Bear 100,000 Swindled by Fake Brokers

Investigators Preparing Cases for Three Grand Juries as Volume of Complaints Increases

Life Savings Taken By False Promises

Ponzi Methods Used to Lure Unwary Investors, Officials Declare

With complaints of victims of stock swindlers on the increase, District Attorney Barton said last night that three grand juries would be employed in the consideration of evidence in the campaign against bucket-shops.

Of thirty specified cases prepared by the staff of assistant district attorneys assigned to this work, six already have been presented to the Supreme Court Grand Jury. Beginning next Tuesday, Mr. Barton said, two general sessions grand juries will join with the other judicial body in the investigation. It was his intention, the prosecutor said, to bring the fraud cases to a focus as quickly as possible.

"A number of the cases are now before the Supreme Court Grand Jury," said Mr. Barton, "but as this body is engaged also with matters in connection with the Lockwood committee investigation, have decided to use the other grand juries as well in order to keep the bucket-shop inquiry moving speedily."

Believes Thousands Victimized

From the mounting number of complaints filed with his office, the District Attorney estimated that the prey of stock juggling and trading frauds during the last year would run into the thousands. One of the investigators assigned to the work is the victim of financial swindlers for the year aggregated 100,000 persons.

The resignation of Assistant District Attorney Jerome Simmons, who has been in charge of the investigation of bucket-shop inquiries, was announced yesterday by Mr. Barton. Mr. Simmons has resigned, it was announced yesterday, to assume charge of fraud investigations for the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Mr. Barton named Assistant District Attorney Benjamin Schreiber to succeed Mr. Simmons in charge of the bucket-shop inquiry. The work of analyzing new complaints was continued yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Schreiber, Wilson, Unger and other members of the staff.

Mr. Barton over to pick out of the mass of complaints those which appeared to be the most flagrant and upon which investigations will be made.

Submarine Firm Mentioned

Among the concerns mentioned in connection with the investigation, yesterday, was the firm of J. J. W. Smith, which recently with large facilities and small assets. An investor who dealt with the company has made a statement that he deposited bonds to be used as collateral for a loan which was not returned, and that he was unable to obtain the return of his securities.

Many of those who have related their experiences to the District Attorney, asked that the names of small firms which could ill afford to be defamed by their names. Some of the manipulators, considering as bona fide business, used Ponzi methods, according to Mr. Barton.

A private source, it is said, was to call the manipulating investor into a state of security by paying him cash dividends for a time. The bucket-shop operator would collect the money when he bought bonds that he was not to be paid, but that he was to be paid in the future.

Los Angeles Police Wait at His Home to Arrest Suspected Assassin of the Picture Director

New Trail Points To Big Film Man

Two Prominent Persons, One Actress He Helped, Declared Key to Crime

Los Angeles, Feb. 11.—Four detectives are guarding a house in West Fourth Street, this city, tonight, awaiting the coming of a man who will be arrested and charged with the murder of William Desmond Taylor. The man sought is the man from whom Walter Thiele, arrested as a suspect in the Taylor case last night and released, obtained a bloodstained cap—a cap such as was worn by the murderer of Taylor.

The police declare the man for whom they are waiting is a drug addict. They have asked that his name be withheld until the arrest. They have searched his home, and declare they have evidence to connect him with the slaying.

It was stated that the detective department also believes that one of the most important persons in the film world, whose name has not even been whispered in connection with the murder, is involved in the case. This person, it is believed, is involved in the murder.

Tex Rickard was held in $10,000 bail by Magistrate Simpson in West Side Police Court yesterday to await action of the grand jury on charges preferred against him by four girls ranging from eleven to fifteen years in age. After some delay he obtained bail and was released. Alice Ruck and Anna Hess were the girls whose testimony was given in court at the instance of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and, although Max D. Steuer, Rickard's attorney, argued that discrepancies in their stories made them incredible, Magistrate Simpson took occasion to say that he believed they had told the truth as to events in the apartments on West Forty-seventh Street and that he believed they had met Rickard in those apartments and elsewhere.

"It is amazing," said the magistrate, "how those two girls of tender years could remember with such detail what happened in the rooms and could describe those rooms and their furnishings with such detail."

Court Believes Girls' Stories

"If they were there I cannot conceive of their being there for any other purpose than for the perpetration of the crime mentioned. It is beyond human ken for me to believe that these girls set up under the grilling cross-examination they were subjected to and still stand by the stories they originally told. In view of the stories they tell without being shaken a particle in the main details, I am convinced they told the truth as to what happened in the house, beyond a reasonable doubt, and that this is all the District Attorney needs to make out a prima facie case sufficient for the magistrate to hold the defendant to await the action of the grand jury."

Further Arrests Predicted

Mr. Steuer protested when Ferdinand Pecora, Chief Assistant District Attorney, asked that the girls be held at $10,000. Mr. Steuer thought that the $10,000 which his client had furnished during the preliminary hearing ought to be sufficient.

