

Lively Contests Due in Tuesday Primary Vote

Only Congressional and Local Offices Are Involved; Republicans in Several Heated Fights Up State

Hamilton Fish Opposed

Democrats Compete for Placs Here, but Murphy-Koenig Deal Dulls Edge

While the return to the convention system of nominating candidates for the state ticket and for United States Senator has robbed the primaries this year of their chief interest, there are a number of spirited contests in both parties in this city for the lesser offices, and several up state.

Up state, however, practically all the primary contests for elective offices are in the Republican primary, where success next Tuesday is practically equivalent to election on November 7. So demoralized is the Democratic organization in some sections north of the Bronx line that they have not named any designees for Congress in four districts and have not bothered to enter opponents to the Republicans in six of the Senatorial districts. And in many instances Democrats have declined to run for the Assembly and local offices.

Democrats Lively in City

Here, however, the Democrats are displaying real interest in the party's primaries on Tuesday, and several of the contests have engendered considerable bitterness. But the intense desire for success exhibited by so many of the Democratic contenders for nomination early in August, when they began to get up their designating petitions, has waned since Charles F. Murphy, with his political playmate, Samuel S. Koenig, put over the deal by which both hope to shelve surrogate John P. Cohalan of the 11th Congressional District and at the same time copper-rivet the election of Koenig's brother, Judge Morris Koenig, to the General Sessions bench. Democrats fear that the recentment of the voters against Murphy, who initiated the deal, may have a disastrous effect on their chances on November 7. These Tammany aspirants for public office are making it plain to their constituents that they disapprove of the Murphy-Koenig deal and similar protestations are being made by Republicans in this county, where Koenig is the boss.

As the result of the Murphy-Koenig deal, Edward S. Brogan has entered in the Tammany primaries for the nomination for Judge of General Sessions. Brogan offered to withdraw if any party would endorse Judge Robert E. Johnson, a Democrat, who has been named by the Republicans, and if the Republicans would endorse Judge Cornelius Collins, who has been named by the Democrats. This, of course, would have destroyed the only motive which actuated Samuel S. Koenig in entering the deal, for had the bosses accepted Brogan's proposal it would have meant the elimination of Sam Koenig's brother from the race.

Jewish Element Aroused

The Jewish element in the city is especially outraged over the deal to turn Cohalan down, and they have been the most violent in their denunciation of the hand-picked judiciary ticket of Murphy and Koenig, and, incidentally, no group in Manhattan have been more zealous in their efforts to recall Cohalan.

This is the only judicial contest in the primaries, as the nominees for Supreme Court will be chosen at the first week in October.

Up state there are two primary contests, which, because of the national prominence of the men opposed, transcend all others outside of the city. In the 24th Congressional District Daniel W. Wilbur is opposing Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. for re-nomination. Fish, who has a splendid war record, which was preceded by a tumultuous career in the State Assembly, where he fought consistently for cleaner politics and a better government, will come out victorious, according to his friends. This district embraces the cities of Dutchess, Ulster and Putnam. Fish, who was one of the leaders in the Progressive movement, comes from Putnam, and Wilbur from Dutchess.

The other notable up-state contest is between Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, nephew of the late Colonel Roosevelt and State chairman of the Progressive party, and John H. Bencivenga, an opponent of the reactionary element in the Republican party. Robinson, who represents the 35th Senatorial District, which embraces Putnam, Fulton and Hamilton counties, is being opposed by Daniel F. Strobel, an old-time political enemy of Robinson. Strobel is making the campaign against Robinson as a "dry" and is supported by the Anti-Saloon League. Robinson's answer has been that the wet and dry issue is not properly a state issue and has no place in the campaign. Yet Strobel is rightly telling his audiences that Robinson, at a meeting of women in New York, told them that he was a wet. Robinson's friends have said that he will win.

In the Republican camp upstate there are also primary battles in the 27th, 28th, 30th, 37th, 38th and 40th Congressional districts, and in the 27th, 29th, 37th and 47th Senate districts.

