

mitted evidenced considerable interest concerning a book written by George Creel, former chairman of the committee on public information, which the Democratic National Committee is now testing, are seeking to place in every home as a panacea for all the ills of the world.

Mr. Gerard was the first witness called. He gave the names of the other members of the Democratic Finance Committee as follows: Alexander H. R. Alexander, Allan A. Ryan, Charles B. Alexander, J. B. Stanchfield, Morgan J. O'Brien, Thomas L. Chabourne, William Church Osborn, R. Thornton Wilson, Frank M. Patterson, Alexander Crocker, George Gordon Battle, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Gordon Auchincloss, son-in-law of Colonel E. M. House, Percy Strauss, nephew of Oscar Strauss, and Paul F. Fisher. Mr. Gerard was invited to be a member of the committee, but declined, he said.

When Mr. Gerard told the committee that he would take any amount of money for the Democratic campaign that he could get, Senator Kenyon asked: "Would you take a contribution of $100,000?" "A sum so large as that would shock the public and defeat the party," Mr. Gerard replied.

Mr. Gerard submitted to the Senate the names of the Democratic National Committee showing data since July 5. They repeated that $5,000 contributions were received from Bernard Baruch, Charles E. Hughes, August Belmont and Joseph E. Willard, American Ambassador to Spain, Edward L. Denney, the California oil man, and $25,000 from Senator Kenyon. Senator Kenyon called attention to the fact that the names of some of the cabinet officers were in the list of smaller contributors.

"I don't see Mr. Baker in this list," he remarked. "I suppose his contribution was too small," replied Mr. Gerard. "He gave only $500."

The Democrats have not prepared any budget, Mr. Gerard said. He added, however, that it was tentatively prepared to spend $275,000 for publicity and advertising. He said that Governor Cox's special train and $100,000 for the speakers' bureau.

"In addition to this," Mr. Gerard said, "Mr. Roosevelt wants his expenses paid for the campaign to more than $100,000 so far. He has promised to give $5,000."

Should the Democrats collect more than $100,000, Mr. Gerard said, the excess would be had made a policy not to ask officeholders for contributions. He told the committee that he considered it out any system for regulating campaign expenditures.

Creel Book Commented On Senator Kenyon then asked what the witness knew about the Creel book. "I was presented with a copy," Mr. Gerard said. "Mr. Creel told me that the publishers were not doing very well with it, but that he had devised a plan for circulating it very well."

Senator Kenyon read from a circular, signed by Senator Harrison, which characterized the Creel book as a ringing answer to every lie and misrepresentation of the Republicans and valuable as a campaign document.

"If the Democratic National Committee had the money," the circular continued, "it would place it in the hands of every voter, for we consider it an unanswerable argument. We would, if we could, place it in the hands of every Democratic speaker."

Colonel Thompson then was called to the stand. He said the Republican and means committee was composed of himself as chairman, former Senator John W. Weeks, William Cooper Proctor, T. Coleman du Pont, W. H. Crocker, T. Coleman du Pont, W. H. Crocker, Oklahoma Representative Slensky, Virginia, and Mrs. John B. Pratt, of New York.

"Whom are they for? They are for Cox."

"How about the Post?" asked Senator Reed. "That is one of the smaller papers," the witness answered. "It doesn't amount to much."

The list of members of the Gerard committee "much more than averaged up" with the membership of the Republican Ways and Means Committee, so far as wealth was concerned, Colonel Thompson said. "And they are the ones who have been raising this bank," the witness continued. "I want to show that big money is on both sides."

Mr. Barnes, when called to testify regarding his book, Republicanism in 1920, said that it is a venture of his paper, The Albany Journal, contracted for in 1918, when he was temporarily out of control of the management of the Albany Journal Company.

He emphatically denied that any of the contributions for the book were for the Republican campaign fund, and asserted that the only benefit the Republicans would get from the circulation of the volume would be through the book itself. Only 200 had been printed, he said, and the total publication would be only 2,000.

