Negro Prisoner Turns on Policemen 200 Ft. From Station, Wrenches Free, Sends Shot Into Each

Harlem Crowd Sees Murder and Escape

Blood Transfusion Fails to Save Second Victim; Suspect Taken in Hunt

Acting Detective Sergeants William A. Miller and Francis J. Buckley, of the West 155th Street police station, were shot last night by a negro prisoner on a platform less than 200 feet from the station. Miller died on reaching Harlem Hospital. Buckley died at 7 a. m. without regaining consciousness.

The negro, whose name is withheld by police orders, had been sought during the last three days on a charge of assault. Last night at 2 o'clock Probation Officer Ellison, with headquarters in Public School 891, two blocks from the police station, noticed the dark officer that the missing prisoner was there to report, and was being held for arrest.

Prisoner Breaks Loose

Miller and Buckley were detailed to go after the man. Probation Officer Ellison turned his wand over to the detective and started with him for the station. According to the charge, the man, a short distance in 155th Street when the prisoner suddenly broke loose from his grasp.

Both detectives made a rush to recapture the negro, who fired one shot through the pocket of his coat. The bullet struck Detective Miller in the chest and he fell to the ground, shouting his law. The wounded officer fell to the street, and Buckley, revolver in hand, started after his assailant. Before Buckley could fire a shot he received a second bullet in the chest and immediately collapsed. Miller remained unconscious from the time he was shot until he died, fifteen minutes later. Buckley told his story briefly and was taken into custody.

Detective Seeks Negro

The man, who was fifty feet away when the shooting took place. He saw the negro running and pursued him down the street. The man disappeared in a doorway. More than fifty persons witnessed the shooting. A crowd pursued the negro with Detective Golden. The shooting occurred in the vicinity of 155th Street and several districts were dispatched to the scene.

Slain Man Had Family

Miller was married and the father of nine children. He had been attached to the police force twenty years and earned most of his time with the Detective Bureau. Buckley also was married and has four children. The wives of both men were notified at once and taken to the hospital. Miller died at 7 a. m. Mrs. Miller could reach his side.

Chief Inspector William J. Lahey, Inspector John D. Coughlin, of the Detective Bureau, and Captain Arthur (Knox) of the Homicide Squad, reached the scene within half an hour of the shooting. They gave orders for a cordoned-off area of several blocks and directed the arrest of all who might be supposed to know the hiding place of the man wanted.

Murderer Had Record

The negro who shot the policemen is a well known police character with a long record. He has been in numerous gang fights and shooting affairs. Twenty houses under suspicion in the district were searched within a few hours.

Daughter-in-Law Sues Kaiser for Allowance

Reported Claim of Prince Joachim's Widow Will Be Settled Out of Court

Copyright, 1922, New York Tribune Inc. BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Princess Joachim of Prussia, widow of the Kaiser's fifth son, who killed himself in July, 1920, has filed suit today against the Kaiser, demanding a living allowance from the Hohenzollern family. Her attorney representing the Kaiser contended that the princess was not entitled to an allowance, as the imperial law under which she was married to the Kaiser since the downfall of the family fortunes. Her first suit was winning the custody of her son after she and Prince Joachim had been divorced and he had followed this a few days later with a suit at Potsdam. The Kaiser resisting that he be made the ward of Prince Eitel Friedrich, but the German republican courts disregarded the former Emperor's wishes and decided the case according to the national laws.

Chains Save 3 Boys After Ride Down Hudson on Cake of Ice

2 Lads Race Along Shore From Dobbs Ferry to Hastings, Put Out in Rowboat and Reach Friends as Steamer Hits Chunk and Pitches Them Into Water

Three Dobbs Ferry boys, trapped on a jagged chunk of ice about fifteen feet square, had a perilous mile and a half ride down the Hudson in the darkness last night. They were saved from drowning by the heroic efforts of two other Dobbs Ferry boys, their friends and playmates.

The three boys, after being swept downstream by a swift and powerful current, were dumped into the waters of the Hudson when a river steamer crashed into the block of ice opposite the Tower Bridge Club, Hastings. Their comrades were then taken away from the shore from Dobbs Ferry to Hastings.

The five boys, all between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, have been playmates for years. The three who were rescued were Frank Delmerie, Joseph Togliano and Matthew Parke.

Deadlock Feared on Economic Relief

Neither France nor Britain Will Sacrifice Alone; Briand May Quit Post

By Wilbur Forrest Special Cable to The Tribune

CANNES, France, Jan. 5.—The optimism which heretofore had surrounded every prospect of the Supreme Council meeting, which is to begin here tomorrow, suffered a serious blow when it became known this afternoon that the meeting of the Allied Premier would start off with a deadlock threatening to prevent adoption of inter-Allied measures of any such magnitude as had been envisaged for the reconstruction of Europe. This situation was brought about by the attitude of the United States, whose intervention in the big affairs planned here seemed most likely, but which the Allied Premier thought could not be hoped for.