Two Out for Ten Eyck's Place

In the 28th District, made up of Albany County and eleven wards of the city of Troy, now represented by Peter Ten Eyck, Democrat, an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Charles M. Winchester, of Albany, and Milton J. Osgary, of Albany, are contending for the Republican nomination for Congress.

Dr. Frank Crowther, of Schenectady, elected to Congress four years ago over Mayor George B. Lunn, of Schenectady, and Theron Akin, of Amsterdam, are running in both the Democratic and Republican primaries. Representative Crowther is unopposed in the Republican primary. George H. Derry, of Schenectady, is opposing Akin in the Democratic primary. This is the 30th Congressional District and embraces Schenectady, Fulton, Hamilton and Montgomery counties. Akin is the incumbent in the 37th Congressional District.

which includes Chemung, Steuben, Schuyler, Tioga and Tompkins Counties, the drys are supporting Gail H. Stalker against Lewis Henry.

Representative Archie D. Sanders is opposed by Clark Allis. There, too, the issue is wet and dry. Allis, charging Sanders is wet. Sanders was whip of the State Senate in his last year in the State Legislature. This district embraces Chenango, Livingston, Orleans and Wyoming counties, and part of Monroe, and like the 37th, is solidly Republican.

Two Out in 40th District

The 40th, which includes Niagara County and part of Erie, Representative Wallace Dempsey has two opponents, Republican and Democrat, for re-nomination. They are John H. Liggett and Aseabymman John W. Slicer.

Besides the Robinson-Strobel contests the other Senate contests in the Republican primaries are: 27th, Senator Caleb H. Baumes, of Newburgh, is being opposed by Edward Bisland, of Albany; 31st, where Senator W. W. Campbell, of Lodi, is being opposed by Herbert C. Whitmore, of the same town, with the backing of ex-Senator George F. Thompson; 29th, where ex-Senator Henry M. Sage, of Albany, is opposed by Frank F. Woods, who is one of the leaders in the anti-Barnes insurgency. In the 37th there were three candidates until Thursday, when death took one of them—Archie C. Ryder, who was chairman of the Jefferson County Republican Committee. This leaves two contestants there—Frank C. Puro, of Watertown, and W. B. Van Alen, of Carthage.

In Westchester, as in Albany, there is a well-organized insurgent movement, led by Leslie J. Sutherland and ex-Sheriff Ulrich Wiesendanger, who stepped out after William Ward's scalp. The insurgents have put up a ticket for most of the offices to be filled in the county, and one of the Ward veterans, Assemblyman T. Channing Moore, who is perhaps the most popular of the Ward faction, is being opposed for re-nomination by Mabel McKinley-Baer, a niece of the late President McKinley.

Confined to Hearst Fight

The Democratic contests up-state are confined to attempts on the part of the Hearst faction to corral delegates to the state convention. These contests are confined to Monroe, Steuben, Erie, Seneca, and Saratoga counties. Contests started elsewhere by the editor-politician flattened out completely. The same will happen in the primaries on Tuesday, according to the followers of "Al" Smith.

In this city many of the primary contests involve control of the district organization. In Brooklyn election as state committeeman in the Republican primaries automatically carries with it leadership. Many of the contests in both parties elsewhere, while not avowedly for control of the district, spell the same thing, however.

In the 11th Congressional District, which includes lower Manhattan and Staten Island, Representative Daniel Flordan, Democrat, is being opposed by Joseph B. Handy, who also is running in the Republican primary, where Ralph Corretta is seeking the nomination.

There are four other Congressional contests in Manhattan—the 13th, where Murray Frestman is contending with Edward S. Brogan for the Republican nomination; the 15th, where State Senator John J. Boylan is opposed by John H. Freese for the Democratic nomination; the 16th, where Representative W. Bourke Cockran is opposed by William L. McLaughlin, and the 21st where Representative Martin C. Anson is opposed by Louis A. Lavelle, a prominent negro lawyer.

