

Giants Rally in Eighth Triple by Gaston, in Pinch Hit Role, Humbles Ruether

After Failing to Score in Seventh, With Bases Filled and None Out, McGraw's Maulers Collect Three Runs and Beat League Champions

By Charles A. Taylor Alphonse Gaston, greetings! For it was you who came up in the pinch yesterday when everything was going wrong with our Giants. You, Alphonse, delivered the blow that turned the tide and again we say "Greetings!" and also "Most welcome."

Alphonse did more than he was expected to do in that eighth inning of the game, with the Dodgers at the Polo Grounds. An ordinary single would have sufficed, but the triple Alphonse produced sent two runs across the plate, tying the score, and George Burns bounced a single off the glove of "Duke" Ruether, which scored Monroe, running for Gaston, with the winning tally. The score was 3 to 2 and the league champions were halted in their tracks after winning eleven straight.

Everything looked dark and gloomy for the Giants when the Battle of Boroughs opened. The skies were most ominous and the ancient god of the winds, our old friend Aeolus, was blowing his strongest blasts across Henry Fabian's lawn. Ten thousand brave fans defied the howling winds, and of the ten thousand Flatbush fans, a goodly portion of the gathering. Uncle Robbie's men had won eleven games in succession, and why, pray ye, should the Giants be so lucky? The wind and rain, appear in force to see the National League champions once more humble the nine from this side of the bridge.

Flashback Out in Force Flatbush was there. And how Uncle Robbie's rosters roared when the Dodgers took a two-run lead in the sixth inning. Ruether, who had beaten the Giants twice on the home lot in Brooklyn last week, was going strong and seemed impossible and improbable that the Manhattanites would break through to victory. But Alphonse Gaston did the impossible, and it seems fitting just now to tell how he did it.

The Giants entered upon the eighth inning with their flags at half mast. King, who has a special liking for southpaw pitching, opened this decisive stanza with a double to left field. The ball bounced merrily along the foul line past Johnston, Jimmy, the second baseman, and the Giants and Dodgers last week, didn't realize that this particular shot by King was the opening wedge destined to break the winning streak of the Dodgers and name the nine of the Giants into their fifth victory in a row.

Goldie Rapp was lucky, for his bunted fly, which was meant as a sacrifice, eluded the grasp of both Ketchikan and Ruether and went for a hit. Frank Snyder sacrificed, third to first, and then Alphonse Gaston suddenly appeared in the batting box.

Alphonse pitched the ball between center and right, and when Hi Myers finally caught up with the horsehide King and Rapp had talked with the king, that tied the score. George Burns, the first baseman, stepped in with such force that it veered from the glove of Ruether and rolled into right field for a single, on which Monroe scored the winning run.

Nearly Beaten by Coaches It may be rightfully said that Ruether pitched good ball, despite the fact that he was found for a total of three times in the game. He pitched nicely scattered, and the two far-famed coaches of the Giants tried their best to help Dutch along to his third successive victory over Manhattan. Casey Dolan, one of the aforementioned coaches, belongs to the school founded by Nick Altrock. But Hughie Jennings, the other coach, also wears the name of the school. Jennings was of little assistance in the sixth inning.

"Home Run" Kelly began proceedings in this sixth with a single which sprung through short. King pitched the ball to deep right center for what Dave Robertson, of Cubs, is reinstated by Landis

Columbia Nine Has Close Call With Cornell

Ithaca's Rally in Last Inning but Lack One Run for Tie—Score Is 4 to 3

ITHACA, N. Y., May 4.—Although a batting rally in the ninth inning gave Cornell two runs, Columbia came out on the long end of today's game with the Ithacans by the score of 4 to 3.

Price and Rollo pitched effectively for three winners and losers, respectively. Cornell getting three hits than the New Yorkers, but the Columbia twirler had better fielding back of him. A sensational catch by Freeman of Davies' fly to the ropes in the ninth inning, after a fine throw to the plate by the same player, cutting off Davies in the sixth, robbed Cornell of two runs.

The Manhattan team broke the ice in the first inning on a hit by Schnatz, his steal of second, Brophy's sacrifice and Woodin's muff. In the fourth the New Yorkers got three more. Gowans threw over first out to Tudor on second, where he scored on Freeman's hit through short. A few minutes later, Moeschel's drive through shortstop brought in Clark and Watt.

Cornell's first run came in the sixth, when Mayer walked, and Wait's fumble, went to second on Davies' hit and scored on Munn's rap to center. The Ithacans rallied in the ninth. Sines, a pinch hitter, walked, and Shepard, who had hit in the eighth, Under Woodin had lofted out. Mayer reached first on Woodin's poor throw, Sines scoring. Freeman made a sensational catch of Davies' long hit, but Shepard beat the throw to the plate. Munn's ended Cornell's chances by striking out. The score: COLUMBIA ITHACA