The Allies have learned through the medium of a message to Premier Lloyd George from Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to Washington, as well as through the interchange of notes between the American and British Secretaries of State, that the American cabinet is almost alone in its wish for active American collaboration, and that the financial world, which supports the opinion in a degree against the sacrifice that such a course would make necessary.

House Famine Called Worst in City's History

Officials, Judges and Social Workers Unite in Asking Lockwood Committee for Extension of Rent Laws

80,000 Apartments Needed Now, Mann Says; Realty Owners Against Proposal

City officials, judges and social workers appearing as witnesses before the Lockwood committee yesterday expressed the opinion that the housing shortage not only continued, but that it was worse than ever. They urged unanimously that the emergency rent laws, which expire next October, be extended for at least another year.

Frank A. Mann, Tenement House Commissioner, said there was a shortage of 80,000 apartments in this city, as against 70,000 last year.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Commissioner of Health, said the crowding conditions are so bad that if typhus or cholera broke out and got a start 1,000,000 lives would be wiped out in a month.

100,000 Cases in Courts

Judge Aaron J. Levy, president of the Board of Municipal Court Judges, said there were 100,000 pending and undetermined rent cases on the calendars, which have caused a temporary breakdown in the administration of justice.

Building superintendents of the five boroughs testified that the number of new tenements erected since the emergency rent laws were passed was insignificant and in some cases did not equal the number of buildings demolished in the same period.

Representatives of the United Real Estate Board of New York took a different view. While they produced no figures to support their contentions, they insisted that the emergency had disappeared and that the laws should be amended accordingly.

Samuel McCune Lindsey, professor of political science, took the stand in support of the emergency rent laws, and declared that the housing shortage there being a shortage of 80,000 apartments, there was a surplus of 30,000.

He pointed to the United States Census bureau's statistics, which showed that the population of New York City had increased by 100,000 in the last ten years. Mr. Lindsey explained, there has been no change in the rent since 1920, the peak year, it stood at minus 15 per cent, making prices at the later date almost four times what they were at the outbreak of the war.

The indictment charges the maintenance of arbitrary and excessive price schedules by means of the open price plan. All changes in the basic discount, according to evidence which the secretary of the association, who, in turn, passed on the information to the other members of the alleged combine. So simple and effective was this system, according to evidence which the government claims to have discovered, that within twenty-four hours all the members of the association were regularly able to alter their prices to meet any change which one member might decide upon.

Her Information First Hand

The committee attached great importance to Dr. Daniel's testimony in that it was first-hand information on the conditions as they really exist. Dr. Daniel said she gathered her figures and made her observations while making her rounds as a physician in a window.

Peacemakers Seek to Unite Dial on Pact

Committee at Work on Proposal to Ratify and Then Hold Election; To Submit Report To-day

By Arthur S. Draper Special Cable to The Tribune

DUBLIN, Jan. 5.—Confronted by a deadlock over the Anglo-Irish treaty, which seemed unshakable, the Dial Editorial tonight is awaiting efforts of its "peace committee" to compare the differences of those opposing and favoring ratification of the pact. The committee reported tonight that it had been unable to reach a settlement which would be satisfactory to all factions. Then, after a brief debate, the Dial decided to adjourn and hold a secret session to-morrow, at which the committee would make another report.

The committee is formed of an equal number favoring ratification of the Irish Free State plan and of those opposed to it. None of its members belong to the Sinn Fein Cabinet.

It is understood that the proposition on which the committee is working is similar to the suggestion of Michael Collins made at the beginning of the week, that those opposed to the treaty should refrain from voting, permit a majority to be elected, and then hold a general election.

Treaty's Friends Worried

The Dial is split almost evenly, and there is no certainty as to how a vote would result if a straight division were taken on the treaty now. Supporters of the treaty are greatly worried, because victory by a narrow margin would be tantamount to defeat. With an opposition almost as powerful as the majority, it would mean that the government's hand would be tied.

The arrival of Harry Boland from America to-day undoubtedly had something to do with the stirring developments. Boland, who returned to Dublin at the afternoon session all the members cheered him loudly and Eamon De Valera smiled broadly for the first time in days. Boland said in an interview that he was in the Irish press, and that he had no objection to the treaty, but that the conditions can be made which will satisfy all sides.

One of the significant facts is that the movement for unity is being abetted by the Irish press. The Dial, Mulcahy, chief of staff of the Irish republican army; Owen O'Duffy, J. J. O'Kelly, Gavan Duffy, and other young and influential members of Sinn Fein.

When the members of the Dial assembled late this afternoon a deputy immediately called attention to an editorial in this morning's "Freeman's Journal" violently attacking De Valera and his cabinet. This started a debate which lasted more than a half hour and gave striking evidence of the fact that whatever the individual members may think of the Irish press, they are united in respect for his leadership in the past and his courage under any conditions. A high tribute also was paid to the fact that the Dial had been opposing him in the debate.

