

Harding Says Roosevelt Made Nation Better

Harry H. Schlacht, president of the Townsend Chamber of Commerce, yesterday made public a letter he has received from President Harding to be read to the school children of the East side on October 27, on the birthday of the late Theodore Roosevelt...

Perhaps his greatest work, apart from his appealing Americanism, and yet a vital part of it, was his crusade for a new order of things and a new conscience in the Republic. We can appraise Mr. Roosevelt now in the aftermath of a fuller understanding, and even those who most violently opposed him must confess his great part in the awakening...

Made Republic Bigger and Better. It is little to say that the Republic is bigger and better and mightily advanced by his part in the glorious Republic, more American for his love of patriotism and more secure for his warning of perils...

Historical Documents Received. These include the ledger which he kept while ranching on the Bad Lands of North Dakota from 1883 to 1886, donated by J. A. Ferris, storekeeper at Medora at the time the late Colonel rode across the river...

Of considerable interest is the copy of his first published work, "The Summer Birds of the Adirondacks," written when student at Harvard in collaboration with a classmate, H. D. Hoot. The copy is a four-page folder about the various birds extant at the time in the Adirondacks...

Chinese Girl Scouts in Parade

HELEN and LILLY LEE, who participated yesterday in The Fifth Avenue March of the organization.

The parade started from Girl Scout headquarters, at 189 Lexington Avenue, at 2 o'clock, swung into Fifth Avenue from Thirty-fourth Street and disbanded shortly after 5 o'clock in the Mall in Central Park. The girls were led by the national officers of the organization—Mrs. Frederick Edey, marshal; Mrs. Arthur Osgood Choate, national president; Mrs. Jane Decker Rippen, national director. A section of national officers followed, with Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, Mrs. V. Everit Macy, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Leo Arnsfeldt, Mrs. Selden Bacon, Mrs. William G. McAduff, Mrs. Robert G. Mead, Miss Llewellyn Parsons, Mrs. Harold I. Pratt, Mrs. Theodore H. Price, Mrs. W. N. Rothschild and Mrs. Peter Williams...

After separating in the park the girls visited the following hospitals: Mount Sinai, Roosevelt, Presbyterian, St. Vincent's, Manhattan Maternity and the City Hospital, on Blackwell's Island. The parade was a success and the girls were very happy to have participated in it.

Children Taught Music Mysteries at Aeolian

Little People Learn Rapidly Under Skillful Tutelage of Walter Damosch. Little people, escorted by fond mothers and stately governesses, filled Aeolian Hall yesterday morning to mark the acquaintance of the woodwind family, the subject of the first of the season's concerts for children by the New York Symphony Orchestra. Under the genial guidance of Mr. Walter Damosch the youngsters not only learned to recognize each member of this important family, the flute, oboe, clarinet, bass clarinet and bassoon, but by means of an ingenious eye-closing and hand-raising process, devised by him, went home fully prepared to distinguish each of those instruments without the aid of sight after a moment's concentrated listening...

Better Pieces From Seward Estate To Be Offered at Plaza Auction

A collection of mid-Victorian Belter furniture belonging to the estate of Mrs. Chesterman Seward, niece of William T. Seward, Secretary of War under Lincoln, will be dispersed this week at auction at the Plaza Art Rooms, 5 East Fifty-ninth Street. Rare family heirlooms belonging for generations to the Seward family will be offered. A drawing room set of Belter furniture made in rosewood, dating from 1840, consisting of two divans, a number of carved chairs upholstered in green satin damask, and a large console table carved with a design of grapes and roses, is featured. A large etagere carries out a design with the national emblem, the figure of a woman holding a shield and with cupid, bird and floral embellishments. A large console of the first French empire period with top of Carrara marble and pedestals having bronze mounts of the Napoleonic eagle, is another article catalogued for the sale. Other important art objects are a Sheraton hall clock, mahogany, dated 1751, and made by Baile of London; set of dining room furniture of upholstered tapestry in early Dutch design, including a table, a chair, a XV model table, a bookcase, a wardrobe, a tall brass candelabra, empire period, and a number of fine rugs. These include a Bijar, known as "The Iron rug of Persia."

Frederick Jamke Dies

Said to Have Been Last Survivor of Polar Arctic Expedition. Frederick Jamke, a native of Germany and said to have been the last survivor of the Polar Arctic expedition of 1871, died at his home, 187 Eleventh Street, Brooklyn, on Friday. He joined as a seaman. The start was made on June 29, 1871, from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and lasted two years, during which the party had many narrow escapes and was never staying when finally found by the Tigress, which was sent to the rescue. Jamke is survived by two sons and two daughters. A requiem mass will be celebrated tomorrow morning at the Holy Family Church, Thirteenth Street and Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn.

Kriens Includes Own Works in Violin Recital

Plays the Handel Sonata in A Major; Hungarian Concert at Town Hall. A violin recital was given last evening at the Town Hall by Christian Kriens, who played the Handel Sonata in A major, Bach's Chaconne for violin alone, a "Fantasia de Concerto" arranged by him from Massenet's "Mignon," and several shorter pieces, including the first performance of four of his own compositions. On the whole, Mr. Kriens's performance was different, especially his tone, which tended to be harsh and dry and not always on the key. This tendency was especially noticeable in the Handel and Bach numbers, but less so in Mr. Kriens's own pieces: "Chimes at Eventide," a modern French flavor; an agreeable "Valse Mignonne," a Dutch song and a lively tango dance. At the Town Hall last night a concert of Hungarian music and folk-dances, under the auspices of the Comptonek Club, was heard by a somewhat sparse audience. Hungarian dances were played crudely but vigorously by a Young People's Orchestra led by Jan Marokos, which gave an exceptional performance of de Sarasate's "Gypsy Airs" for violin. The program also included recitations, folk-songs and dances.

James M. Carrington Dies

James M. Carrington, secretary of A. G. Spaulding & Bros. until his retirement in 1914, died at his home, 112 Franklin Avenue, Astoria, yesterday in his eighty-sixth year. 4,000 Girl Scouts Make Fine Showing in 5th Ave. Parade

Khaki-Clad Figures Bearing Banners, Flowers, Autumn Leaves an Inspiring Sight; Hospitals Visited Later. With four thousand red and yellow balloons dancing over their heads in the mellow sunlight, with Girl Scout banners flying before them, and their khaki-clad figures half hidden with great branches of autumn leaves and flowers, the Girl Scouts gave Fifth Avenue a picturesque hour yesterday afternoon.

It was more than a parade which these four thousand sturdy, straight-shouldered girls executed; it was an object lesson to the fathers and mothers of New York City who watched them march gayly past, that health and fun may be obtained even for city children through intelligent organization. The parade started from Girl Scout headquarters, at 189 Lexington Avenue, at 2 o'clock, swung into Fifth Avenue from Thirty-fourth Street and disbanded shortly after 5 o'clock in the Mall in Central Park. The girls were led by the national officers of the organization—Mrs. Frederick Edey, marshal; Mrs. Arthur Osgood Choate, national president; Mrs. Jane Decker Rippen, national director.
