

Garfield's Rate Plan a Menace, Say Coal Dealers

Sudden Jump of 50 Cents Will Encourage Late Buying

Urge Gradual Raise Ten-Cents-a-Month Method Prevents Rush When Winter Comes

up to several hundred or a thousand dollars? His whole business training is not to let his money lie idle. So he will save the interest on that few hundred or a thousand dollars by not buying until the last moment before the 50-cent raise is clapped on.

Dealers Will Hold Back "What will be the result if a big fraction of our people do that? Why, undoubtedly the coal dealers, during the spring and early summer, when conditions are ideal for the transportation of coal, so far as the weather is concerned, won't be anxious to get their coal in, but will wish to postpone receipts until later.

Another Crisis Predicted "Just what Dr. Garfield's objections to the old plan of raising the price 10 cents a ton a month during the spring and summer are hard to see. The men who are willing to lay in their coal months before it is needed is certainly entitled to buy that coal at a price which will reimburse him for his loss of interest, and by withdrawing that incentive, which has been found to work successfully by dealers all over the country for many years, I am afraid Dr. Garfield will find himself in another mess similar to that brought about by the advice to the public last year not to buy coal, as prices would be reduced."

Industry Urged To Use Power of Central Plants

Fuel Administration Sends Advocate to P. S. C. Hearing

Coal Saving Promised Argument for Suspension of Isolated Outfits Will Be Presented To-day

Charles E. Stuart, of the conservation division of the fuel administration, who will appear to-day at the Public Service Commission hearing concerning emergency and breakdown service of electrical corporations, issued a statement yesterday explaining the fuel administration's interest in the saving of fuel through power economy. He will read a statement of similar purport into the record to-day.

Extension of the service of central power plants and suspension of isolated power plants effects a considerable fuel saving, he asserts. The fuel administration considers the central power plant method to be the most satisfactory way of doing it. Mr. Stuart's mission is to set forth so clearly the national necessities and the advantages of this method of satisfying them that industries will point voluntarily in the effort. His statement, in part, follows: "The individualistic way in which fuel is now consumed in cities is inefficient. A ton of coal burned in a large central station will produce at at least four times as much electric power as if burned in the average small plant, and if centralized burning could be introduced to a greater extent, the amount of fuel required could be largely reduced without reducing in any way the ultimate production of light and power.

Economy in Central Service "It may be generally stated that in a building where electric plants are located and where exhaust steam from engines is utilized in the heating of the building, furnishing hot water requirements, and possibly providing a very small amount of steam for industrial and other processes, such a building can readily adopt central station service without a loss of money and at a large percentage of saving in fuel.

Shows Her Son's Letters "I want the people of this state, before they demand the life of my son, to know the real Paul Chapman. The impression seems to have gone out that he is a calloused boy, hardened and blasé. I do not know where that impression came from, but I do know that it is an absolutely untrue impression. Paul Chapman is not an angel—no healthy, normal boy; but Paul Chapman is a healthy normal boy, with one of the tenderest hearts, one of the sweetest, cheeriest natures that ever brightened what has been, I am afraid, a rather dreary home."

Examples of Economy "Important steps on a large scale have been made in other sections of this country as regards saving of power lines. Practically all of the lines of California are connected at the present time. There are a number of instances where towns containing both municipal and private central stations have closed down the one or the other, the entire load being carried by the plant not closed down."

Bill Offered to Force Cities to Build Homes

If a bill recently introduced by Assemblyman Feigenbaum becomes a law, this and other cities of the first or second class in the state will go into the real estate business as builders and owners of tenement houses. These houses are to be erected with a view to renting them to the inhabitants. A commissioner, to be elected next November, would carry out the provisions of the act.

With the approval of Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, a patriotic food show will be given at Grand Central Palace from April 10 to 20. Mr. Hoover has promised to open the show, which is being arranged by the National League for Woman's Service, of which Miss Maude Wetmore is chairman.

