stern Names Six Co-respondents; Husband Alleges 156 Indiscretions

With 156 alleged indiscretions charged by Harold Stern, leader of the orchestra at the Park Avenue Hotel, against Mrs. Estelle Stern, whose counter claim for divorce contains allegations of eighty-one wrongful acts for her husband, the double divorce suit came to trial yesterday before Justice Hotchkiss in the Supreme Court. Mrs. Stern also is a musician. The couple were married in 1909 and have two children.

Mrs. Stern mentions by name six co-respondents, but none are known to her. Both married and single women, the wife alleges, were among those whose company her husband preferred to her own. Besides recording the orchestra leader spent much time with them on joy rides, at dinners and cabarets.

One of the women mentioned by Mrs. Stern is sixty-two years of age and has children who are musicians. Mrs. Stern admits receiving letters from the latter, but says that his relations with her, as well as with the other women named, are not known to her. She also charges that her husband has had relations with a woman named Gendolfo A. Solano and others in his suit, and his wife also has made a denial of the charges.

Jersey Family of 9 Wiped Out in Fire

Charred Bodies Found in Ruins of Miller Dwelling at Butler

BUTLER, N. J., Dec. 3.—The entire family of Moses Miller, consisting of himself, his wife and their seven children, six of them boys, was wiped out by a fire which completely destroyed their home last night. The bodies, which have all been recovered, are charred so badly that it is almost impossible to identify them.

The family had been visiting friends early in the evening. They returned home about 10 o'clock, and it is thought that Mr. Miller, on retiring for the night, left too big a fire in a stove in the living-room. When neighbors discovered the fire shortly after midnight it had gained such headway that the interior of the house was a mass of flames.

Firemen from nearby towns searched the ruins while they were still smouldering. One body, believed to be that of a 3-year-old boy, was found under a bed in which three of the children lay. It is thought that he had attempted to rescue them.

Judge Criticises Orators

Tells Rockefeller Jury to Indict Seditious Speakers

The grand jury, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is a member, was told yesterday by Judge Crain, in General Sessions, that it is his duty to indict "soapbox orators" who preach sedition and disloyalty.

"The community," said Judge Crain, "looks to you to protect itself against seditious utterances. No one has the right to advise anything that is inconsistent with the policy of the government or the enforcement of the law."

News in Brief

William Carroll, of 229 Third Street, who on October 26 escaped from Bellevue Hospital, where he had been lodged after convincing the police that he was ill when arrested, was today taken to the home of Henry S. Herman, 54 East Eighth Street, where he was recaptured.

Magistrate Hoffa had to adjourn the session of a traffic court, entirely because the police department's monthly report, beginning work on posters for the third Liberty Loan.

Nineteen boys and nine girls under sixteen years of age were killed by automobiles in the city streets in November, according to the Police Department's monthly report. Seventy-three persons—fifty-one males and twenty-two females—made up the mouth's toll of the automobile.

St. Francis Xavier's College will hang out a service flag with 280 stars, representing students and instructors of the college and high school. Of this number six are majors, eight captains, eighty-two lieutenants and four ensigns.

The Red Cross factory has issued a call for 1,500 women volunteers to knit several thousand pairs of socks for the boys' hospital and dispensary $118,098. Mr. Schlemmer owned 2,015 shares in his hardware firm, valued at $844,856.

Hercules Tire Co. Passes and Another Rises in Same Spot

Expose in Sunday Tribune Brings New Firm at Address

Goods Look Alike

Woman Counsel for Concern Says It Has Been Incorporated

The Hercules Tire Company, of 1789 Broadway, is, to all appearances, no more. It ceased to exist, so far as visible signs go, yesterday morning, when a young sign painter, armed with a sponge, a can of turpentine and a scraper, attacked the windows of the store in the Hearst Building, 1789 Broadway, and in a few minutes there was nothing to indicate that the Hercules Tire Company ever existed at that address.