"Evidently some solicitor had a quarrel with Mr. Young, who had the contract for securing subscriptions," said Mr. Barnes, "and went to The New York World with what he thought was a great political story, and The World published it."

Charges Photograph Was Faked Mr. Barnes said the signatures of well known Republicans who subscribed to the book had been stolen. Mr. Barnes submitted copies of the contract blanks used by the solicitors and charged that two forms of the blanks must have been combined in one photograph submitted to the committee.

The committee could not secure possession of the photographic copies it had and Mr. Barnes will be recalled. Charles F. MacDonald, chairman of the State Democratic Committee of New Jersey, testified that he handled all the funds for the Democratic state organization in New Jersey. He said that he had been unable to secure funds from the Democratic National Committee and that he knew nothing of efforts of the liquor dealers to collect money for the Cox campaign.

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, of Trenton, testified as chairman of the Republican State Committee of New Jersey, that his committee was receiving 8 per cent of the $300,000 set as the quota for that state. The county committee would receive 32 per cent, he said, and the national committee 60 per cent. The national committee's campaign fund, he said, had netted only $74,500 up to September 1.

The Senate committee has subpoenaed to-morrow Robert Scripps, whom Governor Cox is alleged to have assisted in obtaining the photograph. Scripps, of New York; Mrs. L. J. Llewellyn, Joseph J. Heffernan, editor of The Stars and Stripes; George B. Lockwood, editor of the National Republican, and Federal Commissioner of Education Claxton.

Man Who Gave Girl Warning of Blast Hunted

(Continued from page one) to appear before the grand jury to-day. The seven witnesses examined by the District Attorney's office yesterday added nothing to the stories which they told shortly after the disaster. One of them was Patrick Mettee, of 232 West Sixteenth Street, who says he saw a Du Pont wagon in Wall Street the day before the explosion. Assistant District Attorney Talley mentioned that the weights had been found to contain a white substance now being analyzed.

When the grand jury adjourned yesterday, Judge Talley ordered that subpoenas be issued for drivers and supervisors of all explosive companies in the city. It is his desire to check up once and for all the whereabouts of all moving equipment of these companies on the day of the explosion.

Numerous Warnings Received Warnings which involve alleged impending blasts are being received by officials and private citizens all over the country. Chief Lamb announced that two such warnings had been turned over to him yesterday. One of these was addressed to "Masonic Fraternity, Providence, R. I." and was inscribed as follows: "The stunt you tried to have pulled off at the shop today with the police did not work. Shame on you and give me my liberty forever! Have exposed to-day's trick."

The other was addressed to the "Main Postoffice, at Washington Street, Brooklyn, and read: 'Clear the building at 12:15 a. m. Saturday for me. Thank you. W. C. No. 21.'"

This was mailed at 1 a. m. yesterday at the Brooklyn Postoffice. Mr. Lamb reiterated his belief that the Wall Street explosion had all the earmarks of the work of Italian anarchists, organizations pointing to the circulars and the circumstances surrounding the disaster.

"No other organization, to my mind," said Mr. Lamb, "would attempt such a deed, when it knew that the only persons to suffer would be innocent stenographers and clerks. Radical organizations are bound to suffer because of this act."

Municipal structures in Trenton and Boston were placed under heavy guard yesterday because of threats received by the mayors of those cities. A letter sent to Mayor Peters of Boston read: "Watch your buildings. We are here from New York. We will get you. The signature was 'HWIX.' The Trenton Mayor was told: 'If you and the real estate dealers don't let us poor people into empty houses we will blow you all to hell.'"

The Postmaster of Cleveland, Ohio, received a letter stating that two wagon loads of explosives were on their way to the city to blow up banks there.

W. K. Vanderbilt Stable Bought by Macomber PARIS, Sept. 22.—The stable of the late W. K. Vanderbilt has been sold to A. K. Macomber, the millionaire American horseman, it is understood here. The price named is 12,000,000 francs, the first instalment of which, 5,000,000 francs, was paid to-day.

