

Tilden Dethrones Young Vincent Richards as National Champion on Indoor Courts

Singles Rivals Retain Crown in the Doubles

Tilden and Richards Beat Voshell and Hardy in Straight Set Match

By Fred Hawthorne

William T. Tilden 2d, of Providence, left the courts at the 7th Regiment Armory yesterday afternoon the wearer of two national championship titles, the result of the two matches in which he engaged. In the singles final of the indoor lawn tennis championship tournament he defeated Vincent Richards, the seventeen-year-old playing-through title holder, by a score of 10-8, 6-3, 6-1. Later, paired with Richards, he won the doubles crown by defeating Samuel Hardy, of California, and S. Howard Voshell, of Brooklyn, by a score of 6-3, 8-6, 6-4, 12-10.

Thus it came about that between them Tilden and Richards kept all the honors that they had when they started at the beginning of the tournament. Richards started as singles champion and finished with that title. The two were already holders of the doubles title.

The results were according to "form," as it indicated they might be in the column yesterday morning. I have seen Tilden in many matches indoors, but never before have I witnessed him in such unobtainable vein on the board floor courts. His play was dynamic at times, particularly when he felt that he needed a point at a critical stage of the match, set or game, whichever it might be.

Tilden's Speed Dazzles
The former Philadelphia played winners of his feet by amazing speed, which was the more remarkable because Tilden almost uniformly held perfect control. His dazzling volleying from well inside the service court has probably never been excelled indoors, and his smashing of everything that came to his shoulder high or at greater heights was equally deadly.

In the first set young Richards played his great rival shot for shot, nor was there anything to choose between them until the seventh and eighteenth games, in the latter of which Tilden broke through service by meteoric play.

After dropping this set Richards' play suffered a visible lull, and he never thereafter looked dangerous, and there was ample reason for this faltering. After the first two games in the match had been played S. W. Merrihew strode out to the court as Tilden began service in the third and started to call foot-faults.

There would have been no objection to this on the part of either player had Merrihew begun operations at the start of the match, or even had the players been consulted before he did take up his duties. Richards, as usual, was the big surfer from the start, and he was penalized—and he was "called" seven times in the first set and once in the second.

There were a hundred different opinions as to the merits of Merrihew's work at the base line. "Tilden and Merrihew beat Richards" and "Richards defeated by two men" were some of the suggestions for headlines offered by spectators. But the majority of those who insisted that Merrihew was absolutely correct in his rulings, as "a rule was a rule."

I incline toward the latter view, under conditions as they are. Certainly Richards committed foot-faults, as did Tilden—as almost every player does—but I do not think that the defending champion derived any advantage because of his foot-faults over the other. In most cases it was only the toe of his foot that went over.

