Miss Lorenda Batchelder Married in the St. Regis

Becomes Bride of Lieutenant Colonel Piccio, Ace of Aces of the Italian Army

Miss Lorenda Batchelder, daughter of the late David J. Batchelder, a millionaire lumberman of New Orleans, was married at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Hotel St. Regis, to Lieutenant Colonel Pier Ruggiero Piccio, of the Royal Italian Air Force, the "ace of aces" of the Italian army. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Arthur H. Judge, of St. Matthew's Church, West Eighty-fourth Street, and a reception and breakfast followed.

The bride, who is only eighteen years old and her mother, lived for many years in Paris, and was educated at the Ecole la Martini, at Paris. When the war broke out Mrs. Batchelder and her daughter returned to America and they spent their residence in New York. During this period Miss Batchelder was an assistant nurse at the Grand Central Palace Hospital and also aided in some capacity in Wall Street. After the armistice she returned to Paris, where she was at a dinner party one evening that Miss Batchelder met Colonel Piccio, then air attaché in the Italian Embassy in Paris. The two were attracted to each other and they were engaged. Miss Batchelder accepted the colonel's invitation to take a flight over the city. One flight led to another and soon the engagement was announced.

Mrs. Batchelder brought her daughter to this country a few weeks ago and they have been staying at the St. Regis. Colonel Piccio followed and three weeks ago arrived in New York. Yesterday they called at the office of Board of Guardians, whom he had known during the war on the Italian front. Mrs. La Guardia accompanied who issued the license. The wedding followed. Mrs. Piccio followed as the maid of honor and Captain Carroli served as best man. Colonel Piccio is now living in one of the twelve hotels of honor awarded by the Italian Government. Bedtime Stories

Whitefoot, the Wood Mouse, Gets the Message By Thornton W. Burgess

After all is done and said, Its size don't show what's in a head. —Danny Meadow Mouse.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse is one of the smallest of the little people who live in the Green Forest. Being so small, he is one of the most timid. You see, by day and by night sharp eyes are constantly watching for Whitefoot, and he knows it. Never for an instant while he is outside where sharp eyes may see him does he forget that they are watching for him. To forget even for one little moment might mean—well, it might mean the end of little Whitefoot. He is so afraid of being seen that he is always hiding back into his hole without waiting to find out if there really is any danger. If you or I had as many real frights in a year as Whitefoot has in a day we would, I suspect, get a lot of our minds. Certainly we would be the most unhappy people in all the Great World.

But Whitefoot is not unhappy. Not a bit of it. He is a very happy little fellow. There is a great deal of wisdom in the pretty little head of his. There is more real sense in it than in some very big heads. When some of his neighbors make fun of him for being so very, very timid he doesn't try to pretend that he isn't afraid. He doesn't get angry. He simply says: "Of course I'm timid, very timid indeed. I'm afraid of almost everything. I would be foolish not to be. It is because I am afraid that I am alive and happy right now. I hope I shall never be any less timid than I am now, for it would mean that sooner or later I would fall to run in time and would be gobbled up. It isn't cowardly to be timid when danger is all around. And it isn't bravery to take a foolish and needless risk. So I seldom go far from home. It isn't safe for me, and I know it."

"A message you'll do well to heed. It is from Old Mother Nature," retorted Chatterer.

It is from Old Mother Nature," retorted Chatterer.

"Yes, from Old Mother Nature, and if you will take my advice you will heed it," replied Chatterer. "She says we are to come to school with the rest of us at sun-up to-morrow morning."

Hughes Scores Nation's Trend To Autocracy

War Powers Exercised After Military Exigency Passed, He Says in Harvard Centenary Address

Liberty Is Disregarded

Doubts Constitutional Government Could Survive Another Conflict

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 21.—Charles E. Hughes, speaking at the centenary of Harvard Law School here to-day, declared that "in the art of governing ourselves we not only fall short of what we should expect in a free people of so great intelligence, but we frequently present a sorry spectacle." His subject was "Some Observations on Legal Education and Democratic Progress."

"A passion for legislation is not a sign of democratic progress," he said; "and in the mass of measures introduced in the Legislatures of our free commonwealths there is too little evidence of perspective and an abundance of elaborate and dreary facilities. Occasionally a constructive measure of great benefit is skillfully planned, but we are constantly impressed with the lost motion and the vast waste in the endeavor of democracy to function wisely."

Fed Autocratic Appetite "The regrettable thing," Mr. Hughes continued, "is that the tendency to enact uncertain laws seems to be increasing, and what is still worse, that the people tolerate it and that there are but faint demands for improvement. Our material progress seems to be the result of a fortunate coincidence of political expediency and disregard of the lessons of history, there has been a disposition to revert to the methods of tyranny in order to meet the problems of democracy, and with slight consideration of larger issues, we create autocratic power by giving administrative officials who can threaten indictment the opportunities to enact statutes without any appropriate definition of crime."

"We went to war for liberty and democracy, with the result that we fed the autocratic appetite, and, through a fiction permissible only because the courts cannot know what every one knows, we have seen the war powers, which are essential to the preservation of the nation in time of war, exercised broadly after the military exigency had passed and in conditions for which they were never intended, and we may well wonder, in view of the precedents now established, whether constitutional government, as heretofore maintained in this Republic, could survive another great war even victoriously waged."

