Pan-America Clears Hour and Quarter Behind Its Schedule; Radio to Keep It in Touch With States

Boy Gives Secretary Gift

Lad of 8 Pleases Him With Offer of Magazines That He Bought With Savings

Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State, accompanied by Mrs. Hughes and the group of delegates selected to represent this government at the Brazilian Centennial Exposition, sailed yesterday for Rio de Janeiro on the steamship Pan-America, of the Munson Line.

Apart from his official interest in the exposition, Mr. Hughes expressed delight over the long journey to Brazil. He boarded the vessel about 5 p. m. and seemed anxious to be on his way. Regarding his mission to Rio de Janeiro, Mr. Hughes said:

"I am looking forward to the visit to Brazil with the keenest pleasure. It is a most agreeable duty to which the special mission has been assigned—of conveying to the government and the people of our sister republic a cordial greeting and felicitations on the occasion of their 100 years of independence. 'Esteem for Brazil'."

"Nothing has ever marred the historic friendship between the two peoples and we are looking forward to the happiest co-operation in the future. 'I am especially honored by the opportunity at this time to return on behalf of President Harding to the people of the liberal and high-minded Emperor Dom Pedro paid to us at the time of our centennial celebration in 1876. The present occasion is a most auspicious one for reviving memories of the past and for expressing anew our feelings of esteem and friendship for the Brazilian people.'"

The Pan-America, which was scheduled to sail at 5 p. m., did not move out to the stream until 6:15 p. m. The last half hour of the wait seemed to drag heavily for Mr. Hughes. He appeared on the deck several times and inquired about the probable sailing time.

Present From Boy of Eight
On one of his strolls around the deck he stopped near the gangplank and observed the preparations for getting under way. While near the plank his attention was directed to a small boy who was standing with a little bundle under his arm and inquired for "Mr. Hughes, the Secretary." The boy, who said his name was Rupert Focks and that he was eight years old, was brought before the Secretary. The boy smiled and asked him what he wished. In timid fashion the lad held up his small bundle and offered it to Mr. Hughes, saying in a thin voice:

"I thought you might like to read something on the ocean and I brought you this."

Mr. Hughes took the package and, slipping open the cover, found that it contained several copies of the Tribune. Glancing over the pages of the first magazine he drew out the Secretary and said:

"This seems to be a very nice magazine. I shall be glad to read it at sea."

With Money He Saved
The pleased young Rupert, who muttered a feeble "Thank you," said:

"There did you get these magazines?" inquired the Secretary.

"I got them for you," replied the boy.

"But why did you get them for me?" "So you could read 'em."

"And you bought them for me yourself?" "Yes, sir, I bought them with some money what I had saved." This consideration brought a hearty laugh from the Secretary.

"That's mighty kind of you. I appreciate your thoughtfulness."

"Yes, sir," responded Rupert.

Fight on Bonus Again Pressed By Wadsworth

Senator Assails McCumber for Saying Veterans Would Refuse to Fight Again if It Fails

Calls Charge an Insult

Underwood Holds Financial Burden Would Be an Imposition on the Country

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Although soldier bonus legislation was overshadowed in the Senate to-day by debate over the coal question, Senator Wadsworth, Senator Underwood and Senator Heflin spoke on the bill. No progress was made in a parliamentary way. When a vote will be reached is still uncertain. There is pressure to vote this week, but it is doubtful if this can be brought about.

Senator Wadsworth again opposed the bill in a brief speech in which he took exceptions to utterances by Senator McCumber seeming to indicate that if the bonus were not granted world war veterans would not go to the defense of the country in the next war.

"I have no such low opinion of the veterans as this," said Senator Wadsworth. "I cannot comprehend how such doubts could enter into the mind of any Senator, or how any Senator will allow himself to say that it is wiser and safer for us to pay them a bonus than to take a chance of not having their support in some national crisis. I will never subscribe to any such doctrine or suggestion."

That is an important implication—the character of argument is used to gain votes in support of the bonus bill and I resent it and the insinuation reflecting upon the honor and integrity of the ex-service men."

Senator Underwood went over ground which he has covered in past arguments against the bill. He estimated the cost of the bill at from $4,000,000 to $7,000,000,000 and held it would be a mistake to put this burden on the country.

The Alabamian declared dollar-cred not measure the services of the men who fought for their country in France, and it was not the medium to use to reward those services. He said he would oppose this bill just as he had always opposed service pensions.

British Debt to U.S. All Her Own, Asserts Mellon

$4,135,000,000 Represents Money Advanced Here to Cover War Purchases in This Country, He Says

No Security for Others

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—In connection with the recent declaration by the Earl of Balfour that Allied debts to England were inseparably linked with European indebtedness to the United States, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to-day announced that the funding of the $4,135,000,000 owed the United States by Great Britain had no connection whatever with the loans made by Great Britain or the United States to other nations. He added that the funding had no relation to the German reparations question.

The Treasury Secretary made his declaration with respect to the British debt in a formal statement, issued, he said, on account of numerous inquiries reaching the Treasury as to the exact status of the obligations of the various European governments held by the United States with respect to the British debt.