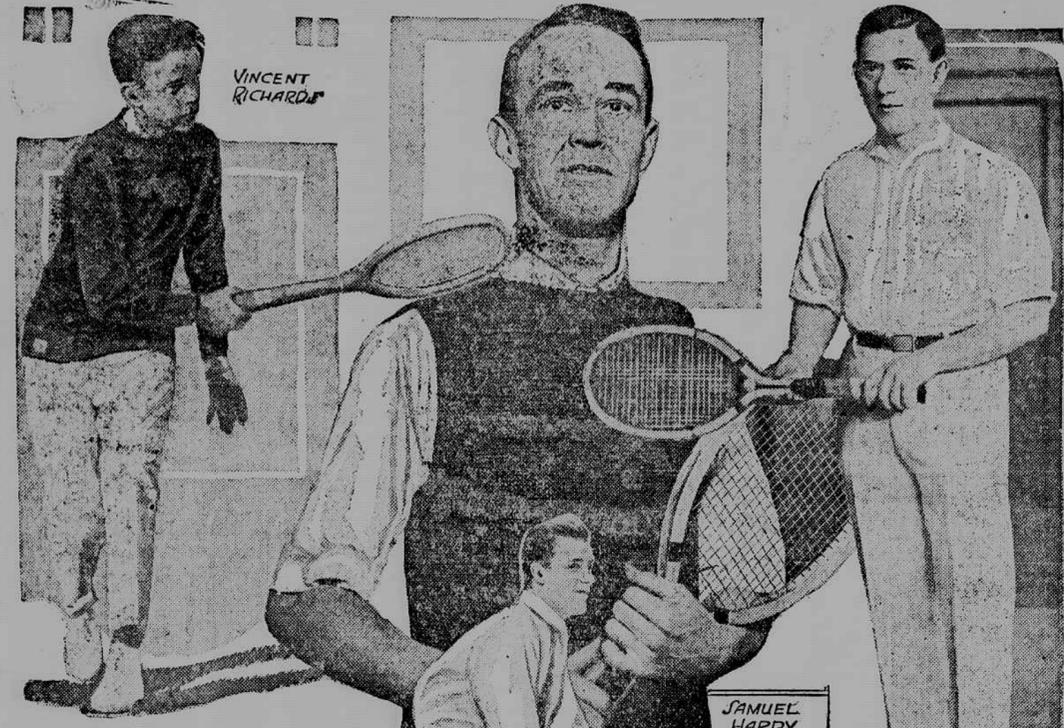

But the whole thing served to make me clear to me, at least, and that is that the rules committee has practically as vexatious a problem as before the rules committee labored over it last winter and, after months of brain work, brought forth the present ruling, under which a player is compelled to keep both feet on the ground until after the ball has been struck with there being an end of the ceaseless argument, pro and con.

Leaving the matter of yesterday's foot-faulting entirely out of the question, I do not think that Richards could have done better than he did in his championship. Tilden and I saw him in one of those unbeatable moods that the sometimes works himself up to, and that are always a delight to the spectators because you never know when to expect one.

There is no doubt that Merrihew's activity had a distinct effect on Richards. The youngerster lost heart, and also snappier in his play after the first set, and this was the reason. The schoolboy's strongest suit is his volleying. Before the foot-fault began to get on his nerves Richards was working his way into midcourt for the volley in a fruitless style and holding Tilden even.

Changes Richards' Game
But after Merrihew had penalized him two or three times the champion grew overcast and started to serve a good foot behind the baseline in the attempt to stop his breaking of the rule. But this extra foot had no effect on Richards, who in the court just that much distance behind the point where he should be to catch the ball in the air. As a result Tilden might as well have been playing against his rival with the ball landing at Richards' feet, so that he was comelled to literally "dig" it up from the floor on the half-volley. Of course, the boy's whole game slowed down almost to a walk. By the time the last set began Richards' defense was shot to pieces and Tilden romped through the set without a hit, except in the third game, which Richards took on his own service.

The greatest crowd that has ever attended a national indoor tournament in this city was banked in the gallery seats when the singles match began. The match was a great one. Sergeant Ben O'Brien, official marker of the playing surface, had exceeded himself in laying out the court for yesterday's matches. The lines were painted in glaring white, as straight and true as though done by a machine. Even the net posts and the top tape had been painted white, so that, in spite of the rather poor light, everything stood out in sharp relief, a great help to the players.

Both Tilden and Richards came out arrayed in maroon sweaters over their white shirts. Richards wore a large, white "E" on the emblem of the Preparatory School, of which he is a pupil. King Smith acted as umpire and every line was covered by a line man.

Fine Start by Winner
Tilden started the service and took the game at "love," crashing the ball over the net at dizzy speed. Time after time in this set he scored clean against Richards (eleven in all, I think it was), and the champion was not able to even get his racket on the ball at times. In the three sets Tilden made eighteenth errors, an unusual thing in championship tennis.

They went along winning on service up to 4-1, and then Richards won the ball at times. In the second set Tilden made a critical point on footfault on Tilden at a critical point. But the man from Providence took the next two games by wonderful volleying and deadly smashing, and always was his service a favorite for all distance.

Richards held his challenger on even terms through the greater part of this set by his splendid volleying, shooting his returns through very small openings in Tilden's court, and the exchanges between the two were thrilling and aroused the crowd to bursts of applause.

But after Tilden had won the opening set there was a noticeable falling off in Richards' play. The schoolboy seemed to feel that every move he made when serving was going to bring him a penalty, and he was unable to get into his volleying position quickly enough, he was helpless against his great opponent, for Tilden was going like the wind and hitting with more power and spring than I had seen him do since last summer.