The sale, the report says, includes the complete stable of thirty-eight brood mares, four stallions, thirty-two yearlings, twenty foals and all horses in training, as well as the Poisy estate and the Deauville property. Negotiations over the contract with William Duke, the Vanderbilt trainer, are understood to be still pending.

All Doubtful States Ours, Is Claim of McCormick

Senator Fall Asserts That New Mexico Also Will Go Republican

Senator Medley, of Chicago, headquarters of the Illinois, at Republican National Committee headquarters yesterday, predicted a Republican sweep that would carry with it the doubtful states. Senator Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico, who also visited headquarters, said the Republicans would carry New Mexico this year. Senator McCormick said: "All signs promise a crushing Republican victory. Chicago headquarters count Missouri and Kentucky, no less than Indiana and Ohio, as Republican states. Oklahoma and Tennessee are doubtful. There is a general bitterness against the President and reaction from the Wilson policies, domestic as well as foreign, manifest among all elements of our population. The people are sick of adventure abroad and at home. They understand the connection between the unendurable burden of taxation, the let-down of business and the steadily increasing unemployment."

"People regard us at once humorous and scandalous Governor Cox's continued and studied misstatement of the fact. They are disappointed that the nomination with the great name who is running on the ticket with him should have fallen into the same habit of loose speech."

Senator William W. Johnson probably will begin speaking out of the Mississippi about the third week of October and will undoubtedly begin his tour in the 7th Congressional District of Alabama against the President and reaction from the Wilson policies, domestic as well as foreign, manifest among all elements of our population. The people are sick of adventure abroad and at home. They understand the connection between the unendurable burden of taxation, the let-down of business and the steadily increasing unemployment."

Leaders Agree On Measures to Aid Housing

(Continued from page one) Message of his excellency Governor Smith, so that the municipality will be able to appropriate money to purchase busses and operate them in the streets of the City of New York to the end that the people may be accommodated and not be at the mercy of the traction interests."

Scores of schemes to solve the housing crisis are being sent to Albany by legislators and individuals. The Tenants' Union of New York, 1169 Broadway, which asserts it was organized in 1908 "in the interest of 1,000,000 rent-paying families," sent to members a circular in which it said: "The great need of our city is new houses. The obstacles to the building of houses are two sets of legalized ruffians—land speculators and money lenders."

"The legal privilege to forestall home sites and blackmail families who must have homes is too cheap in this state. Tax the parasites off the home sites. Organize the bricks for the love of service, and built houses out of the need of the families or to give the children a place to live and grow, these greedy speculators could and would absorb all the advantages. Comfortably housed themselves, many with their own families raised and some nearing their graves, they do not hesitate to rob their unfortunate neighbors and take from the young family a portion of their investment, which, if left with the family, would be sufficient to build a home."

Saratoga Officials Aid in Nassau Gambling Inquiry Upstate Prosecutor and Investigator Confer with Judge Scudder: Same Men Involved

Weyman S. Bascom, Deputy Attorney General and Acting Assistant District Attorney of Saratoga County, Thomas A. Wood, an Albany attorney, and Abraham Weinberg, an investigator, were in conference at Mineola, L. I., yesterday with Supreme Court Justice Scudder and District Attorney Charles R. Weeks in connection with the alleged gambling in Nassau County. Weinberg investigated gambling conditions in Nassau last spring, and he is said to have been retained for similar work in Saratoga County. He has been operating in Nassau and Saratoga counties. It is expected that John Shaughnessy, of Lynbrook, who pleaded guilty to a gambling indictment in Nassau County last week, will be called before Justice Scudder to-day to tell what he knows about alleged protection to gamblers.

Coal Supply Declared Safe Operators Say Wants of Consumers Will Be Met

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—All wants of coal consumers will be met before winter sets in, the National Coal Association declared to-night. "Householders need not feel it necessary to fill their bins with the entire winter's supply at this time," declared the statement. "By taking only enough coal now to tide them over December 1, the entire situation will work out with no great privation to any one."

