

Demand British Loan Be Called To Pay Bonus

Wall Street Blamed for Opposition at 4 Meetings of Veterans; Mass Play Against Congress and President

Prohibition Under Fire Martin McCue Says Revenues from 'Good Liquor' Would Have Paid Soldiers

Attacks on Wall Street and the Eighteenth Amendment, and a demand for the immediate calling of the British war loan were features of meetings held in New York yesterday in support of the soldier bonus.

Four meetings were held in New York at the Lexington Opera House, the Morris High School in the Bronx, the Grand Central Hotel in the city, and at Cleveland Avenue Bldg. in Brooklyn.

At the Lexington Opera House, the speaker was William F. Keegan, state commander of the American Legion, and James F. Kieran, state commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Boy, 14, Kills Playmate, 13, Who Is Teaching Him How to Shoot

Phillips W. Wager, thirteen years old, was shot dead accidentally Saturday night at his father's home in Upper Saddle River, N. J., by Harold Vermeulen, fourteen years old, whom Phillips was coaching in quick shooting.

Phillips pointed the gun at me first and pulled the trigger. It just snapped the hammer; there was no explosion.

It was at first planned to add a premium of 40 per cent to the sub-committee finally concluded 25 per cent was adequate.

The original features of the bill, such as vocational training aid, home and farm aid and land settlement aid, are retained.

While four meetings of war veterans were supporting the bonus proposals yesterday, opposition to the scheme was expressed at a meeting at the Bedford branch of the Y. M. C. A. by Senator Thomas Sterling, of South Dakota.

There is more division on the bill than ever before," the South Dakota Senator said. "Many Congressmen who pledged their support so early would not support the plan now if it were possible for them to have their choice over again."

Wise Condemns Heartless Jews Who Refuse Aid

Bitterly Assails Them for Indifference to Stricken Co-religionists in Europe; Many Apostates, He Says

Sees an Industrial Feud Charges Some of Well-to-Do Are Taking Revenge on Closed Shop Workers' Kin

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, speaking at the Free Synagogue yesterday, defended Jacob Loeb of Chicago, and his criticism of the Jews of New York for their failure to give aid to the stricken Jews of eastern Europe.

In his sermon Rabbi Wise made the accusation that some Jews are holding themselves aloof from the appeal of the campaign workers in the hope that by so doing they may escape their racial responsibilities.

"To do as well as Mr. Loeb and his fellow Jews of Chicago have done the Jews of New York must give $10,000,000 instead of the bare $2,500,000 that has come from 300,000 subscribers.

"Deaf to Cries of Needy" "Too many Jews have lost their sense of sympathy with suffering. They are become deaf to the cries of the needy.

"Perhaps the gravest thing about it all is that the present failure is not an isolated one, as Mr. Loeb pointed out. It is a cumulative and discouraging failure, and still worse, it is a symptom of a state of affairs that obtains in the Jewish life of New York.

"Some of my fellow Jews of New York feel that if they hold aloof from their brothers now, they will stand out as completely American and as less Jewish. The un-Jewishness that is being displayed by the hearts of the Jews of New York leadership is unorganized, but the responsibility for this lies between those who lead without leading and those who follow without following.

"Suffer For Their Faith" "Let the Jews of New York remember that the children of East European lands have been orphaned because they are Jewish. Not because they are Polish, or Russian or Ukrainian, but because they are Jewish.

"And finally one of the worst things about the whole business has been that the partial failure is due to the attitude of some, I do not say most, well-to-do Jews of this community, who have either refused to help or failed to volunteer because they are unfriendly to all Jewish immigrants and most unfriendly to immigrants from Eastern European lands. Why? Because East

European Jewish immigrants are, or are said to be, among the leaders of the industrial agitation of our day.

"The question is, 'Shall little Jewish orphans in Poland and the Ukraine, the Jewish refugees, be penalized because their cousins and kinsmen in America demand the closed shop?' What a gallant and generous way of wreaking vengeance upon the innocents!"

Writing in Latest Taylor Confession Note Like Sands's

Letter From Connecticut Tells of "Scorned Wife," Who Confessed to Husband, the 2 Doing Killing

LOS ANGELES, March 5.—The latest "confession" of the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director, received by the police here in a letter mailed from an unnamed Connecticut city, was made by a man who described himself as "an avenging husband," it was disclosed today by captain of detectives Adams.

The officers are withholding the name of the city from which the "confession" came and the name signed to the document, while endeavoring to learn more of the writer.

According to the writer, the film director had had "an affair" with the writer's wife. Later the director had "scorned" her, the wife confessed to her husband, and the two of them planned "vengeance," the letter recounted.

The "confession" asserted that the night of the murder, February 1, the writer and his wife drove in an automobile to within two blocks of the Taylor bungalow. There they parked their car. From a distance they saw Mabel Normand, film actress, leaving the apartment, escorted by her motor car by the actor and Henry Harvey, Taylor's negro servant, talking with William Davis, Miss Normand's chauffeur.

While Taylor was talking with Miss Normand, the "confessor" continued, "the scorned wife" slipped through the open front door of the director's bungalow and unlocked the back door for her husband to enter.

When Taylor returned the wife and husband confronted him.

Ice Cream Cones Throw 12 Into Convulsions Three Children Critically Ill in Hospital From Convulsion Eaten at Party

Nine children and three grown persons were seized with convulsions yesterday at the home of James Jessop, 621 Ninety-second Street, Brooklyn, after they had eaten ice cream cones purchased in a neighborhood confectionery store.