Other Contests for Assembly

The other contests for elective office in Manhattan are limited to four races for the Assembly nomination, three of them Republican. The Democratic contest is in the 23d, where Irving Coon and Samuel Dribben are having it out. The Republican are in the 9th, where ex-Assemblyman Martin O'Rourke is contending with David W. Kemper; the 19th, a strong negro district, where two negroes, James T. Simpson and R. M. Bolden, are having a spirited tie, and the 21st, which also has a heavy negro vote, where James D. Steel, a leading member of his race, is running against Horace Palmer, a white.

In Kings there are five lively Congressional contests, one of them Republican, where Representative Lester D. Volk, of the 10th, is opposed by Thomas F. Peterson. The Democratic contests are: Third, where Christian J. McWilliams, John Kissell and George W. Lindsay are contestants; 5th, Clyde W. Carter and ex-State Senator Lorinc M. Black Jr.; 8th, William E. Cleary and Gerald Morrell; 9th, David J. O'Connell and Henry Beckman.

State Senator William T. Simpson, of the 6th, one of the most popular members of the Brooklyn delegation in the Legislature, is opposed for re-nomination by Walter Worth, son of the late Jacob Worth, for many years a big power in Republican politics.

There are two Republican contests for Assembly in Kings, in the 4th between Peter Madia and John V. McAllister, and the 6th, between Arthur Arnow and Benjamin Simpson. In the 2d Assembly District Helen Lee and John Lucy are waging a bitter contest for the Democratic nomination to the lower house. There are three other Democratic Assembly rows in Kings, one three cornered, in the 15th, where Gerald F. Dunn and Joseph L. McCarthy are opposing Assemblyman John J. McLaughlin. In the 14th Joseph R. Bieko and John H. Bencivenga, and in the 16th, between James F. Kiernan and Sydney G. Harnett.

Queens has one contest for elective office, in the 9th Congressional District where David J. O'Connell and Henry Brockman are seeking the Democratic nomination.

Richmond has no local contest, but that, of course, participating in the 11th Congressional District fight, which will be settled by the vote in lower Manhattan.

Cummings to Open Hartford Convention Of State Democrats

Former National Chairman to Make Keynote Speech Wednesday as Peace Offering for Absence in '20

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
HARTFORD, Sept. 16.—Homer S. Cummings, of Stamford, formerly national committee chairman, will make the keynote address to the 750 delegates to the Democratic State Convention when they meet Wednesday evening at the Governor's Foot Guard Armory. This will be his first appearance in more than two years. His conspicuous absence from the 1920 convention is responsible for his present relations with the Connecticut Democrats, who would not nominate him this year even if he sought the United States Senatorship. He ran six years ago against McLean, but two years ago when an advocate of the League of Nations was wanted, he left the party in the lurch, and even failed to attend the convention waiting to nominate him.

The probable Democratic choice for United States Senator next week is the gubernatorial candidate of two years ago, Thomas J. Spallacy, of Hartford, a former newspaper reporter, who rose to be an Assistant Attorney General of the United States, and now maintains law offices both in Hartford and in New York. With him on the ticket probably will be Mayor David E. Fitzgerald, whose candidacy for Governor has not encountered serious opposition.

There are three contests among the Republicans in Manhattan for State Committeeman: Second Assembly District, Antonio d'Allesandro, the district leader, is being opposed by Michael R. Matteo, who is an Assistant United States Attorney under Colonel Hayward; 17th, where William H. Choros, former progressive Alderman, is opposing William Oppenheim; 21st, where John E. Earl, a negro, is seeking to oust Robert S. Conklin, who is in charge of the State Attorney General's office in this city.

The Democrats have but one such contest in Manhattan, in the 23d, where William J. Murphy is opposing John Mara.