Losses on Double Fault
An illustration of the degree to which Richards was affected is shown by the fact that he lost the final point of the match by making a double fault. It was a hard way to lose a championship.

Against Hardy and Voshell, Tilden and Richards were always faster and more brilliant, but in the last set they both tired badly, as the result of their singles struggle in the morning. Voshell and Hardy broke through after he held the one game advantage up to 8-7, when the defending champions gathered themselves together for a final effort and took the last three games.

As in the final games of the earlier match, the losers were defeated as the result of double fault, Hardy being the offender.

Noted Runners Will Compete For Rich Prize in 'Casey 600'

$1,000 Trophy to Winner; Griffith, Driscoll, Sellers, Murray, Starters
By A. C. Cavagnaro

What promises to be one of the best indoor track and field games of the present indoor season is the annual meet of the New York Chapter of the Knights of Columbus, which will be held at the 22d Regiment Armory on next Saturday evening. The program consists of fourteen events, featured by the "Casey 600," a $1,000 trophy, donated by Archbishop Hayes, of the Diocese of New York, will be presented to the winner of this race. It must be won three times to become the permanent property of any contestant.

The best athletes at the 600-yard distance in the East have been prepared for the contest. College and club men will compete for the rich prize and it is not unlikely that Tom Halpin's indoor record of 1 minute 13.2 seconds will be broken. Although one dozen men have sent in their entries for the main event only eight will be permitted to start.

This country will have to look to its laurels in the 5,000 and 10,000-meter and cross country runs at the coming Olympic games in Antwerp in view of the rapid development of several of the European runners. France has one strong entry in A. Guillemot, who recently started the athletes of his country by winning a sensational ten-mile race. In a recent cross country race in Spain, which attracted the largest field of runners that ever started in a race of that kind in the Iberian kingdom, covered the distance of 11,873 metres in 53 minutes and 14 3-5 seconds.

The only Americans who appear to be able to cope with the French and Spanish runners are Fred Fallor, of the Dorchester Club, Boston, and Charles Purse, Milrose A. A. Both have shown speed over distances up to twenty-five miles. Fallor is the present senior national cross country champion and ten-mile national champion. He wrestled both these titles from Purse during the 1919 campaign. The latter has announced he will retire from competition upon his return from Antwerp, if he is selected as a member of the American team.

Three of the best high jumpers in the East will exhibit their prowess in this event. All are champions. Walter Whalen, indoor and outdoor national champion, will represent the Boston A. A.; Dick Landon, intercollegiate champion, will carry the blue of Yale, and Egon Erickson, the local champion, will complete for the Bronx College House.

"Baby" McDonald, the veteran traffic cop, will put the 16-pound shot with a host of younger rivals arrayed against him. Several have earned high honors in college and club competitions, among them being Howard Elsey, Max Bobland, Paulist A. C. Andy Crawford, Dick Remer, Joe Peerman, Winfield Baker and Carl Meesters will give handicaps to a large field. Plant will endeavor to smash his former mile mark of 6 minutes 39 seconds.

In the five other open events the pick of the local athletes and many college representatives are slated to start. In the three-quarters of a mile run Sidney Leslie, unattached, will toe the scratch mark with Frank Conway, Andy Kelly, indoor record holder at 300 yards, who ran surprisingly well at the 19th Boat races last Wednesday, will be among the starters in this event.

In the two-mile handicap run Max Bobland, Paulist A. C. Andy Crawford, Brooklyn A. A., and William Ritola, Finnish-American A. C., will start from scratch. No fewer than forty runners are entered in this contest.

Ritola gave a brilliant exhibition in the John Wanamaker Commercial Institute championship road run that has made him a favorite for all distance European runners. France has one strong entry in A. Guillemot, who recently started the athletes of his country by winning a sensational ten-mile race. In a recent cross country race in Spain, which attracted the largest field of runners that ever started in a race of that kind in the Iberian kingdom, covered the distance of 11,873 metres in 53 minutes and 14 3-5 seconds.

Several Veterans Out for Lacrosse At Crescent Club

According to the present outlook, the Crescent A. C. will have a lacrosse team this season that will in all probability eclipse the record of the New Moon aggregations of pre-war days. Many of the veterans will be back in harness, which coupled with the injection of new blood into the fold will make the enthusiasts of the famous Indian game representing the Pierpont Street organization a hard combination to beat.