This done, the young man produced a yardstick and a piece of chalk and with a few soft strokes of the wrist brought the Monarch Tire Company into visible existence. In the late afternoon he was filling in the sign, and with good luck and the same industry displayed yesterday he should have the sign done in black and gold by noon to-day.

The disappearance of the Hercules Tire Company from the business map of "Gasolene Row" follows the expose in The Tribune of Sunday of the methods used by the Hercules Tire Company to separate the thrifty motorist from his cash by selling him tires rescued from the junk pile, and coated with a rubber solution, as new tires. It also told of the trick these "new" tires had of blowing up after treading ten miles or more, and the failure of those who bought to get satisfaction or their money back.

Aside from the signs on the windows, however, there was no change visible to the naked eye when a Tribune reporter called at 1789 Broadway yesterday afternoon. In the windows was the same display of bait, on the floor the same confused mass of tires in various stages of dress and disarray, the same young men in their shirt sleeves and the same young woman at a desk.

Admits the Change

"I am looking for the Hercules Tire Company," said the reporter. "Didn't it use to be here?"

"Yes," said a young man, looking up from a freight bill, "but it's the Monarch now."

"Why the change?"

"Oh, nothing much: you see, we incorporated a month or so ago. Better talk to Mr. Jarowitz, that man over there."

Mr. Jarowitz likewise admitted that the Monarch Tire Company, incorporated a month ago, had taken over the business of the Hercules Tire Company.

"Who are the incorporators?" the reporter asked.

"I guess you had better see M. Burnett, room 309, at 2 Rector Street. You'll find out everything there. They are the lawyers."

On the door of room 309, in 2 Rector Street, a sign reads: "Law offices of Margaret M. Burnett." Within a young girl was thumping a typewriter. Miss Burnett, the sign said, had just left.

"What did you wish to know about?"

"The Monarch Tire Company," said the reporter. "I believe Miss Burnett is counsel for the company."

Tells of Incorporation

"Never heard of it," said the typist, who gave the name as the Hercules Tire Company.

"She's counsel for the Hercules Company. Come around and see her to-morrow."

Instead the reporter located Miss Burnett in her home in Madison, N. J. "Yes," said she, in response to a question as to her connection with the Monarch Tire Company. "I incorporated it some weeks ago. It was just decided to incorporate—that is all."

"What's happened to the Hercules Tire Company—is it dead?"

"You printed so much about the Hercules Company yesterday you should know all about it. Why come to me to ask? But The Tribune's blast did not have a thing to do with it."

And there the matter rests, with the Hercules apparently passed to the great beyond, to join others which in happier days sold old tires for new to the unwary.

Women Ask War Aims

Peace Party Addresses Resolutions to Wilson

At a meeting of the New York branch of the National Woman's Peace Party at the headquarters, 2 West Thirtieth Street, last night resolutions were passed and addressed to President Wilson, asking for a clearer definition of war aims and urging passage of the woman suffrage amendment. The resolutions, in part, say:

"We count on you to express America's idealism; to say that the people of America, like the people of Russia, are eager for any peace that gives promise of freedom for all nations, based on disarmament and a democratic world federation; that besides these great international goals reparation and victory are but empty words."

Representative Nelson Will Answer Draft Charges To-day

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 3.—Arrangements were made in the Federal court to-day to have Congressman Nelson appear to-morrow to plead to a Federal indictment charging conspiracy with his son Byron to evade the draft law. The Congressman announced to-day that he would not ask for legislative immunity from arrest, but would press for speedy trials of the charges against him and his son. Mr. Nelson has been granted indefinite leave of absence from the House of Representatives.

Oscar Lewisohn Dies After Operation

Banker and Husband of Edna May Passes Away in Mt. Sinai Hospital

Oscar Lewisohn, husband of Edna May and prominent in banking circles, died yesterday morning in Mount Sinai Hospital, following an operation performed on Saturday. He had been ill for several weeks, but his condition did not become critical until a few days ago.

