MRS. MURIEL MacSWINEY and the winning smile she bestowed upon the boisterous New York crowd of Irish enthusiasts, each one of whom strove eagerly to shake her hand when the little widow of the Lord Mayor of Cork stepped ashore from the liner Celtic a week ago yesterday. Keystone

SKIRTS HAVEN'T GOT A CHANCE. Not with the newly organized Women's Knickerbocker Club in Washington, the members of which hope to enlist women golfers of the country to adopt knickers for golf. These two, both members of the same club, putting on the green o, the Bannockburn Club course, Mrs. G. T. Cunningham and Mrs. C. H. Warner, in the first tourney ever played where "trousers" were the first condition of eligibility. Nat'l from Keystone

"HERE'S HOW!" President-elect Harding pauses between shots on the Gatun links, in the Canal Zone, to enjoy a refreshing drink of cool spring water supplied by the dusky two-legged water cooler on the right, who skillfully juggled his weird headpiece around the course in the wake of the Senator's party. International