The Weather Report WASHINGTON, March 10.—The storm of Saturday continued its rapid movement and is central tonight near and over Boston. A cold front will be quite general across and east of the Mississippi River, and a heavy fall of snow in northern New England, where it continues. Northwest gales continued Saturday night in the Lake States, and extended during Sunday eastward to the Coast.

Mother Begins Fight to Save 16-Year-Old Son From Chair

Paul Chapman Not the Hardened Gangster Prosecution Pictured Him, Says Mrs. Louise Barenburg—Reveals Affectionate Letters Boy Wrote Her

Mrs. Louise Barenburg, mother of sixteen-year-old Paul Chapman, the youngest prisoner ever convicted on a first degree murder charge in this state, yesterday began the fight to save her boy from the electric chair which now awaits him outside the Sing Sing death house. "First of all," said Mrs. Barenburg, "I want the people of this state, before they demand the life of my son, to know the real Paul Chapman. The impression seems to have gone out that he is a calloused boy, hardened and blasé. I do not know where that impression came from, but I do know that it is an absolutely untrue impression. Quivered With Fear "He said he sat through the trial absolutely numb, like a hardened criminal. Poor boy, he was frightened stiff! But if you placed your hand on him anywhere during these days you could feel him quivering with nervousness in every muscle. And they said he never thought of his mother or his home. Read these and see for yourself. See if you can believe this boy actually did say what he said. They have represented Paul to be now. She held out the packet of letters, more than fifty of them.

Urges Salaries From Government For All Mothers

Boston Feminist Declares New Slogan More Significant Than Suffrage

Sees Need After War Inducement Needed to Take Women From Jobs Returned Soldiers Will Require

Crusading women have not attained their most cherished goal by the realization of universal suffrage, in the opinion of Dr. Antoinette Konikow, Boston Socialist and feminist, who lectured last night to an interested audience in the Rand School, Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street. The slogan "Votes for women" is to give way to a new and more significant watchword, which, she prophesies, will benefit the race—"Remuneration for motherhood."

THE potential motherhood of the nation," the speaker said, "is on strike. She foregoes the birth control theories of her more intellectual sister, who marries. Instead, she does not marry, for she can not reconcile herself to absolute dependency, working tirelessly for her bread and butter and calling the four walls of her home her world.

THE mother who is submitting to such conditions is a 'seab' getting 'seab' wages for hard work, receiving nothing but her food and lodging as compensation. I have heard it said that some mothers would be indignant were they offered pay, insisting that they were families through love and are proud to make the sacrifices. But I believe they would gladly eat the halo of sacrifice away if it meant they were to be properly cared for by a grateful people."

Competition for Capital

It's not inflation that bankers and business men fear as a result of the War Finance Corporation or any other financial operation of the Government; it's the inevitable deflation. As Sam Patch said, "Tain't the flyin' that troubles me; it's the lightnin'!"

With inflation, the price of money, or rather of credit, will go up as the price of all other commodities. The Government itself will not be favored in the market, for here is a commodity that admits of no price-fixing, but the price the Government pays is the measure of the terms to all other borrowers.

There is one individual who can regard these conditions with complacency, and that is he who, conducting a sound business, is established with a sound bank, for with money today as with goods, it is not the question of price but of getting the goods, and there is no member bank of the Federal Reserve System that need refuse accommodation to the customer whose responsibility, business and bank balances warrant.

This is the liberal attitude assumed by The Harriman National Bank, and it may interest business people who for any reason are considering a banking change.

Cesare's War Cartoons

Cesare's war-monster is an original conception, depicting the brutality, bestiality and hideousness of war. He has created a new and intensely striking symbolism to show why America fights. Cesare believes that America is in the war with every ounce of power, to the last dollar, and with every sacrifice necessary to win. Every cartoon has behind it the power of keenest intellect,—an intellect that puts into simple picture-language the war-aims and realities which words alone can not fasten in your mind. Kaiserism, militarism, Teuton diplomacy, Bolshevism, America's duty toward justice and democracy—Cesare makes you see them all.
