The present unemployment situation in New York is due chiefly to an influx of idle transients. Were the transients, who concentrate here in the belief that "easy pickings" are now available from charitable organizations dealing with unemployment relief, to be eliminated, the number of unemployed in the city would be only slightly above the normal of pre-war times at this season of the year.

Kraus Will Held Forger; Gave Woman Million

Referee Says Mrs. Thomas, Named as Chief Beneficiary, Is Not Legitimate Daughter of Manufacturer

Her Husband Accused

First Sheet of Document Was Replaced by False One, Is Charge Made

John Godfrey Saxe, formerly State Senator, as referee, filed a report in the Surrogate's Court yesterday to the effect that the will of Samuel Kraus, vice-president of the Eagle Pencil Company, which disposes of an estate valued at about $1,000,000, was a forgery.

The forgery, according to Mr. Saxe, was committed by Oscar B. Thomas, an attorney at 280 Broadway, who drew the will and had it in his possession from the time of its execution until it was filed for probate in the Surrogate's Court.

Four members of truck company 14, under Lieutenant Lehman, were the first to enter the building. As were the stairs were ablaze and they made their way to the third landing with difficulty and at great risk.

On the same floor the firemen found Mr. and Mrs. De Luca. As were the Catalanos, they had been overcome by a vain attempt to reach the windows of their small quarters.

Referee Saxe also expressed the opinion that Mr. Kraus died Adeline Brummell, mother of Mrs. Adeline Kraus Thomas, were never those of husband and wife, but even under the common law, although Mr. Kraus was the father of Mrs. Thomas; that Bert Kraus is one of the next of kin, and heirs-at-law of Mr. Kraus.

One of the numerous witnesses who testified before Referee Saxe was Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, widow of Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. She

After-Midnight Blaze in First Avenue Tenement Wipes Out Household of Couple and 2 Children

An entire family of four and the aged father and mother of another family perished in a fire which early this morning destroyed the tenement at 2407 First Avenue. Several firemen were overcome by smoke and a twenty-year-old youth sustained a fracture of the skull in jumping from the third floor of the burning building.

Youth Goes Mad When Parents Die

Firemen Overcome Fighting Smoke; Volunteers Save Many From Panic

The fire was reported simultaneously by a group of young men who were returning to their homes in the neighborhood and two members of the Street Cleaning Department who were flushing First Avenue. One of the young men turned in the first alarm, while the street cleaners reported the blaze to a patrolman.

Four engines and members of truck company 14 responded to the first alarm. The tenement was already glowing and its walls threatening to fall. Two other alarms were sent in at once and another was turned in later.

Preparations by the army General Staff provide for employment of several units of the chemical warfare with equipment for using tear-producing gas. While officials refused to comment, it was learned that orders had been given Brigadier General Frick, chief of the chemical warfare service, to have detachments of his forces ready for service in West Virginia.

Use of tear gas has been found high effective in dispersing a recent riot held by the army and police departments of Philadelphia and New York. It was understood, however, that the gas would not be used in West Virginia except in case of emergency, and after more peaceful measures of persuasion had failed to move the armed bands to disperse and return to their homes.

Officers of the War Department familiar with martial law precedents and the policy of the Administration said the extent and duration of its use would depend largely upon General Bandholtz.

Its primary object, it was explained, is the quelling of disturbance and the reinstatement of proper and constituted civil authority in the disturbed area.

Consequently it is expected that many of the usual cooperations with state police and local police officers, that no military courts will be set up for trial and punishment of captured rebels.

Rescue work was hampered by dense smoke that filled the hallways. Severe persons were carried out in a state of semi-apoplexy, to be revived by ambulance surgeons.

Volunteer rescues did effective work and helped avert a panic in helping many persons to escape from buildings adjacent to the burning structure. The house which was destroyed was one of a string of tenements and the houses on either side were constantly in danger.

Curran Pledges More Machine Guns and Men, Sheriff's Order

Denounces Hylan's Failure to Provide Recreation Grounds in Two Speeches to Voters of Brooklyn

Turns Laugh on Haskell

Promises Subway Extension, Business Aid and More Schools if Elected

More beaches and parks for the people, the speedy adoption of new schools to relieve the badly overstrained public educational system, rapid extension of the subways, particularly through the Greenpoint section; and most of all, elimination of the "petty quarreling and bickering of Hylanism which have prevented the taking of these progressive steps"—this was the constructive message carried to Brooklyn last night by Henry H. Curran, Republican candidate for Mayor.

Mr. Curran spoke at two meetings, one before the Brooklyn League for Women Voters, at Public School 4, in Berkeley Place, near Fifth Avenue, and the other at the Alpha Republican Club, at 138 Nassau Avenue, Greenpoint. At both gatherings he won the unqualified approval of his hearers, and his quiet, direct, businesslike manner, free of all trace of the usual oratorical effort of political speaking, was generally and favorably commented upon.

At the Alpha Republican Club meeting he was engaged in a verbal tilt by Robert L. Haskell and John J. Halligan, running mates in the same faction respectively for Mayor and President of the Board of Aldermen, in which he succeeded in unseating both by a courteous but pointed "comeback."

Observing the entrance of Mr. Curran while he was speaking, Mr. Haskell diverted his address into an attack on his fellow primary candidate, and spoke, "In view of the fact that it has for a considerable time been my understanding that a statesman is a dead politician," I am quite willing to assume the rôle he has cut out for me."

This sally was greeted by a hearty laugh and a roar of approval. Then Mr. Curran continued: "I heard Mr. Haskell tell you, before making reference to me, that Mayor Hylan was very much afraid of him. I fail to see how he knows that unless he has talked matters over with him."

Lord Charles Mercer Naime, upon their marriage in August, 1916. Following this settlement Viscount Astor amended the trust agreement by providing that if any part of the $4,000,000 settlement remained unpaid at the time of his death the half of the trust fund set aside for Waldorf Astor and his children should be diminished sufficiently to complete the settlement.

The second half of this trust fund under the original agreement of May, 1916, was for the benefit of John Jacob Astor and his children. Three children of Waldorf Astor were living at the time of Viscount Astor's death, and since then two more have been born, Captain John Jacob Astor, whose marriage was planned the viscount, is now the father of two children. One of the reasons for instituting the action is to enable all of these heirs to share a distance of about sixty miles, every foot of which is held by the striking miners.

Moving along the Coal River Valley from town to town, the miners entered every store and "bought" the proprietor's entire stock of provisions. In payment they gave receipts bearing their own names and informing the storekeeper that the United Mine Workers would settle in cash. Neutral observers reported that all of the storekeepers agreed to this arrangement without protest.

The most striking characteristic of the individuals of the miners' army was their youth. Practically all of them were young. There were three groupings: First, native mountaineers of the type that for generations have lived in an atmosphere where all disputes were settled as a matter of course with
