

GEORGETOWN, D. C., FROM THE AIR, showing the construction of the magnificent new million dollar bridge that is being built across the Potomac River, about two miles to the west of the White House. The buildings of the famous Georgetown University can be readily identified, while on the heights beyond can be distinguished the U. S. Naval Observatory. On the river bank, are some of the Capitol's many boat clubs. International.

"OH BOY," the English bull pup, born March 4 last and recently presented to President and Mrs. Harding by an admirer. "Oh Boy," who now shares White House canine honors with the more widely known and pictured "Laddie Boy," boasts a pretentious pedigree, his mother being "Tetra-zini," a famous $3,000 show dog.

ALIED FOR POLISH RELIEF. Jackie Coogan, clever screen star and the most popular "kid" in the land, visits Ignace Paderewski former Premier of Poland, at his ranch at Paso Robles, Calif., to tell him that he wants to share his earnings with the suffering Polish "kids." Jackie has just promised the world famous pianist that he will turn over to Mrs. Paderewski all the money received from the sale of his autographed photographs. International.

THE BOWDOIN SETS SAIL. Donald B. McMillan, the noted explorer, waves farewell from the deck of his little arctic schooner, the Bowdoin, as he sets sail from Wiscasset, Me., on his seventh journey to the frozen north. McMillan, who was with the Peary expedition which discovered the North Pole, is a Bowdoin College graduate, and funds for the building of his sturdy craft were subscribed by alumni of his alma mater. Underwood.

LOST IN THE WOODS. Not President Harding, but his golf ball—an incident of the Chief Executive's recent visit to Secretary of War Weeks' mountain home in New Hampshire. Can't you just hear our perfectly human President saying to his caddie (and lives there a golfer who hasn't made similar remarks a hundred times?). "I can't understand it. I marked it by this tree, and it should be right here. And a brand new one, too. Guess I'll have to play another so as not to hold up the game." Keystone.

INSPECTING RUOTOLO'S BUST OF CARUSO, which is to be placed in the foyer of the Metropolitan Opera House as a gift of the Italian Musical League of New York, of which the great tenor was honorary president. At the left, Hugo d'Annunzio, son of the famous Italian poet warrior, Gabrielle d'Annunzio, who will write the inscription for the bust, and at the right the sculptor, Onorio Ruotolo. Busts of Dante and Lenine also may be seen in this studio picture. Keystone.
