Second Wife Died Suddenly. Records in the Health Department and in the Chief Medical Examiner's office show that Mrs. Susan H. Wilkins, the second wife of Dr. Wilkins, died suddenly at night in their home at 131 West Fortieth Street, April 23, 1918.

According to District Attorney Weeks, who questioned Dr. Wilkins about his past, the doctor seemed disinclined to speak of his second wife's death, saying merely that she died her appoplexy.

There was no autopsy held, as the cause of death was considered a natural one. The inquest held on May 1, by Coroner Brown gave the same perfunctory facts about the woman. There was no testimony recorded in the inquest paper, and Dr. O'Hanlon, the coroner's physician, stated the following: "I have made an examination of the body of Susan H. Wilkins, now lying dead at 131 West Fortieth Street, and from such examination and history of the case I am of the opinion the cause of death is cerebral apoplexy."

Odette Tyler Her Daughter. The second Mrs. Wilkins had been married prior to her marriage to the doctor. Together they kept a theatrical rooming house on West Thirty-eighth Street. Odette Tyler, the actress, is a daughter of Mrs. Wilkins by a former marriage.

Sorro Refuses to Answer Questions At Baff Hearing

Witness Resorts to Technical Objection; Attorney General Declines to Intervene; Pays Prisoner $28 a Week

Refusal by Joseph Sorro, as a witness, to answer questions on the ground his replies might tend to incriminate him featured the hearing of the John Doe inquiry into the question of perjury in connection with the murder of Barnett Baff, which was resumed before Judge McIntyre yesterday.

Sorro was put on the stand by Assistant District Attorney Pecora after a letter from Attorney General Newton had been read declining to intervene in the John Doe hearing.

The desire of Sorro to "keep out of trouble" and his conviction that he "already had talked too much" were expressed by him and were indicated in his reply to the most informal question: "I refuse to answer on the ground that it might incriminate me."

A question by Mr. Pecora as to who had accompanied the witness on the occasion of a visit to the office of the District Attorney met with the same objection. The court ruled the witness would be required to answer it. Sorro declined to answer the question, in spite of the threat of the court to commit him for contempt.

Rotary Adopts Boys' Work

There is hardly a man who does not thrill to the memory of "the old swimming hole." Even if he has never seen an old swimming hole, he thrills to it. Simply because there is brought to his grown-up mind a picture of wholesome boyhood as it used to be—and the freckles and red hair that went with it.

Because old swimming holes are unknown quantities in big cities—especially in New York—is one of the reasons why boyhood is not the clean dirt and outdoor thing it used to be. It is lived a great deal indoors; and the dirt—when there is dirt—is not clean. This is true in nine cases out of ten of the under-privileged boy. And if a special census were taken the under-privileged boy would outnumber his privileged relative five to one.

To lift the under-privileged boy from the mire, to surround him with wholesome boy-things, to set his feet firmly on the road to Decency, is surely a big work. It is a patriotic work as well—for the future of the nation depends upon the boys who grow to manhood.

But because it is a big work—rather than because it is a patriotic one—the Rotary Club of New York, whose roster numbers successful business men of this city—at its last dinner meeting at the Hotel McAlpin, adopted BOYS' WORK as its principal endeavor.

It is fitting that a body of successful men should work toward the success of handicapped boys growing toward manhood. That is why Rotary is taking up the work with great enthusiasm and determination to interest other large organizations of men and procure their earnest cooperation.