For the immediate use of consumers in the Middle West the association suggested adoption of a cooperative program by railroads, coal operators and dealers so to assure a supply until December. By that time, it was said, the wants of the Northwest will have been filled, which, it was pointed out, is necessary before the close of navigation on the Great Lakes.

Irish Sneers Greet British Pilgrims Here

Women Pickets, Carrying Placards, Await Arrival of Sulgrave and Anglo-American Society Visitors

Delegates to Tour U. S. Party Will Take Part in Celebration of Landing of the Early Settlers

British members of the Sulgrave Institution and Anglo-American Society arrived yesterday on the Cunard liner Carmania to take part in the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims. They also will travel extensively throughout this country for the purpose of learning the American point of view and promoting closer amity between England and the United States.

The party was met at the pier by a large company from the American branch of the Sulgrave Institution, headed by John A. Stewart, chairman of the board of governors. Outside the pier at Fourteenth Street the combined party met a delegation of Irish women pickets carrying large placards which bore pointed phrases of welcome to the British celebrities. One of the big placards read: "Anglo-American friendship! Bah!" And another: "Pilgrims, the English hired the Indian savages to murder your ancestors."

This latter announcement caused Lord Rathereadan, the chairman of the English delegation, and others to smile. Members of Pilgrim Party With Lord Rathereadan were Lady Rathereadan, Admiral Sir William Lowther Grant, K. C. B., who was in command of the British naval forces in American waters during the war; Sir Arthur E. Shipley, of Cambridge University; Professor J. Foskes Jackson, D. S. O. M. C.; Stanley Udale, of the British Manufacturers' Association; George McKinley, an American banker in London, and Harry H. Ferris, secretary to the British Sulgrave Institution.

The visitors, with the exception of Admiral Grant, went directly from the pier to a train, which carried them to Syracuse for a brief visit to the western part of the state. Admiral Grant was met by Captain Geoffrey Blake, British naval attaché at Washington, who accompanied him to the capital. Lord Rathereadan said that it was unfortunate that the visit came at a time of great political activity.

"Our mission here has nothing whatever to do with politics," he said. "The reason for our coming is merely to bring about a closer friendship between the two countries, and our appeal is to the American people. We are here to take part in the commemoration of the landing of the Mayflower's pilgrims and to attend the services."

Labor Truce Terms Partly Repudiated By Italian Workers

Men Refuse to Vacate Factories; Seize Three More Plants and Claim Wages for Period of the Strike

ROME, Sept. 22.—Italian metal workers who occupied factories in some of the larger cities last month, notably Turin and Florence, are refusing to evacuate the plants in accordance with the settlement agreement recently reached with the employers after government intervention, according to dispatches to the Giornale d'Italia. In Turin, in fact, says a message from that city, three additional works were occupied by the men to-day.

In fifty other works in Turin, the dispatch states, the majority of the men decided not to abandon the plants unless they receive ample guarantees against reprisals from the masters and the government. They also are claiming payment of their wages for the entire period of their occupation of the works.

A Florence dispatch to the newspaper says that in some of the works there the men have barricaded the entrance rather than return the establishments to the masters. A Genoa message to the same newspaper reports that syndicalists and anarchists are distributing manifestos to the workmen saying they have been betrayed by the Confederation of Labor in the settlement.

The New Blouses for Autumn are among the most important and attractive features of the season's opening display on the Second Floor.

Extremely striking are the decorations in batik that distinguish many of the newest and smartest models; and not less so are the embroidered effects, wrought in metal threads, in beads, in silk or in wool. Sometimes the decoration covers virtually the entire blouse; sometimes it takes the form of a border; but in all cases it definitely enhances the character of the blouse and emphasizes its attractiveness.

An interesting feature of the exhibit is the unusually large collection of costume blouses, designed to harmonize with the fashionable tailored suit. These are shown in duvetyne, chiffon velvet, satin, tricolette, and the always popular chiffon and georgette. Many vivid color effects and color accentuations are in evidence, but there is also a generous selection of the more conservative tones.