Captain Adams declared the handwriting of the "confessor" was similar to that of Edward F. Sands, missing former butler-secretary to Taylor, but pointed out that the context precluded its having been written by Sands, who was not married.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 5.—Edward F. Sands, missing secretary in the Taylor murder mystery, is believed by "The Hartford Courant" to have been in this city two weeks ago. The newspaper to-morrow morning will say that its investigation indicates that a man who registered at a local hotel, giving his address as San Francisco, was the missing Sands.

The man who was at the hotel two weeks ago, "The Courant" says, is the same man who deserted from the naval base at New London during the war and who served in the navy under the name of Schneider.

Superintendent Robert T. Harlow, of the Connecticut State Police, said tonight that he had received no answer to a telegram he had sent to the police of Los Angeles. He said he was ready to aid in an investigation of any Connecticut clues in the Taylor case as soon as he received any definite information from the Los Angeles police.

Both Wilson and Cox Democrats are in this movement. If Senator Underwood should in the end muster only a small group of Democrats to support the four-power treaty, and that treaty should be beaten or jeopardized because the Democratic leader could not deliver on his promises, it would be hailed by his opponents as a blow at his prestige on the Democratic side. The working out of the fight on Senator Underwood is being watched by Senators with a measure of interest second only to the outcome of the treaty controversy itself.

effort among the Democrats opposing the treaties to undermine and break down the Underwood leadership.

Soon after arriving at his official residence in Downing Street the Premier was visited by Lord Birkenhead, the Lord High Chancellor, and Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary of the Colonies. The conference between the trio lasted an hour. Lord Birkenhead to-night gave a political dinner at his town residence.

The disposition in political quarters in London seems to be to believe that the climax of the crisis is not likely to be reached before next Tuesday, when Arthur J. Balfour is expected to deliver an important speech in London. According to an apparently inspired statement issued today, there is no change in the situation. Mr. Lloyd George's offer to resign has been held in abeyance, but not withdrawn. He still is awaiting assurance of the continued loyalty of the Unionist party to the coalition government.

The Premier points out that candidates are being chosen in various constituencies for the approaching general elections who openly disclaim Mr. Lloyd George's leadership yet receive the approval of Unionist headquarters, and he considers it impossible to go on under such conditions. It is further understood that the Premier insists that in the event of a general election there shall be a more equal allocation of seats between the Unionists and Liberals in the coalition, whereas the Unionists claim the preponderance of the seats.

The situation is complicated by the fact that while the Unionist members of the cabinet are earnestly urging the Premier not to resign, the coalition-Liberal members of the government are almost as anxious that he should resign.

They expect to see little prospect of success for the coalition in the general elections, and many of them are anxious to seek a reunion with the Asquith Liberals under Mr. Lloyd George's leadership. They admit this solution of the situation presents difficulties, but they express the belief that it might be accomplished in time.

There is a growing advocacy here of a postponement of the general election conference until after general elections are held in England, unless the present crisis is solved in such a manner as to leave the Premier with undiminished authority.

Bonus Bill Will Go to House To-day

Baltimore Bankers Oppose Bonus Financing Plans

Congress Committee Denounced for Suggesting Certificate Scheme; Gift to Pawnbrokers

BALTIMORE, March 5.—Nearly every financial crime from "basine defalcation of economic laws" to "barred theft by class legislation" was charged today by bankers of Baltimore against the sub-committee of the House of Representatives in control of the bonus bill. They were discussing the newly proposed "service-insurance-certificate" scheme.

The most important feature of this new scheme is to make the bonus certificates legal collateral for a loan of 50 per cent of their face value and to use accepted as such at any state or national bank or trust company.

William Loeb, president of the Baltimore Trust Company, said no Federal or state legislative body could force a bank or trust company to accept these certificates as legal collateral.

Walden Scovener, president of the National Exchange Bank, said he would not accept them, whatever action was taken by Congress. Both were absolutely against the new scheme.

Even Henry S. Barrett, an advocate of the bonus, called the new plan a "pawnbroker's bonus, with the loan sharks as the real beneficiaries.

Special Dispatch to The Tribune NORFOLK, Va., March 5.—Bringing a man ill with pneumonia 120 miles in an ambulance airplane in the teeth of a fifty-mile easterly gale at night is the feat performed by a navy crew and Dr. J. D. Benjamin, U. S. N. The sick man was V. E. Squires, a life saver attached to the Poyners Hill Coast Guard station, an isolated spot on the North Carolina coast.

Squires, who had been ill for several days without medical attention because no doctor was near, was at the point of death when a radio message was sent out Friday night for assistance. Admiral Rodman, commanding the 5th Naval District, ordered a navy ambulance plane and a doctor to go to his assistance. The plane was piloted by Boatswain Claude Tucker.

The trip to Poyners Hill was made in sixty-eight minutes and the trip back to Norfolk with the patient was made in seventy-four minutes. Squires was unconscious, with a high fever, when the airplane arrived at its destination. He was placed in a bed immediately and given medical attention by Dr. Benjamin. The plane was equipped with medical supplies.

During the flight back to Norfolk Dr. Benjamin continued treating the sick man. His fever was one degree lower when they reached here. The plane landed at the door of the naval base, and the Public Health Hospital at the naval base.

To-night it was reported at the hospital that the patient had a good chance to recover and that his condition is much more favorable.