Determined not to give way to youth, such popular veterans as "Sars" Kennedy himself, one of the leading exponents of the game in this country; Bill Dobby, Artie Lidton and Bob Wall will resume their activities in the game. Other notables who will swing lacrosse sticks for the New Mooners will include Howard E. Jones, J. J. Robinson, R. O. Walbridge, C. B. Ward, and W. H. Price. Roy Taylor, noted for his ability as a leader, will captain the team.

The schedule arranged by Chairman R. O. Walbridge and Manager F. Paul Nicklas follows: April 17, Harvard; 24, Lehigh University; May 1, Syracuse University; 5, University of Pennsylvania; 15, Swarthmore College; 22, Hobart College; 29, Mount Washington Club from Maryland; 31, University of Toronto.

June 5, St. Simon Club from Canada; 12, Johns Hopkins University; 19, Dufferin College from Canada (pending); 26 (open), Canadian team.

Howard Wins Scratch Prize in Beach Shoot

J. A. Howard won the high scratch prize over the Jamaica Bay traps of the Bergen Beach Gun Club with the score of 94 out of a possible 100 targets yesterday. The high handicap prize was won by J. J. Kauder, of the national doubles title, and runner-up for the singles honors last year, will play through at Pinehurst in defense of her North and South title, and she appears quite likely to repeat her triumph of last year. This young Boston star has most of the qualifications that befit a true champion, and she appears to outclass the field, good as it is, that will oppose her.

The meadow grass had been set on fire by some youngsters earlier in the day and this caused a black smoke to sweep in on the traps. Until this blew away the blue rocks continually were being "blaten up" by the smoke before they were hit.

Star Players Hagen, Open Champion, Hailed as Ty Cobb of Golf

Contender for British Title Compares With Detroit in Every Way

By Ray McCarthy

PINEHURST, N. C., April 3.—The game of golf has a Ty Cobb, and his name is Walter Hagen. Incidentally, Hagen also represents Detroit. Walter is to the Scottish pastime what the "Georgia Peach" is to the national sport. In short, Hagen is there in every way when it comes to golf as Cobb meets every requirement of a truly great in baseball.

Americans and American golfers can be proud of the fact and that they have such a player and representative as Hagen to send to the British championship this June. If there is any one who will "bring the bacon" to this side it is the Detroit star, for without doubt he is at present the monarch of all golfers in this country.

It is the consensus of opinion of some twenty-five or more professional players here this week that Hagen is the best man America could possibly find to represent it in the English tournament, and they are also agreed that the natty looking golfer from the automobile metropolis has an excellent chance of returning to the States with the prize.

Undoubtedly the folk across the Atlantic are awaiting the coming of Hagen with interest and curiosity. They will not be disappointed. In fact, we venture the prediction Hagen will be a sensation abroad.

Personality is Pleasing
Hagen, like Cobb, is a big fellow, possessing a magnetic personality. Wherever he is, on or off the links, he attracts the crowd. On the course he is the most inspiring figure we know and he always carries the smile that wins.

Like Cobb, Hagen can do everything just a little better than any other player. That is why he is the champion. Clarence Hackney, another veteran of the Detroit star, Jim Barnes may be steadier, Mike Brady may be a better puller, Francis Ouimet may be a more graceful player, but Hagen is a long puller more sensational shot—but not one of these can do all of the things quite as well as Hagen.

Cobb's success, it is said, because he is the essence of confidence. This quality is in every fibre of his body. No more so than it is in Hagen's. Hagen's confidence is termed by some as being a cock-sureness, and many are claiming that this overconfidence cost him the championship here this week. Perhaps so, but it is certain that without that supreme confidence Hagen would never succeed as he does.

Cobb attracts the crowd, for one reason because of his daring. It is his same with Hagen. He takes chances that are seemingly impossible and yet after they are made everybody thinks how natural, just right. Hagen doesn't take any unnecessary chances, but he is certain that without that supreme confidence he would never succeed as he does.

He takes chances that are seemingly impossible and yet after they are made everybody thinks how natural, just right. Hagen doesn't take any unnecessary chances, but he is certain that without that supreme confidence he would never succeed as he does.