Mr. Steuer's reply was that already the case was becoming more complicated that it had appeared at first. Nathan Podd, accused of spiriting away one of the girls whom the girls testified to holding as a witness, had been indicted by the grand jury, and Mr. Pecora said that other defendants might appear before the grand jury was completed.

"When we get all the evidence ready for the grand jury in these cases," he said, "it is possible that we will make further arrests."

Steuer Attacks Testimony

Mr. Steuer had prepared a document in which the discrepancies in the testimony given by the four girls and the Ruck girl were arranged in parallel columns. But Mr. Steuer insisted that in view of the serious nature of the charges they made these very details should have been impressed indelibly upon the minds of the girls.

The girls did not agree as to the number of times they had met the light promoter, but as to whether they had visited him. One said that their first call on him had been in the tower of Madison Square Garden, and the other said that it was in the tower.

Council Postponement Considered in Rome

Harding Sure Of Postponement Of Genoa Parley

Belief Conference Will Not Take Place Before June Saves Him Necessity of Early Decision

Two Embarrassing Factors Involved

Demand for Economic Restoration and Italy's Aid on Armament Issues

ROME, Feb. 11. (By The Associated Press).—The Italian Cabinet has authorized Premier Bonomi and Foreign Minister della Torretta to decide whether and in what manner the Genoa international economic conference, scheduled to open on March 8, may be postponed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—President Harding and his advisers are now absolutely sure that the Genoa conference will be postponed from the date set in March to June at the earliest. The request of Premier Poincare of France that the meeting should be postponed for three months has not been received as yet by this government, it was announced late today at the State Department. It was also made clear that the reply of this government would not go forward to Rome until the French note had been received and considered.

It has been the desire of President Harding all along to avoid announcing any decision on the Genoa conference until all of the business of the armament conference should have been concluded. This includes not only the actual negotiation of the treaties by the delegates, which was concluded a week ago, but the ratification of these treaties by the Senate.

Thomas Alva Edison was seventy-five years old yesterday. He punched the time clock in the laboratories of the Edison plant at West Orange, N. J., at 9:19 o'clock and went to work. He expects to keep on punching it for fifteen more years.

At 10 o'clock he gave himself over to an interview with newspaper men. He thought that Theodore Roosevelt was the greatest man he had ever met, that Sarah Bernhardt was the most remarkable woman, that Henry Ford would not make a good President, that naval preparations should not cease, that business conditions were improving and that the soldier bonus was inopportune.

He had just a short time before gone out in the yard to shake hands with his employees. The air was damp and had a chill in it. Mr. Edison wore no overcoat and his jacket was open. He was smiling and in gay humor. He wore a bowler in his bathroom. He posed for photographers.

Constables Shot Down at Clones Station, While Several Are Wounded and Others Captured

British Will Rush Forces to Belfast

Clash Expected Soon; Kidnaped Prisoners May Be Released This Week

BELFAST, Feb. 11. (By The Associated Press).—Four Ulster special constables were shot to death, several wounded and some others of a party of twenty captured at the railroad station at Clones this afternoon.

The specials, on their way to Enniskillen, were waiting at Clones for the arrival of a train from Belfast. The train had entered the station, and some of the specials were in the act of getting into the carriages when a party of Irish republican army men with rifles and a machine gun came on the platform.

They immediately opened fire on the specials with their rifles and machine gun, and four of the constables were shot down, one of them having his head blown off. Some of the others were wounded, some were taken prisoner and the remainder escaped. The republican army men then fled. Taken absolutely unawares, the specials had no time to fire a shot at the attacking party.

Warning Sent to Belfast

Clones is in that part of Ulster which is included in the Free State territory. It is very near the border.

Belfast received its first intimation of the tragedy through a message from the station master at the great northern terminus, to the effect that the republican troops, regular police and special constables, were engaged in a shooting and the casualty list of the Belfast police declared the specials were lined against a wall and killed.

Mr. James Craig, Premier of Ulster, has addressed an urgent communication to Premier Lloyd George, Winston Churchill and Viscount Fitzalan, in which immediate action is demanded.

A heavy load of police traveling from Belfast to London this morning was captured by armed men. The specials were lined against a wall and killed.

Demand Upsets Plans of Legislators to Devise Means to Pay Veterans

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—A demand made today by representatives of the National Grange that the money for paying the soldiers' bonus be raised "without burdening the public with further annoying, business preventing and objectionable tax schemes," and a further demand that the excess profits tax be re-enacted and re-extended for that purpose, caused much uneasiness today among the leaders of Congress who are attempting to agree upon a program that will meet the great expense entailed by passage of the bonus bill.

The demand of the agriculturists was made in a letter to Chairman Fordney of the House Ways and Means Committee, which set forth the opposition of the farmers to the tax program now being considered. It was a result of a meeting of the bonus bill.
