

Jersey Guard Fight May Go To Legislature

Wide Inquiry Will Be Demanded to Fix Blame for Disruption of Forces Over Election of Commander

Enlisted Men May Quit

Governor, Charged With Aiding in Defeating Battle, Veterans' Choice, Is Silent

TRENTON, Jan. 29.—With the National Guard of New Jersey in such a demoralized condition that complete disruption of the state's military forces is threatened, Governor Edwards, Adjutant General Gilkyson and Brigadier General Howard S. Borden, the storm center of the squabble, are looking about for some means of adjusting the difficulties.

The next development in the controversy is expected to be a demand for a legislative inquiry into the entire administration of the National Guard of New Jersey with a view toward determining upon whom the responsibility rests for the development of a situation which has deprived the Guard of the services of some of its most experienced and capable officers and has shattered the morale of the enlisted men.

The feeling of dissatisfaction with the administration of the Guard is particularly manifest among members of the Legislature from south Jersey, but is by no means confined to this section. In the last few days the question of the advisability of a legislative investigation of the trouble has been extensively discussed among the lawmakers, and it is probable that the proposition will develop definitely on Monday, when the legislative session will be resumed.

As the matter now stands, the 3d Regiment, which saw active service in France, has only one officer, Major John Leonard, of Elizabeth, all the others having followed the example of the regimental commander, Colonel Winfield S. Price, in resigning as a protest against the election of Colonel Borden, millionaire woolen manufacturer and sportsman, over Lieutenant Colonel George M. Buttle, of Arlington, who served in France and who was favored by World War veterans for promotion to command the brigade.

But Governor Edwards, who is charged with having brought his influence to bear in order to obtain the defeat of Buttle, and General Borden have remained absolutely silent since the beginning of the controversy. The situation now has reached such an acute stage, however, that some action is imperative if the complete disorganization of the National Guard is to be forestalled. The fear is entertained that the enlisted men of the 3d Regiment, virtually all of whom are in complete sympathy with their officers, will also sever their connections with the Guard. In fact, some have already done so.

Two Guard Officers Quit

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 29.—The resignations of First Lieutenant George V. Henderson and Second Lieutenant William S. Teggart of Company H, National Guard, are in the hands of Captain George E. Jamison, and the company commander will, it is understood, present his resignation with the others when he visits Adjutant General Frederick Y. Gilkyson at Trenton to-morrow.

"In consequence of absolute disapproval of the election and appointment of an inexperienced man as brigadier general in the New Jersey National Guard," is the reason given by the two officers of the Asbury Park company for tendering their resignations from the organization.

Fess Says Congress Will Save Billion in U. S. Expenses

Ohioan, at McKinley Day Banquet, Asserts Taxation Is Most Vital Problem; Needs Immediate Action

CANTON, Ohio, Jan. 29.—That a cut of a billion dollars in the cost of government will be effected by the resignation of the McKinley Day banquet, Congressman Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, at the annual banquet of the McKinley Club, attended by 500 men and women and held in observance of the birthday of the late President William McKinley, whose home was in this city. Congressman Fess also declared that taxation is the most important problem needing immediate attention by Congress. He lauded the martyred President and President-elect Warren G. Harding saying:

"In my judgment, no time calls so loudly for McKinley's type of leadership as this day of readjustment. It is but declaring a generally accepted truth to say that not least in the phenomenal vote of confidence recently given was the general understanding that the McKinley type of leadership is fully recognized in Warren G. Harding."

House Revolts Against System of Appropriating

General Attack Launched on Legislation Included in Measures by Powerful New Committee of 35

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—A plea from House Leader Mondell for speedier disposition of appropriation bills, prompted by the increasing possibility that Congress will be unable to meet President-elect Harding's request that all supply measures be cleared before March 4, brought to-day from members of both parties in the House a general attack on the whole new system of appropriating.

