

Politics Institute Poor Place for Propagandist

Membership Composed of Serious Students Who Make Fine Audience for Sincere Advocate

Reason Is Appealed To Dr. Dennis Says Foreign Experts Must Give Aid in Reconstructing Russia

By Arthur S. Draper WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 6.—After a week at the Institute of Politics, which is holding its second annual session in this delightful spot in the Berkshires, one gains certain more or less definite impressions regarding this project of Dr. Harry A. Garfield, which has been made possible through the generosity of Bernard M. Baruch. Some of these impressions may be worth reporting, as the institute is still something of an adventure and a novelty.

Members are serious students. Their opportunities for study are far greater than those of the average American. The majority of them are professional people, college teachers, engineers, officers in the army and navy, lawyers, lecturers, to mention a few of the groups represented here. One and all they are interested in some phase of international relations, and not only interested but many of them are well enough informed to offer constructive criticism. Their information has been gained through reading newspapers, periodicals and books on foreign travel and in some cases through special work in a government department.

Lectures Interesting Any one who believes that it is a waste of money to study conditions abroad with special reference to their bearing on the situation at home will find much to encourage him here. As each day the dependence of one nation on another is brought home the importance of investigating international problems is emphasized. The lectures have proved interesting, but it is in the round table discussions that the real practicality rub shoulders. Such timely topics as reparations and the cancellation of inter-allied debts, American policy toward Soviet Russia and American policy in general have brought out fruitful discussions if for no other reason than that many sides of the questions have been presented.

Frankness of the discussion in the round table on "foreign journalism" has been helpful to the practical newspaper man because it has enlightened him regarding the real attitude of American people on this particular subject. The correspondence published to-day. It has also offered him an opportunity to present the problem of the press to them in a clearer light. So it is with other subjects. The members of the Williamstown institute are neither radicals nor reactionaries, they are serious minded Americans anxious to learn all they can about the international situation, and to be of assistance in finding a solution for them.

Talks on Russian Policy Dr. Alfred L. P. Dennis, of Washington, talked this morning about Russia, the most important of the Russian states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which have just been recognized by the United States Government. Dennis was asked what his opinion was of the suggestion by Raymond Recouly, the Paris editor, that as "the moral and material destruction of Russia has been completed it is necessary to think of a rapid reconstruction" and "it will mean more a colonization than a reconstruction." Dr. Dennis could not believe that M. Recouly had in mind the settlement of Russia province by province but rather a gradual economic penetration of the country. The fact that Russia has lost most of her technical experts is beyond dispute, he said, and "there is no question that foreign experts must take over a large part of the work of reconstruction, which under the best conditions will take many years to accomplish."

Not Alarmed by Treaty "I am not one of those," he said, "who believe that another European war is near at hand. The Russo-German treaty does not alarm me unduly. Germany was a powerful economic factor in Russia before the war, and it is only natural that the two countries should have close economic relations in the future. After the Geneva and the Hague conferences I look for a new stage in the Russian negotiations. That further separate agreements between the European countries and Russia will be made seems inevitable. I believe also that syndicates of bankers will be formed to work in Russia, and in this respect the Germans have several millions of dollars outside their country which they could use. Politically it would be a great mistake for them to keep such a course at the present time when the whole reparations question is very much to the fore.

"Speaking for myself I think that we shall move slowly in our dealings with Russia. The moral question is an important one in our minds—more important than it is regarded by some of the Europeans. It is one of the things that the states contiguous to Russia are now satisfied to have the Soviet government stand because they fear a change in government might be injurious to them. Our latest information is that Trotsky has made very large reductions in his army, the estimates running as high as 50 per cent, but there is always the danger of an attack on one of the border states—Poland or Rumania, for instance.

GENEVA, Aug. 6 (By The Associated Press).—"The welfare of the League of Nations and the welfare of our own country would be advanced if we entered into full membership in the League of Nations, but it is apparent from an intimate view of the situation here that membership of the United States is not essential to the life of the League of Nations," said James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio, this evening in a speech delivered to the members of the secretariat of the League of Nations and prominent men of Switzerland. Mr. Cox, since his visit here, has made a thorough examination of the workings of the league at its headquarters.

Valentino has made this popular tour of Spain just what I have intended him to be—a child of the people, simple, unsophisticated and superstitious, vain and sure of himself in the ring, but timid with people in the other world. It was agreed that he never was at home in the presence of Dona Sol. She treated him not as a hero, but as the Great Catherine treated her lovers.

At the Rivoli Gloria Swanson will be seen in "Her Gilded Cage," which has moved down from the Rivoli. Tom Mix will be reviewed to-morrow.