"Apart from these conditions we cannot afford to ignore the indications that perhaps to an extent unparalleled in our history the essentials of liberty are being disregarded. Very recently information has been laid before responsible citizens at the bar of public opinion, which related to the personal rights which savor of the worst practices of tyranny. And in the conduct of trials before the courts we find a growing tendency on the part of prosecutors to resort to grossly unfair practices."

Present Methods Crude Mr. Hughes declared that "if administrative action is fettered by minute requirements imposed by the Legislature, if necessary departments are controlled by the contrary action of all controversies as to facts by ordinary courts of justice primarily adapted to other needs, the opportunities for impeding litigation will leave vast activities to the mercy of the cunning, selfish and avaricious; and the means designed for protection will defeat their own purpose. On the other hand, present methods are obviously crude and tend to an intolerable personal government."

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., June 21.—The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on General John J. Pershing, adjutant general of the Army, and Franklin K. Lane, former Secretary of the Interior, at the commencement exercises at Williams College to-day. Degrees were conferred upon 124 members of the graduating class.

General Pershing was late in reaching Williamstown and the exercises had begun when he arrived. As he appeared on the stage, he was enthusiastically applauded and a rising cheer. He shook hands with Admiral Sims, who arrived in Williamstown late last night. Both the general and the admiral showed interest in the valedictory address of Ralph Smith Munger, who took for his subject "A Soldier's Bonus," in which he opposed the granting of a bonus by Congress.

Hoover Given Degree MEDFORD, Mass., June 21.—The honorary degree of Doctor of Science was conferred on J. Edgar Hoover, and that of Doctor of Letters on Elsie Sedgwick, editor of "The Atlantic Monthly," and Margaret Deland, author, at Tufts College exercises to-day. Palace Offers Its Best Bill of Summer Season

Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer and Henry Santry's Jazz Band Excellent

This week's bill at the Palace Theatre is the best that criterion of vaudeville has offered since the summery weather forced Broadway loungers to flee. There are two novelties of unusual excellence. Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer headline in "Bits and Pieces," an entertaining musical travesty on half a dozen Broadway successes of the last season and some reminiscences of several seasons ago. They are backed by a good company and the production is richly staged.

The other outstanding number is Henry Santry, the barytone, and his jazz band. They give a fresh and delightful presentation of the music of wild elision. Santry gets more out of nine men than any one heretofore seen on Broadway, and incidentally gives a demonstration in the pathology of the saxophone.

Joe Cook, assisted by "Doc" Cook, gives his funny one-man vaudeville show, with fresh twists and turns of comedy. Others on the bill are Frances Kennedy, comedienne, with songs and monologue; Maurice Diamond and Lois Gilrie, in "Tepichorean Bits of 200"; Miles and Frye, new comedians, in a new edition of "How High is Up? How Come," and Vardon and Perry.

On the Screen William Collier Finds Smiles in Servant Problem at the Broadway

The servant question is not a serious one at all, if one is to judge by the manner in which William Collier, star in "The Hotentot" and appearing in the feature film this week at the B. S. Moss Broadway Theater, presents the matter. Mr. Collier, who has not been seen in motion pictures for several months, brings smiles and good cheer to the time-worn vulgarities and "slap-stick" methods, plays through an hour of a well-written humorous scenario on the comic troubles, called "The Servant Question," and does it to the approval of every one in his audience.

There is a light love story connected with the otherwise unromantic piece, and others in the cast do admirable work. After the Collier film there is Charlie Chaplin in a revival of "The Pawnshop," the picture which, when it first was presented on Broadway, was generally acclaimed as the comedian's best. Of course, Charlie came out yesterday a winner, with hundreds of youngsters applauding wildly after the piece had been completed and the news reel was put on.

The musical offerings of the Broadway Theater, always interesting, are unusually meritorious this week, with organ recitals and classical dancing added. There is a scenic film, a score or more of magazine pictures and news reels, and a splendidly arranged orchestra program.

The Stage Door

The Ziegfeld Follies of 1920, the fourteenth celebration of New York's favorite summer festival, opens at the New Amsterdam Theater this evening. Mr. Whiteside will commence his season in the new play in three acts by William J. McNally, entitled "As the Clouds Roll By." Irene Fenwick will play the featured role. Others in the cast are Robert Ames and Elwood Bostwick.

The Puccella Brothers, who recently terminated their engagement in "Whirligig" at the London Palace, have been placed under contract by the Shuberts for "The Midnight Lark," atop the Century. Helen Lewis is another addition to the cast of the same revue.

Maxine Brown joined the cast of "Florodora" at the Century Theater last night, singing the role of Angel.

Gen. Gorgas Convalescing LONDON, June 21.—The condition of Major General William C. Gorgas, former Surgeon General of the United States Army, who has been critically ill here, was satisfactory to his physicians this morning, it was announced by Brigadier General Robert E. Noble, U. S. A., of General Gorgas's party. General Gorgas appeared to be "on the mend," General Noble said, but his condition was considered still serious. He will be in the hospital at least two weeks longer, it was added.
