He Saw an Emperor Pray

KUANG H'SU, EMPEROR OF CHINA, was to worship at daybreak in the Imperial Lama Temple. It was sacrilege for a foreigner to look! These raw-boned Mongol priests were ugly customers to offend.

WILLARD STRAIGHT made up his mind to see a friendly Lama, religiously recant, vowed by all his Mongol gods that Straight should see. And then Straight, shaven bald-headed, in high-necked priest's robe, crouching all night among the golden Mongol idols! From afar the bugles of the Emperor's guard—approaching footsteps—the eight High Priests—wands of incense

And a few years later Straight is negotiating with the Chinese Government as the American bankers' representative for a $100,000,000 loan. In

The Tribune Fresh Air Fund

"Send More!" Country's Cry to Friends of City Children

Are you wondering whether or not to send a contribution to the Fresh Air Fund? Questioning whether it's worth while to send tenement children to the country for vacations, whether the vacations the fund provides are good ones? Here are a few letters which give side lights on the fund and its children that may help you to decide.

"I am including half of a (child's) tag for your information and wish to say that I have taken this little girl myself. I took her down to a department store and bought her an entirely new wardrobe. Two pairs of slippers, black and white; hat, coat, stockings, dresses, underwear, etc., including doll, etc. I understand her mother is in the hospital. I'd like to do it over again for a couple of months, will it be possible? Also how can I get in touch with her family? I would like to know her age, etc. She is not more than three years old. I am sure I can get her to pieces and I want to keep her for a while. At present she is at our lake home and happy as can be.

"Sincerely, MRS. B. N. JAMES." The next comes from the chairman at Binghamton, from which place 237 "Fresh Airs" have just returned.

"The 1920 campaign is over—as far as Binghamton is concerned—but, do you know, I'd like to do it over again if that was possible! Even though I had more of a task this year, and I have not on the move 'most every minute of the day, I really wish I could duplicate it. I am pretty sure the children have had a fine and profitable time, from their appearance. We had a most delightful time at the George F. Johnson picnic—wish you could have been present.

"Count on me for 1921 (D. V.). Very truly yours, "GEORGE J. MICHELLEBACH." The third is from an escort who accompanied a party of children to Corning, N. Y.

"I am very glad to have had the opportunity to be of service to the Tribune Fresh Air Fund. Some of the people were disappointed because they did not get children.

"I have never seen any one get such a reception as the children got in Corning. Nearly every one in town came to the station to meet us. The children were I think very happy that morning, and said they had lovely homes. Sincerely, "JOSEPHIN' HOFER." Does not each of these letters breathe the spirit of hospitality? Then how could we object to letting the children go to other than good vacations?

Don't hesitate a minute longer over sending your contribution. The fund needs to-day the country for needy boys and girls.

39 Postmen Ask Retirement Five clerks and thirty-nine letter carriers of the Brooklyn Postoffice, all of whom have been in the service thirty years or longer, applied for retirement yesterday under the postoffice pension law which has just become effective. Their applications were approved.

The pension law provides that those in the service thirty years or more are entitled to $750 a year after retirement; those in the service from 27 to 29 years, $648; 24 to 27 years, $576; 21 to 24 years, $504; 18 to 21 years, $432; and from 15 to 18 years, $360. The usual age for retirement of clerks and letter carriers is sixty-five, that of supervisory officers sixty.

Wife of John Wanamaker Dies at Shore

End Comes at Atlantic City After 3 Months' Illness; Husband and Her Three Children Are at Bedside

She Was 80 Years Old Noted for Charitable Work; Shunned Ostentation of Society; Sought Home Life

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Mary B. Wanamaker, wife of John Wanamaker, died at 11:20 a. m. to-day at Atlantic City, after an illness of almost eight months. She suffered a relapse on Monday and her age and weakened heart prevented her from rallying. Her husband and their children, Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Mrs. Norman McLeod and Rodman Wanamaker, were at her bedside, with Major Warburton and Major McLeod and several grandchildren.