Unions' Fight on Pomerene, Woman Vote, Progressives, Wet Issue Make Outcome To-morrow Uncertain

COLUMBUS, Aug. 6.—Uncertainty to-night pervades the camps of the sixty-nine candidates for major offices in this state who will go before the people in the primary elections on Tuesday. From the standpoint of national politics the contest between United States Senator Pomerene, seeking renomination on the Democratic ticket, and John J. Lentz, former Representative, has created the keenest interest.

Chief interest centers in the fight for the Republican nomination for United States Senator there are four entrants, of whom Representative Simeon D. Fess, former college president, generally is conceded to be the probable winner. The others are former United States Senator Charles Dick, endorsed by the railroad brotherhoods; Lieutenant Governor John H. Arnold, and David W. Wood, a Civil War veteran, who is a perennial candidate. Fess, endorsing the dry participation of avowed progressives and the perennial wet and dry issue—are responsible for befuddling the situation.

The Stage Door

Sam H. Harris will present "The Nervous Wreck" by Owen Davis at the Apollo Theater, Atlantic City, to-night.

At the Broadway Theater, Long Branch, to-night Arthur Hammerstein will present Frank Tinney in "Daddy Dill," the musical comedy which will come to the Apollo Theater on Monday night, August 21.

Carl Randall has returned from Europe and has devised several new dances for the annual production of the "Greenwich Village Polka" in which will appear, Mr. Randall has been studying folk dances in the Pyrenees.

This is the last week of the "Plantation Revue" at the Forty-eighth Street Theater.

William A. Brady's first production of the season is to be "Swifty" by John Peter Tooney and Walter C. Percival, with Hala Hamilton in the title role. It will be seen for the first time at Stamford on Friday evening, August 18.

The London production of "The Cat and the Canary" will be made by Kibbourn Gordon, Inc., in association with Green-Smith & Malone, Ltd., opening November 1.

Morris Gest has made arrangements to bring to this country Street Souffles, another of Ballet's artists, to join Nicholas Brothers in "The Happy Rhythm" at the Strand in "Just Tony."

At the Rivoli Gloria Swanson will be seen in "Her Gilded Cage," which has moved down from the Rivoli. Tom Mix will be reviewed to-morrow.

Conferences Meet and Adjourn, but the League of Nations stands as a working organization through 365 days in the year as a permanent institution for progress.

The dream of generations has come true. Mr. Cox began, referring to the first decision handed down by the permanent international court. "What statesmen and international jurists have regarded as a possibility throughout the years," he added, "is now a reality. The mandate territories are free from the menace of selfish interests.

The chairman has made a diplomatic reference to the absence of America from the League of Nations. It must be confessed that an American has strange emotions when he visits Geneva. He looks across the lake to the Hotel Franco, where thousands of our brave boys are in the sleep of death. They gave their lives that an institution of peace might be builded.

Mr. Cox said that he had faith in the future of Europe, but he thought it necessary that something should be done, and done quickly. "The psychology of 1922," the speaker declared, "is not the psychology of 1919. Certain readjustments seem to be inevitable. Europe is deadlocked, and an outside, unprejudiced power could break it."

In concluding, referring to reparations, Mr. Cox said: "Those who destroyed property should be held to financial accountability, but only in so far as they are able to pay. All should be permitted to live. It is important that all nations become members of the League of Nations."

under the management of A. L. Erlanger and George C. Tyler, by arrangement with J. Hartley Manners, "The Shark." The story which we do not care for in the picture is the philosopher who finds a reason for everything. He says that women were made to give happiness, and that they are not to be feared. He says that he who wins fame and prosperity by cruelty and bloodshed shall surely perish. And he is constantly breaking in on the most exciting passages to set some of the spectators laughing.

Valentino has made this popular tour of Spain just what I have intended him to be—a child of the people, simple, unsophisticated and superstitious, vain and sure of himself in the ring, but timid with people in the other world. to convey the following vital information to the hundreds of thousands of people of Greater New York.

Post Office statistics just published, announce that every person receives on an average 112 letters a year.

Instead of sending you a special delivery letter, thereby clogging the mails, we are printing this announcement, which costs $2,000, to reach every one in Greater New York and convey to them the important news that the great William Fox Screen Spectacle, "Nero," now being presented at the Lyric Theatre on West 42d Street, is nearing the end of its long and phenomenal engagement.

Intending patrons, who have postponed seeing this great and wonderful screen spectacle of the glories of ancient Rome—a love romance, with the reign of Nero as the background,—should order seats immediately.

Twice daily, at the Lyric Theatre, on West 42d Street and only a few more weeks in which to see it.

Every person in Greater New York should immediately order seats by mail for this superb spectacle. That would make six million more letters for the Post Office to handle, but "Nero" is worth the trouble. See it at once before it is too late.
