

Tolley Defeats C. V. Hooman in Final of National

Triumphs Over Team Mate by 6-and-5 Score

American Golfers in Work-Out for Walker Cup Matches, Starting To-day

By Grantland Rice
SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 27.—As a preliminary flourish to the international golf matches for the Walker Cup over the far-famed National Links, Cyril J. H. Tolley, of England, defeated his team mate, C. V. L. Hooman, of England, by the wide margin of 6 and 5. The match was the final of the National Links invitation tournament.

The Battle of Brookline

By Grantland Rice
No. 7—Willie I. Hunter
The melee at Brookline is quite likely to show that Willie Hunter, late of Deal, England, is the most dangerous invader in the championship field. He is twenty-seven years old, five feet eight inches in height, weighing 145 pounds. His thick, wavy, sandy hair gleams in the sun with something of a redder glow, and when he once steps into a golf match not even a charge of dynamite can blow him loose until the match is over.

Willie I. Hunter
tried skill with the putting blade he will be one of the most formidable men on the field, an entry not even a Guimet, a Jones or an Evans can take lightly for a moment at any stage of the match. He has been playing exceptionally fine golf for the last few weeks and is now nearing the crest of his best game.

He comes of a family of golfers, his father being the professional at Deal, where Willie at an early age acquired the knack of the ancient game. His record in the last three years has been a record. In 1920 at Muirfield he reached the last eight in the British amateur. That same year he led all amateurs in the British open at Deal. In 1921 he won the British amateur crown, and later in the fall fought his way to the last four in the amateur championship of the United States. On his way to the semi-final plateau he eliminated Bobby Jones, with the latter playing extremely well.

1. He has all the grim, unbroken determination of a Travers or a Travis. His nerves are at their best in the face of a hard uphill match.

165 Amateur Golfers to Tee Off Saturday for National Title

Pairings Announced Yesterday by United States Golf Association Show British Entrants Draw Prominent Americans as Partners for Qualifying Round

Armour-Butchart Team Downs Mitchell-Duncan

In a four-ball match that was replete with brilliant golf, Tommy Armour and Cuthbert Butchart defeated Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, the famous British pros, over the double course of the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club yesterday, 1 up. The first eighteen holes were played over the long west course in the forenoon, and although Mitchell equaled the record with a 70 and his partner, Duncan, was only two strokes worse, they were only 1 up on their opponents, neither one of whom was better than 75.

THE ROUND-UP

By The Staff

AS THE Giants move homeward from the West after a highly successful tour, which produced eleven victories in thirteen games, it appears to be a certainty, or at least as near certain as anything can be in baseball, that part of the next week's series will be played at the Polo Grounds. The Cardinal menace has been squelched, and there is nothing about the Cubs to inspire terror. The champions-to-day have a seven-game lead. With thirty-four games yet to play there is plenty of time for that lead to be cut down, but there is no team in the field that is capable of such a performance.

As for the Yankees, their fight goes on. Since early April it has been a real battle, and it may continue to the final week. It is the sort of a struggle which the Hugmen waged successfully a year ago, when they had to carry on until the day before the end of the season to make victory a certainty. They are better equipped to-day than they were in that stirring struggle with the Indians of 1921, then holders of the world's championship title.

The fact that the Yankees have to make another Western trip is frequently offered as an argument that the team must labor under a handicap. It was no handicap two weeks ago, when they won eleven of fifteen games on the other end of the circuit. Another thing to be borne in mind is that the Hugmen have seventeen games to play with the weaker Eastern clubs—Senators, Red Sox and Mackmen—while the Browns have only nine more games with these teams. The Yankees have beaten the Browns eleven times in eighteen starts, and like the team of a year ago, the 1922 Hugmen do their best work under real stress. Jones and Mays are showing oldtime skill again and so is Hoyt. Bush and Shawkey have been consistently good. With so many things in their favor, a Western trip of thirteen games should hold no terrors.

America's Tennis Prestige in Safe Hands

AS THE lawn tennis season approaches its climax, with the playing of the Davis Cup challenge round matches at Forest Hills, beginning next Friday, and the men's national championship singles, starting at the Germantown Cricket Club on September 8, there is every indication of a fitting finale to what has been a signally successful season.

On the eve of the Davis Cup matches it appears that the United States teams that will face the challenging Australians have a decided advantage and should win by a wide margin, if all the men play according to form. Tilden and Johnston, already virtually named as our singles players, should each defeat Patterson and J. O. Anderson or Wood in the event. Doubles is more of a doubtful proposition, the challengers being undoubtedly stronger in the paired game.

It may be that the final round match in the national doubles championship tournament at Longwood-to-morrow, when Tilden and Richards, the playing-through champions, meet Patterson and Wood, will relieve the Davis Cup committee of looking further for a successful defending combination. A victory by Tilden and his partner will automatically stamp the champions as the best available team in this country, since Johnston is to be held solely for singles competition.

On the other hand, a victory for the Australians will mean that some other combination must be found for the defense of the cup. Perhaps Richards and Williams would form the ideal team, or, if not they, then Tilden and Williams. In any event, the United States may look forward with confidence to the result of the series of five matches. This country's tennis prestige has been placed in the keeping of four of the leading players of the world, in Tilden, Johnston, Williams and Richards, whose motto will be "They shall not pass."

