Join a Party, Mrs. Robinson Tells Women

Condemns Professional Independent as Selfish and Impractical and Opposes a Feminine Organization

Gives Message From T. R.

Theodore Roosevelt Would Have Said "Play the Game," She Tells Club

NEWARK, N. J., June 6.—Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson was the principal speaker at the inauguration luncheon of the Essex County Women's Republican Club at the Robert Treat Hotel here today.

Organization work and its importance in politics were the points emphasized by all the speakers. Mrs. Robinson defined the difference between an individual being independent in thought and action and his or her taking a stand as an out-and-out independent.

She cited the Progressive party and Theodore Roosevelt's support of it as an example of the former. But she condemned the professional independent as selfish and impractical.

"Join something; be something," said Mrs. Robinson. "I have great respect for and admire the person who is a strong Democrat, just as I respect and admire a strong Republican."

"I bring to you a message from my brother, Theodore Roosevelt," she continued. "He never believed in a woman's party. How he would despise us if he thought we considered belonging to such an organization! He did not believe in a woman's party even in relation to the home. He emphasized and believed in the father's part in rearing children, even though he placed the mother's above that of the father."

Urges Work for Party

Mrs. Robinson urged the women to join a party and then to work for it. She dwelt upon the tedium and the lack of interest in industry in connection with organization.

Mrs. Everett Colby, president of the Essex County Republican Club, presided at the luncheon. Mrs. George Barker, vice-president, and Mrs. G. W. Gibbs, second vice-president, also were at the speakers' table.

Other guests included Mrs. Charles E. Townsend, Mrs. James R. Mann, Mrs. Percy Quinn, Mrs. Joe Henry Eagle, and Mrs. Wainwright, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War.

The Ambassador of Spain and Señora de Riano entertained a dinner party of twenty-four guests at the embassy to-night.

Miller to Drop In Unexpectedly at State Institutions

All Officials, However, Are Prepared for Inspection; Members of Efficiency Board Accompany Him

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

ALBANY, June 6.—The first step toward setting into motion the machinery created by the Legislature for making a general survey of state service, so as to eliminate waste, extravagance and useless effort, will be made this week, when Governor Miller will visit several state institutions to observe how their affairs are conducted and to discover how their tremendous overhead cost can be reduced without affecting the comfort of their inmates.

Governor Miller's travel plans are not known to any one except the members of his official family. He said today that he was not advertising the trip, his program being to drop in at the various institutions unexpectedly.

The Governor wants to see the establishments run in their everyday manner. It is questioned here, however, if he will succeed in this purpose. The fact that he intends to make this trip is known to every institution head, and since no one knows where he will appear, every state hospital, prison and other institution is ready for the visitation.

Governor Miller will be accompanied by the members of the State Board of Finance and Control, which was brought into existence by the Legislature this year in compliance with a recommendation made by the Governor.

This board is charged with the task of reconstructing the State on a progressive basis. The Governor is chairman of the board. Its other members are Senator Charles L. Hewitt, James A. Wendell and Assemblymen Joseph A. McGinnies, Senator Hewitt and Assemblyman McGinnies are chairmen of the legislative Finance committee.

The Governor probably will return to Albany Friday night. Saturday at noon he will preside at a hearing requested by counsel for Hattie Dixon, the New York negro who is to die in the electric chair next week for the murder of Mary Morton, her ward.

Whatever the success of Milk Week may be in inducing the dwellers on the East Side to take proper nourishment, the first day has seen the conversion of Mr. Hylan. He has pledged his word to drink a bottle of milk a day at his office.

Yesterday morning he made his public confession of faith before an admiring audience assembled on the steps of City Hall. Lifting a glass boldly to his lips, he drank a swallow of milk and he shouted his hope that every baby in New York would have enough milk this year and in all the years to come.

The crowd was touched by the simplicity of his pronouncement and, cheering loudly, promised him four more years as their protector as his reward. Thereupon the Mayor accompanied Health Commissioner Hylan to the milk bar at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street.

This was the formal opening of Milk Week.

Estate Tax Held Deductible by Supreme Court

Says Income Measure Is Explicit in Allowing Elimination of Taxes Other Than on Certain Profits

Labor Cases Held Over

Dismisses Appeal From Finding of Lower Court in American Can Co. Case

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Supreme Court brought its regular term to a close to-day, adjourning until October 3. Most of the justices plan to leave at once for their summer vacations.

Dismissal of the government's appeal, on motion of Solicitor General Cameron, from lower court decrees holding that the American Can Company did not constitute a monopoly under the Sherman anti-trust law and a decision against the government in an estate tax case marked the final day's session.

The Solicitor General filed with the court only a few minutes before it closed a motion to dismiss the appeal in the American Can case. Cameron explained that the action had been taken because of the evident meaning of the court's decision in a similar case against the United States Steel Corporation when held that an "unreasonable" restraint must be proved before the law could be invoked.

Executors of the estate of the late Alan H. Woodward, of Alabama, were upheld by the court in their contention that the estate tax assessed under the act of 1916 was an "allowable deduction" in computing the net income of the estate for the purpose of the income tax. A decree of the court claims holding that the Internal Revenue authorities had erred in refusing to allow such deduction was affirmed.

Paid $490,000 Taxes

The Woodward estate paid a tax of $490,000 on the transfer and was assessed a $165,000 as income tax on the amount so paid out. The income tax law, the court held, was explicit in allowing deductions of "taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year imposed by the authority of the United States except income, war profits and excess profits taxes." Since the estate tax was a Federal tax and was not included in the deduction, the court held that it was deductible.

Most of the cases of general interest remaining undecided to-day were ordered "restored to the docket for reargument before a full bench." These include the Wyoming-Colorado suit over control of waters of the Colorado River, the United States Shoe Machinery case, involving alleged violation of the Sherman act in lease contracts, and the child labor case involving the validity of special taxes on products of the labor of minors.

Cases not to be reargued include that of the Colorado Coal Company against the United Mine Workers of America to determine liability of a national labor organization for damages resulting from a strike and the case brought by the government to restrain the American Hardware Manufacturers Association from continuing the "open competition" practice of exchanging price and sale data among its members.
