

Former United States
Attorney General
George W. Wickersham

For The Tribune at Paris

Former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham will attend the Peace Conference for The New York Tribune to write on the important legal and political aspects of the great treaty as its terms develop, with a particular view to the interests of America. Mr. Wickersham is a lawyer of international distinction, a shrewd political observer, a sound thinker in economics, a publicist of great ability and a strong advocate of true Americanism. His articles will be both interesting and significant.

Others will be:

Andre Cheradame

The eminent French historian and prophet, whose fascinating articles on the politics of the great war are already well known in this country. Mr. Cheradame's latest book, "The Essentials of an Enduring Victory," has just been published in this country.

Chester M. Wright

Formerly news director of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy and a member of the recent American Labor Mission to England and France. Mr. Wright will report on the Labor Conference, the deliberations of which will be parallel to those of the Peace Conference.

Frederick Moore

Formerly Associated Press correspondent in London and the East; author of "Chaos in Russia," just appearing.

Bampton Hunt

Experienced European correspondent, whose work The Tribune readers know.

Samuel Crowther

Well known writer of business articles, long known as a contributor to System Magazine, who will do a series of articles on the purely commercial problems that arise with peace.