Chip Shots From Pinehurst
Pinehurst is the winter camp of General Alibi. Everybody here should turn in a card of not more than 78 or so, except that there are too many holes, holes and sand on the course and pebbles, specks and molecules on the green.

The sand greens are not very popular with the crowd, and they blame this for the defeat of Hagen. "This said that one has to grow onto the right way to play the course here, and that a good game won't necessarily bring home the prize. The sand greens are not exceptionally long, but they certainly are cramping.

Another alibi for Hagen's defeat is that the champion was unable to use his best shot—a masher pitch—because the local courses are so fast. There is much truth in this. Hagen couldn't or didn't use this shot more than two or three times during the four rounds. Where the greens are green he generally plays a pitch shot for his approach, to strike on the edge and roll down to the cup—at least, that is the idea.

Gil Nichols, former pro and now with a clothing store, started out with one crowd last Monday; but Gil's game was away off, and finally, when he was starting on the home journey and had flubbed several shots, he heaved the club away and shouted, "Pick up the ball, caddy; I'm through with this blame game." But the next day Gil was seen shooting a few—just for exercise, he said.

Chip Shots at Pinehurst
Francis Ouimet's little wife, whose personality is as engaging as that of her noted husband, is one of the most ardent rooters the Bostonian has. She follows him on all his trips, and she doesn't hesitate to tell him when he hasn't played the right shot.

If a vote were to be taken on the various golfers here this week it probably would result somewhat in this manner: Best dressed man—Walter Hagen. Most confident—Walter Hagen. Most popular—Francis Ouimet. Most serious—Jim Barnes. Most philosophical—Tom Boyd. Wittiest—Paddy Doyle. Most Philadelphia-like—Louis Taylor. Best looking—E. Augustus. Quietest—Tom McCann. Best loser—C. Hackney. Best eater—C. Gordon.

Doyle Has Good Card Despite Injured Hand

Pinehurst, N. C., April 3.—One of the features of the recent open golf tournament here, which doesn't show in the records, was the performance of Paddy Doyle, the Deal (N. J.) club professional. Last Sunday, while wrestling with Leo Deigel, the Lake Shore pro, Paddy received a kick on his right thumb which resulted in a bad sprain.

Despite the fact the thumb was swollen to twice its normal size, and that it pained him to swing a club, Paddy went the full four rounds, getting into all kinds of trouble and out by remarkable recoveries and finishing with the fine score of 306.

play is always bordering on the sensational. Cobb is constantly doing the unexpected. No one ever knows what Hagen is going to pull for his next shot. Several times this week he got into the rough or into a trap and his recoveries were simply astounding. Cobb's physique is a big factor in his success. Hagen probably has the advantage of every other star golfer in this country in this respect.

Always Does the Unexpected
Cobb's quick-thinking has often been considered the principal reason for his phenomenal success. Hagen is always thinking two or three strokes ahead of his game. After he drives he can walk to his lie (rather he seems to trot), take the situation in at a glance, take a club and walk away without further deliberation. No other golfer is as speedy as Hagen is in deciding how or what to play.

Hagen, with Barnes and Hutchinson, will leave for England about the middle of May, and will start to prepare immediately for the title meet. Here is how some of his contemporaries size up his chances: Ouimet—"I believe Walter is the class of our golfers. If anybody can win the title over there he is certainly the man. He is a fighter and a great golfer, and when the light is hardest he plays his best game."

Brady—"Hagen is a great golfer, make no mistake. He is probably the best we have here at the present time. I know of no other who can give the fellow on the other side the battle he can."

Barnes—"Walter Hagen is a wonderful golfer in every respect, and is probably as good as anybody England has at present."

Hackney—"That fellow Hagen is a wonder. When you think he's down is the time to look out. He may be down, but it's true the saying he's never out as long as the play lasts. He's a real winner. I'm so glad Walter's going to England. I think he has a fine chance of returning victorious, and I wouldn't be surprised if he won the titles there and here this year."

Coast Players Coming East
Edmund "Beanie" Levy and Wallace Bates, of the University of California, will leave for the East May 15 to compete in the national intercollegiate tennis championships at Philadelphia.
