Entire Irish Diocese Facing a Church Ban

DUNDALK, July 30 (By The Associated Press).—Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, has threatened to excommunicate the entire diocese of Dundalk. This announcement was made to-day by Father McKeon in the cathedral here following the services. The priest said he had been advised by the primate that he was considering a visit to the diocese to examine into the state of affairs existing there and that he was deliberating the advisability of excommunicating the whole diocese as a result of the disorders.

Plunges and Tank Explodes

The airplane got away from him, however, and plunged into a main patch across the road from the club.

Plunges and Tank Explodes

As it struck the gasoline tank exploded. Flames seethed about the crumpled plane and a column of black smoke shot upward.

Plunges and Tank Explodes

No water was at hand, and it probably would have been useless if it had been. Women and men scrambled in the sun-baked soil of the mullein patch, scratching up handfuls of dirt, which they flung at the blazing wreckage.

Plunges and Tank Explodes

Before the wreckage was cool enough to touch without injury, motorists flocked to the highway nearby and excursions from the Neversink Beach clustered about the spot, picking and hawking at the remains of the airplane, intent upon supplying themselves with souvenirs and ignoring the two bodies awaiting removal.

Captain R. S. Eaker, of Mitchell Field, said that Captain Dodd and Lieutenant Lyons made the cross-country flight to their homes as a test flight, their course of instruction being near its end.

Plunges and Tank Explodes

After the bodies had been removed the souvenir hunters came in increasing numbers and seemed intent upon carrying the wrecked airplane away piecemeal.