Assails Interschurch Quizz Of Steel Concerns

Dr. Day Says Board Did Not Represent Methodists, but Individuals

Dr. James R. Day, chancellor of Syracuse University, yesterday said the committee of the Interschurch Federation, which last summer investigated the United States Steel Corporation, was not truly representative of the denominations comprising the interchurch movement. He said specifically that the Methodist delegates, led by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of which Church Dr. Day also is a prominent member, represented not the Methodists but themselves.

The chancellor's remarks were made in the course of a discussion of "Labor Problems and the Public Rights" at the National Republican Club, 54 West Fortieth Street, in which he assailed labor leaders and the workers of hard not only to industry, but to the rank and file laborers themselves. His argument was opposed by Hugh Frayne, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor, Father Francis P. Duff, chairman of the 16th Infantry, and Charles Stehle, author and investigator of industrial problems.

"The committee of the Interschurch Federation which took it upon themselves to investigate the affairs of a great corporation, providing employment for hundreds of thousands of workers and conducting its business in a legitimate manner, represented not the denominations of their callings, but themselves solely," Chancellor Day declared. "I state positively now that the delegates from my own Church acted without authority of the great body of Methodists."

Dr. Day assailed the type of unionism that denies an employee the right to work for whom and for what he pleases and provokes strikes resulting in property damage and loss of life as an invasion of the Constitution. Mr. Frayne said it was the attitude of labor that the working man was not getting too much for his services now but that he had always gotten too little before the war.

House Revolts Against System of Appropriating

General Attack Launched on Legislation Included in Measures by Powerful New Committee of 35

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—A plea from House Leader Mondell for speedier disposition of appropriation bills, prompted by the increasing possibility that Congress will be unable to meet President-elect Harding's request that all supply measures be cleared before March 4, brought to-day from members of both parties in the House a general attack on the whole new system of appropriating.

It was the first outcropping of an antagonism to the new enlarged Committee on Appropriations, smoldering since the special session was convened, and which has increasingly hampered the passage of bills. The feeling has now reached a point which threatens to strip the committee's bills of all usefulness.

Mr. Mondell's plea was directly in behalf of the diplomatic and consular appropriations bill now being considered by the House. This measure has been so battered with points of order that virtually all but a few unimportant features will probably be missing by the time it is passed. The bone of the contention between the new committee and its defenders and opponents of the system is in an agreement made at the time of its creation, that the committee of thirty-five would exercise no legislative powers. In the past the various standing committees have combined legislation with their appropriation bills, and while they were subject to points of order, the measures have for the most part gone through as drafted by the committee.

Unable to Keep Pact
The new committee on appropriations has apparently found it impossible in a majority of cases to provide appropriations without legislating to some extent. As the result of this, the bodies of its bills are subject to elimination by points of order.

Former chairmen and members of the committees which previously had the appropriating powers form the bulk of opposition to the practical workings of the new system. They say the situation created is this:
The big committee on appropriations places the work of drafting the money bills in the hands of sub-committees of five and their product is that of a sub-committee, while under the old system the measures were drawn up by members of the full committee, many of whom have had years of experience studying the maintenance needs of the various departments and other branches of the government.

It is also asserted that this way of handling the bills is not necessary to successful operation of a budget system and that if present conditions are permitted to continue, they will permit complete assumption by the Senate of all appropriating powers.

Points to Huge Savings

Savings under the system justify it, according to Chairman Good, of the Committee on Appropriations. He estimates that $1,250,000,000 will be saved for the government. Total appropriations by the House this year, including the diplomatic and consular bills, upon which hearings have not been concluded, will be under $3,475,000,000, his analysis shows.

Taking the floor shortly before the House resumed consideration of the diplomatic and consular bill to-day, Mr. Good declared that Congress is appropriating under new conditions and asked the members to show the new committee as much consideration as has been given the old committees in the past.

Representative John H. Small of North Carolina followed Mr. Mondell. He declared that the present new system of appropriating is not in the interest of wise legislation and that the House should return to the old system.