Time Given for Apology

Finally a motion was introduced offering the expulsion of the representatives of "The Freeman's Journal" from the sessions until an adequate apology should be made. Speaking to the motion, Gavan Duffy described the editorial as the "most infamous attack on two members of this government that I have ever seen in the Irish press." Member after member associated himself with the motion until it was amended so that action would be postponed until the newspaper had had time to make an apology to-morrow.

Collins said: "My name was mentioned in that editorial, but it is unnecessary to say it was done without my authority. I strongly object to the motion as it is being used as a pretext for bringing in personalities." Several members spoke on the question of the freedom of the press, and Collins then said he regarded the motion as a slur on the press.

Monarchists Prepare Birthday Greeting to "Martyr of Doorn"

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(By The Associated Press).—The Monarchists have begun circulating a petition embodying birthday greetings to "The Martyr of Doorn," which are to be telegraphed to former Emperor William January 27. One hundred thousand signatures were secured for a similar message last year.

It is the duty of all right-minded Germans," says "The Nationalist Press," which publishes the petition, "to convince our Kaiser that they remain loyal and loyal and considerate of him."

The text of the message which is to be forwarded to Doorn, where the former Emperor is living, says: "Again the thoughts, prayers and hopes of millions of German men and women go out to your majesty in most reverent devotion. The twenty-seventh of January this year, as in the preceding year, is clouded with sorrows. Your majesty, consort, Germany's noblest woman, the unforgettable Queen of Prussia's throne, who shared with you the tragedy and heart-

Director of Arizona School of Mines Says Process Has Proved Accurate

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 5.—Director G. M. Butler, of the Arizona Bureau of Mines, announced here today that organization had perfected and applied for patents on an electric process for locating underground ore bodies. Dr. Butler, who is also dean of the College of Mines and Engineering of the University of Arizona, announced the invention at a meeting of the Board of Regents of the university here.

Dr. Butler indicated that the depth, size and other information regarding concealed copper ore bodies could be ascertained with the electrical device, which he said operated on scientific principles and embodied some of the features of the "touch stick" and similar apparatus. He declared the device had been proved accurate by tests in mining regions in Arizona.

These five nations, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, prior to this recorded themselves, at the meeting of the armament committee today, as favoring the Root resolutions regarding the use of submarines.

These resolutions declare that necessity is no excuse, and that the old rule of visit and search, and of absolute protection to passengers and crew, must be lived up to, no matter what the circumstances.

Law Making Appointment of Farmer Mandatory Is Ob- jected To in Conference With Western Senators

Interview Believed Likely to Result in Blocking the Proposed Bill in House

Change in Plans Come After Bridgroom-To-Be and Fiancee's Father Confer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Harding today, in a conference with Senators Capper, of Kansas; Kellogg, of Minnesota, and Keenan, of Iowa, opposed having his hands tied by the bill now pending before the Senate requiring the President to put a farmer on the Federal Reserve Board. Senators Capper and Keenan are prominent members of the agricultural "bloc" and Senator Kellogg, although not identified with the "bloc," has taken an active interest in various agricultural matters and has been urging legislation to put a farmer on the Reserve Board.

While not all details of the conference are made known, it was learned that the bill as reported by the committee would require an agriculturist of experience on the Federal Reserve Board. Senator Smith, of South Carolina, has introduced an amendment which would require a real "old farmer" to be put on the board. It has heretofore seemed probable the bill would pass with the Smith amendment.

The President is understood to have advised the Senators to-day that, while he was sympathetic with the purpose of the bill, he did not think the hands of the Executive should be tied by a piece of legislation requiring the representative of any class to be put on the Reserve Board. The Senators gained the impression that the President wanted the bill couched in general terms, and thought the Republicans ought to work out the form of the measure themselves and not take the amendment of Senator Smith, who is a Democrat.

Harding Meets Senate Leaders Over Program

Tariff and Bonus Discussed at Conference, Which Is To Be Repeated Soon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Harding called into conference late today a group of Senate Republican leaders for a prolonged discussion of legislative prospects in the present session of Congress. At its adjournment it was said that conclusions had not been reached, and that another session would be arranged for the near future.

Senator Lodge, the majority leader; Senator Curtis, of Kansas, Republican whip; Senator Watson, of Indiana, and Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, who is expected to succeed to the chairmanship of the Finance Committee left vacant by the death of Senator Penrose, were present at the conference. The tariff, proposed bonus for service men and other questions of legislation before the Senate were discussed, it was said.

The lack of solidarity in the Republican party in Congress was the target of a volley of criticism to-day by the Republican member of the House from Syracuse, Representative Walter W. Mager.

Demanding more party discipline in the House, he declared that Republican policies must be sustained. "In order that a small Democratic minority may not continue to control a Republican House and inflict upon the people its pernicious nostrums for public ills," he said.
