Specialist in Robbing Boys of Their Overcoats Sent to Prison for Three Years

Thieves early yesterday entered the fur establishment of A. Goodstein's, sons, at 116 West Twenty-ninth Street, just behind the West Thirtieth Street police station, and got away with $17,000 worth of fur coats and wraps.

The fur store is on the second floor. The robbers went up a back stairway used as a fire escape. They rapped a tin panel of the door and turned the lock from the inside.

They next were confronted with a wooden door stung with burglar alarm wires. How they past this barrier without setting off the alarm is a mystery to the police.

Break Window With Milk Can Another robbery took place in the morning at the store of Joseph Schwartz, 68 West 125th Street, at a time when many persons were on their way past to the subway.

The thieves used a milk can to break the window and a taxicab to escape with their loot, valued at $2,000.

In connection with the attempted robbery yesterday of a clothing store operated by Samuel Greenberg at 103 Kester Street, Tony Rosso was assigned before Magistrate Max Levine in Essex Market court, and held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury.

Rosso was arrested after a short chase by Patrolmen Michael Gibbons, of the Clinton Street police station, who saw Rosso and three other men running from the store. Several shots were fired and Rosso was captured.

The other three men were released. Russo, who gave his address as 217 West 125th Street, is said to be the owner of three trucks having public park licenses. Merchandise valued at $1,500 was found wrapped up in the store ready for removal.

Samuel Reich, thirty-five years old, of 75 Chrystie Street, was sentenced by Justice Murray in Bronx Special Sessions to three years in the reformatory on a charge of grand larceny growing out of the theft of an overcoat from David Grabois, nine years old, of 677 Bay Street, the Bronx.

The court told Reich that he was a thief of the ultra-contemptible variety. According to the police, Reich made practice of stealing overcoats from boys. He would give them a nickel and send them for a bundle of laundry, asking them to leave their coats as security for their return.

Such was the trick practiced on Grabois, who, however, happened to meet Reich a few days later while out walking with his aunt, had him arrested.

17 Indicted for Freight Thefts From N. Y. Central Employees Began by Stealing Apples From Cars, One Is Said to Have Confessed

Seventeen indictments have been returned by the Westchester County grand jury, it was announced yesterday, against former employees of the Harlem branch of the New York Central Railroad in connection with the investigation of systematic looting of freight cars, which has gone on for years.

The findings were disclosed when arraigned for pleading before Supreme Court Justice Frank L. Wright at White Plains. The list included former freight conductors, brakemen and a packmaster. A confession said to have been made by Robert Sables, a brakeman, enabled detectives to obtain evidence sufficient to indict.

Those arraigned were Robert Sables, indicted for grand larceny in the first and second degrees; Harold Sables, Edward J. Milavay, William C. Boyer, Everett L. Studley, William Walters, Jr., Lorton S. Brown and Edward B. Stewart, grand larceny in the first degree; James H. Malone, $500, larceny; Roman, Paul Rochiano, James W. Jewell, Edward Olson and Joseph Toomey, all charged with receiving stolen goods.

Malone, formerly a freight conductor, Harold Sables was a yardmaster at North White Plains. Several of those indicted made full confession as to their implication in the thefts. All defendants pleaded not guilty and were released in bail. The indicted men were discharged by the grand jury when they were arrested.

The confession of Sables, who is responsible for the theft of more than $250,000 worth of merchandise from freight cars.

Robert Sables, in his confession, is said to have declared that in September, 1920, he and two others removed the following goods from boxcars: Six raincoats, valued at $180; six pairs of shoes, $14; four pairs of socks, $7; forty-eight children's dresses, $80; coats, eight union suits, $24; a bolt of blue cloth, $200; three pairs of wading boots, $75; eight boxes of mortise lock sets, $50; and six Russian bath-robe sets, $30.

Gares Is Found Guilty; Doomed to Chair Feb. 6

Jury Out Only 10 Minutes in Case of Man Accused of Murder of Child

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 5—After deliberating forty minutes a jury before Supreme Court Justice Bergen today found George Gares, forty-nine years old, a carpenter, guilty of murder in the first degree. He was immediately arraigned and sentenced to death in the electric chair in Trenton during the week of February 5. No appeal was taken.

Gares, who has been on trial since Wednesday, was charged with killing five-year-old Theresa Kucharski after he had assaulted her. Gares's defense was an alibi to the effect that he had not been in New Brunswick the day of the murder. The state produced several witnesses who swore they had seen him on that day in New Brunswick. Counsel for the defense in his summation said the evidence was circumstantial and that not a single eye-witness had been produced.

After sentencing was pronounced more than 20 spectators who had stood in the rain awaiting the verdict, made an effort to crowd into the courtroom. Some of the more inquisitive tried to follow the doomed man to his cell. Gares received the sentence quietly.

Skipper Accused of Inhumanity $7,500 Granted Mrs. Stillman May Halt Case

Chief Officer Reports It Was Keeness of Captain Randall That Enabled the Hudson to Make Mid-Ocean Rescue of Six Sailors, a Dog and Her Pup

Six French sailors, and a Newfoundland dog and her three-months-old pup, rescued in mid-Atlantic from the derelict French schooner Reine des Mers, on January 1, were brought to port yesterday on the steamship Hudson of the United States Line, Captain A. B. Randall commanding.

The skipper had sent a brief report of the incident by radio soon after he had taken the men aboard. It became known yesterday that it was Captain Randall himself who sighted the schooner pounding herself to pieces.

In October last, Captain Randall was accused of having passed in port with the Hudson giving no heed to three men in a disabled fishing boat eastward of Ambrose Channel Lightship. He was suspended from service for one trip of the Hudson and restored to duty after a board of the Steamboat Inspectors had exonerated him. It is said at the hearing that "no white man knowingly would pass him man beings in distress at sea and make no effort to save them."

The fact that it was his eyes that picked up the helpless French vessel on New Year's morning made his crew particularly happy and gave one of them occasion yesterday to remark, "They can't pan the old man this time, for he saw 'em first and went after 'em. What is more, he got 'em right and brought 'em here safely."

He is eloquently silent. Captain Randall maintained an eloquent silence yesterday when he came down from the Hudson's bridge. He said he would speak to his men, and that those who were out in the lifeboat to the schooner could tell the story better than he could. "I called for volunteers," he said, "and every man of my staff and crew offered his services. I have the best men of the sea on the Hudson, and the credit is theirs."

Skinner Cummings, the chief officer, who was on the bridge with Captain Randall, said that the skipper saw the schooner with a fractured shoulder and on both sides of the deck. She insisted that the three actions for damages she previously had brought against the defendants for similar injuries were all lost in the courts. One of these was against the Third Avenue Railroad Company, which she settled for $200; another was against Bull Brothers, who she settled for $250. The third was against Mabel Trowbridge, which was dismissed.