Mr. Lewisohn was married to Miss May in 1906, at the time when she had reached the height of a successful stage career. Her popularity extended to England, and she was frequently spoken of as the most popular American actress ever to appear in London. She retired from the stage at the time of her marriage, and has never returned to it professionally.

Mr. Lewisohn was a son of Leonard Lewisohn and nephew of Adolph Lewisohn, of 881 Fifth Avenue. He was a Harvard man, and immediately after graduation took an active interest in banking and Wall Street.

Apart from his business interests Mr. Lewisohn was known in racing circles as a breeder of greyhounds. He has inherited $5,000,000 when his father died.

A report was widely circulated in 1909 that Mr. Lewisohn had been killed in an automobile accident in Germany. He is the second to occur in the Lewisohn family in a short time, Philip Lewisohn, a half brother of Adolph Lewisohn, having died in the German Hospital three years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn lived in London for some years. They returned to this country during the second year of the war, and since then have been making their home at Sherry's.

"Deacon" Terry's Funeral

Funeral services for Henry Clay Terry ("Deacon" Terry) were held yesterday afternoon at his late home, 83 Boerum Avenue, in Jersey City. The Rev. Dr. B. Applegate, pastor of the Parly Memorial Church, officiated. A majority of those present were newspaper men who had been associated with "The Record" during his long career as "The New York American."

Floral tributes were sent by the New York Press Club, the attaches of the Criminal Courts Building, where the "Deacon" was assigned for fifteen years, and from his associates in the office of "The American." Among those present were District Attorney James E. Smith, Judge James Wall, of Jersey City; Raymond Torrey, Willis Holley, Wellington Wright, Frank L. Hopkins, Isaac S. Edgecombe, William Boyle, George Van Lee and Captain Harry Davis, of the Coast Artillery.

The honorary pallbearers were Nathaniel P. Babcock, John Slight, E. Percy Howard, John A. Hennessy, Isaac White and William E. Laubenstein, with whom Mr. Terry worked for many years.

Dr. Leipzig Buried

Funeral services for Dr. Henry M. Leipzig, founder of the public school lecture courses, were held yesterday at Temple Emanuel. The pall bearers were Justice Samuel Greenbaum, Samuel Lachman, Daniel F. Davis, Benjamin J. Gold, Charles Brand, Philip Cowen, Benno Levinson and Dr. Charles P. Fagnani.

Among those present were Jacob Schiff, Professor Abraham Lincoln, Louis Brandeis, Henry Williams, Henry Platt, Dr. George Kuntz, Marcus M. Marks, Borough President, and seven members of the Board of Education.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, Rev. Simon Schlager and Dr. H. G. Enelev. The interment was in Bayside Cemetery.

William H. Chesebrough

William H. Chesebrough, prominent for twenty-five years in the real estate world, died yesterday at his home, 161 West Eighty-first Street. He was fifty-one years old.

One of the most important real estate operations with which he was identified was the development of the land fronted by Battery Park. While president of the Alliance Realty Company, Mr. Chesebrough was largely instrumental in the building of the Broad-Exchange, the South Ferry, the Chesebrough, the Battery Park and Manhattan buildings.

He was a member of the Racquet and Tennis Club, the Polo Club, the Aero Club, the Midway, New York Athletic and Whitehall clubs. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Nanette Chadwick Chesebrough.

Charles E. Cockcroft

OSNING, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Charles E. Cockcroft, a New York real estate dealer, died yesterday in Ossining Hospital. He was seventy years old and lived on Croton Avenue here. For several weeks he had been ill as the result of a nervous breakdown. He is survived by a widow, a son and a daughter. The funeral will be held on Wednesday.

Pneumonia Spreading, Health Board Warns

A heavy increase in the number of deaths from pneumonia caused the Department of Health yesterday to send out warnings which it is hoped will aid in fighting the disease. While it is not to be feared