Since the Christmas holidays Mrs. Wanamaker had been at the Ambassador Hotel at the shore resort. An attack of pleurisy which she suffered then developed into pneumonia and heart disease ensued. One of her physicians said that she also had pinal disease. The entire second floor of the hotel was leased by Mr. Wanamaker and a staff of specialists and nurses installed.

Mrs. Wanamaker's body was brought to Philadelphia this afternoon in a special car. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the Wanamaker estate, Lindenhurst, Jenkintown, Pa. Interment will be at the Cemetery of St. James the Less.

Mrs. Wanamaker was eighty years old and was Mary Erringer Brown before her marriage to Mr. Wanamaker in 1860. Although the wife of a man known throughout the world, Mrs. Wanamaker cared nothing for public life and was seldom seen at any large functions or important gatherings. She entertained occasionally, but not more than her position required. Her interests were centered in her home and in her favorite charities, to which she gave anonymously in most cases.

Interested in Children's Ward Mrs. Wanamaker was especially interested in the Presbyterian Hospital, Bethany Presbyterian Church, and the North American Sanitarium. At the Presbyterian Hospital Mrs. Wanamaker built the children's ward in 1877 in memory of her mother, Harriet Erringer Brown. The big iron gate in the ward, open to the sky, surrounding the children's building is called the Wanamaker gate, since it was locked to every one but Mrs. Wanamaker, until two or three years ago, when her health prevented, Mrs. Wanamaker was a frequent visitor at the hospital.

She made the rounds of all the beds in the ward, spoke to each of the children, and talked over practical matters with the nurses in charge. Each Christmas, including the last one, she sent the children toys to the hospital. Two or three times each week she provided an entertainer for the children who told them stories. Two beds in the ward were endowed by Mrs. Wanamaker. One of them was the birthday of her son, Thomas Brown Wanamaker, who died in 1908, and the other in memory of Fernanda Wanamaker. Her other bed is endowed by Rodman Wanamaker as a tribute to his mother.

Mrs. Wanamaker was also the largest individual contributor to the North American Sanitarium. At Thanksgiving and Christmas she remembered the little crippled children with special gifts. Neely members of the congregation at Bethany Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, in which Mrs. Wanamaker was a member, were the recipients of her charitable gifts. She also gave liberally to the Social Welfare Bureau maintained by the congregation.

Mrs. Wanamaker was the last of her family. She had three brothers, George, Nathan and William H., all of whom are dead. It was with Nathan Brown that Mr. Wanamaker started his first store, at Sixth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia. It was a small store which prospered under the name of Wanamaker & Brown.

Mrs. Wanamaker was little known except by members of the family and by those whose acquaintance she made through her charities. Even when her husband was Postmaster General she did not give up her seclusion any more than was absolutely necessary. Mr. and Mrs. Wanamaker had six children. Only three are left living. Mrs. Wanamaker was a devoted mother and wished for nothing more than to be allowed to remain in the home of her family. From social duties which would take her away from her children.

As a tribute to Mrs. Wanamaker's memory, the Wanamaker store in Philadelphia, New York, London and Paris were closed to-day and will not reopen until Tuesday morning.

Funeral Services Held in Peking, China, for Ida Vere PEKING, Aug. 20.—Funeral services were held at the American Legation here yesterday for Ida Vere, daughter of Representative William S. Vere, of Pennsylvania. EDGAR E. NEWELL WARETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Edgar E. Newell, sixty-seven years old, president of the New York State division of the B. O. Bennett highway, died this morning at his summer home near Ogdensburg. His death was due to a stroke of paralysis.

Mr. Newell had served for four terms as Mayor of Ogdensburg and for three terms as a member of the State Commission on Penal Institutions. He was a presidential elector in the Progressive party in 1912. He also was honorary president of the Northern New York Development League.

HARRY AYRES Harry Ayres, forty-four years old, second officer of the steamship Harold Walker of the Pan-American Petroleum Transport Company, was stricken with an attack of acute indigestion while on a train at the Bayonne, N. J., station last night and died before the arrival of the ambulance surgeon when the train was stopped at the Bayonne Hospital. Ayres lived in Portland Me. and was en route to his home when he was stricken.