Rule Against Mixed Bouts Apparently in Force

THE New York State Boxing Commission has stated repeatedly that it has no objection to mixed bouts in which white and colored fighters are matched, but still the managers of many negro scrappers continue to complain that they can find no work for their boys.

A case in point is that of Danny Edwards, the well behaved and exceedingly efficient bantamweight from the Pacific Coast. Danny appears to be able to get no matches in this state, although in New Jersey he is regarded as a first class attraction. Those interested in Edwards declare that his color precludes the possibility of getting any matches for him on this side of the Hudson.

Six-Meter Racing Committee Does Task Well

THE Seawannahe Corinthian Yacht Club's selection committee, named for the purpose of picking four boats out of a fleet of sixteen six-meter yachts to contest against the British next month on Long Island Sound, exercised great wisdom when it decided on Grebe, Lea, L'Esprit and Clytie to represent the United States.

The elimination trials, held off Oyster Bay last week, were conducted in a manner that gave every candidate a fair chance, and the fact that no complaint was heard in connection with the final selections is a tribute to the committee that had this difficult task in hand. Owners and crews of the discarded boats accepted the verdict in a fine spirit.

Grebe, Lea, L'Esprit and Clytie in the official elimination trials only lived up to their performances in the many races they have had in the waters of Long Island Sound this summer. Grebe was the best of the American team that went abroad last summer to meet defeat at the hands of the English in the first team contest for the British-American Cup. Last week she was always up among the leaders and fighting for the honors. Throughout the summer Lea, L'Esprit and Clytie have been consistent performers, there being few contests in which they failed to show well.

Clytie, while she was not a winner particularly often, was usually among the first three to finish. Last week in the elimination trials she was never out of the first division. It had been argued against her that her skipper, Harry B. Plant, is a youngster and has never before participated in an international event. The committee took this into consideration, and after weighing the matter carefully decided to give young Mr. Plant his chance. That was a wise move, because it encourages America's youthful skippers, who are striving for recognition.

Lea, sailed by Sherman Hoyt, undoubtedly will prove to be one of the most formidable members of the American team. Hoyt is a veteran with an almost uncanny aptitude and understanding of yacht racing. He is always dangerous, and with an unquestionably fast boat under him he is certain to make a showing in the team struggles against the British.

Too Little Attention Is Paid to Caddies

GO TO any golf club in the metropolitan district and you will hear the same complaint about the caddies and the caddy system. With a few exceptions, the clubs in this section are having and have had considerable trouble regarding caddies. And yet nobody is to blame but the club members themselves.

Special Event For Spa Title Is Called Off

Running of Postponed 3-Yr.-Old Championship Would Interfere With Cup Race

By W. J. Macbeth
SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 27.—President Richard T. Wilson Jr. of the Saratoga Association, announced this evening that the three-year-old Special Championship race designed to bring Bunting, Kai Sang, Pillory and Whiskaway together at a mile and a quarter and which was to have been run yesterday had the track been good, had been abandoned.

The proposed race was a sporting event, the owners of the respective horses having consented to run for a trophy in order to recompense the crowd, which had gathered to see the same horses measure strides in the time-honored Travers Stake and which was riddled with scratches because of the muddy track. When the track was heavy yesterday it was proposed to have the Special run on Tuesday of this week. This date, coming so close to the Saratoga Cup, which is to be run on Thursday, the closing day of the Belmont Park at the end of the week, meeting, probably interfered with the engagements of some of the colts mentioned for the Special, and to-night's announcement followed.

When the thoroughbreds return to Belmont Park at the end of the week native New Yorkers are very likely to see a better brand of racing than that which obtained during the spring meeting of the metropolitan circuit, and for two good reasons.

As yet little form has been established. Especially in the two-year-old division has there been wanton inconsistency. The juveniles have been beating one another in in-and-out performances in such a manner as to leave the championship question right where it was before the present meeting began. Barring possibly Messenger, no two-year-old of the past year could stand out above their company. And Messenger has not raced enough as yet to establish that exceptional class of which he is suspected.

Veteran Dundee Stakes Junior Title at Velodrome To-night

Italian Ring Marvel Will Give Away Five Pounds in Battle With "Pepper" Martin, but Is Favored to Retain Crown Despite This Disadvantage

Johnny Dundee, most active of all the little men in the ring to-day and the fistic marvel of the current crop of battlers, swings into action again to-night. At the New York Velodrome Dundee will risk his junior lightweight title in a fifteen round bout with Vincent "Pepper" Martin, former featherweight star, who is now ambitious to star in a heavier division.

Dundee was a national figure in boxing circles before Martin ever climbed into a ring and he is good enough now to give five pounds to his young challenger and be favorite to retain his title. Martin is known to carry a dangerous punch and he believes that he can knock Dundee out. If he can he will perform a feat that has been done but once in a string of 365 ring engagements, which stretch back to 1909. Willie Jackson is the only boxer who enjoys the distinction of being in the ring while a referee counted ten over the little Italian.

Dundee has been giving away weight ever since he grew out of the featherweight class about eight years ago. He did not carry enough poundage to be regarded as a full-fledged lightweight, but he was quite a success in this class. After a semi-final will bring to Dundee a full-fledged lightweight, but he was quite a success in this class. After a semi-final will bring to Dundee a full-fledged lightweight, but he was quite a success in this class.