In Brooklyn there are fifteen contests for state committeeman, seven of them among the Democrats and eight in the Republican primaries. The Republican contests are: Second, John O. Nelson and Marcus B. Campbell; 3d, Peter Scamini, Anthony De Martini and John P. Fogarty; 6th, Reuben L. Gledhill and John R. Crews; 8th, Harold L. Turk and Dennis F. Wheeler; 9th, Charles R. Warbasse and John C. Wandell; 13th, William H. Porter and Jesse D. Moore; 14th, Merrick Nittely and George A. Owens. The Democratic are: First, James J. Browne and Patrick Larney; 2d, Thomas F. Twyford and Joseph Fenelly; 12th, Thomas Higgins and Timothy E. Grim; 13th, George W. Lindsay and John J. Wackerman; 14th, Daniel J. Carroll and Frank T. Dixon; 16th, Kenneth F. Sutherland and John J. Foley; 20th, Michael F. Buckley and William F. Delaney.

In Queens there are two contests for state committeeman, both in the Republican primary—in the 1st between James Gordon and John Wagner, and in the 3d between Edward J. Neary and R. Leslie Smith.

In Westchester, as in Albany, there is a well-organized insurgent movement, led by Leslie J. Sutherland and ex-Sheriff Ulrich Wiesendanger, who stepped out after William Ward's scalp. The insurgents have put up a ticket for most of the offices to be filled in the county, and one of the Ward veterans, Assemblyman T. Channing Moore, who is perhaps the most popular of the Ward faction, is being opposed for re-nomination by Mabel McKinley-Baer, a niece of the late President McKinley.

William E. Thoms, of Waterbury, has been mentioned for Governor, in connection with the suggestion of former Congressman Augustine Lonergan, of Hartford, for United States Senator. Only a few delegates have been committed to this arrangement.

Cummings now understands the embarrassments he caused two years ago by his eleventh-hour declination and also understands how the party feels toward him. His appearance as keynote speaker will be in the nature of a peace offering, and his expected eloquent presentation of the national situation will be his rehabilitation into the good graces of the Connecticut democracy. Judge Rollin U. Tyler, of Haddam, is expected to be the candidate for Attorney General. Others mentioned for Lieutenant Governor, Treasurer, and Comptroller are John F. Addis, of New Milford; Charles D. Lockwood, of Stamford; and Sanford S. Weed, of New Canaan. The platform will be a declaration favoring light wines and beer by having the Volstead act conform with the Constitutional amendment. Blame for the coal and railroad strikes will be placed on the national Republican administration.

1,500 Workers Go Back to Jobs In Youngstown Steel Plants

More than 1,500 additional workers will be given employment in the independent steel plants of the Youngstown district next week, it was announced here today.

The Republic Iron and Steel Company will start its Bessemer plant Monday, taking on 1,200 men. The A. M. Byers Company at Girard, Ohio, will start forty-two puddling furnaces, employing 350 men. The Byers blast furnace probably will resume late next week. The Republic's Bessemer plant has been idle for nearly eighteen months.

Piel Brothers Absolved Of Selling Real Beer

Case Involving $50,000 Worth of Liquid Ended by the Grand Jury

Piel Brothers, one of the largest brewing concerns in the metropolitan district, was exonerated by the grand jury in Brooklyn yesterday of a long-standing charge of trafficking in liquor in violation of the Mullan-Gage law. The dismissal of the charge was filed yesterday with the chief clerk of the Kings County Court. The case was marked by a strange fatality, when Detective Lieutenant Albert Duffy, who made the original raid in the case, later lost his life when a still exploded on premises where he was conducting another raid.

The case, which is the most famous beer litigation recorded since the advent of prohibition, began on May 25 last, when police stopped a truck of the brewing company and charged they found barrels of real beer there. They arrested Max Heller, driver of the truck.

Two weeks later Lieutenant Duffy raided the brewery and seized $50,000 worth of alleged real beer. The case dragged along until yesterday, when Henry G. Piel, president of the company, signed a waiver of immunity and went before the grand jury, taking with him records showing that the beer had been manufactured for legitimate purposes and under valid government permit. Sales of the beer were checked and all complied with the law.

The police have kept the seized beer since its confiscation. County Judge McLaughlin held up a motion for its forfeiture pending action on the complaints in the case. A motion for the return of the seized property to the brewing company will soon be passed upon by the court.
