

Philadelphia Will Be Only National League Club to Make Change in Management for 1923

Washington, in the American League, Will Have New Pilot

Many Candidates in the Field as Successors to Wilhelm and Milan as Leaders of the Phillies and Senators; Frank Frisch Joins the Benedicts

By John Kieran
With the definite announcement by William F. Baker, the owner of the Philly Nationals, that Irving Wilhelm has joined the Alumni Association of Former Quaker Managers, the sum total of changes in team management for the coming season is two, with a possible third choice coming under the wire. In addition to Philadelphia, Clark Griffith has admitted that he is looking about for a new skipper for his Senators, and Hughhey Duffy, of the Red Sox, is the team leader whose fate seems to be hanging in the balance.

Columbia Grid Men Put In Extra Long Period of Drill

With but two practice sessions remaining before the game with Middlebury at South Field Saturday and one of them certain to be but a light workout, the Columbia football team is definitely out of Washington. Duffy, as aforesaid, is waiting for the decision. In the National League no one has appeared to serve dispossession notices on John J. McGraw, Wilbert Robinson, Tim Lincecum, Fred McNeill, Harry Frazee, Rickey. Bill Killefer signed for two years with the Cubs and Barney Dreyfus recently hooked McKeechie for the coming season with the Pirates. That left Quakerstown the only vacant spot on the circuit. In the American League Huggins has been signed, Connie Mack, Kid Gleason, Ty Cobb, Lee Fohl and Tim Speaker are fixtures. Clyde Milan is definitely out of Washington. Duffy, as aforesaid, is waiting for the decision.

The number of candidates for the vacant position is rather large, considering that only three jobs are open for bidders. There is talk of the second coming of Hugo Bezdek in the older league to try his hand with the fatal Phillies, but President Baker is still scanning the horizon with a spyglass for the prophet who will lead his wandering followers into the promised land of the first division, and his choice has yet to be announced. Mike Kelly, of St. Paul, was mentioned for the Senatorial job, and Mike admitted he had the matter under consideration. Jimmie Burke headed the list of non-candidates for the Red Sox job, but he was closely pressed by other candidates.

1922 Model Skipper
Frank Chance, the former Peerless leader who was visiting around town during the world's series in company with Barney Oldfield, just managed to get his name into the chronicles of the day as a prospective manager for the Red Sox in time to have it printed in the check the rumor into sudden death. In fact the Red Sox owner has made no definite announcement that Duffy is through at the moment. The chances are that if he cannot find the man he is looking for the Red Sox will have to wry through the 1923 season with their 1922 model skipper.

Just by the way, George Grant also took time out to deny that Dick Rudolph had been tossed lightly out of the Boston cantonment and that the former pitcher would be appointed coach of the Giants for the coming season. "Over my dead body he will" was the attitude Grant took, and he is generally given credit for knowing something about the matter. Rudolph is looked upon as a coach rather than a player up Boston way, and perhaps the fact that he might have been omitted on a list of the players gave rise to the story.

"Mental Poise" May Enable Tiger and Dartmouth to Win

By Ray McCarthy
The thing that Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's great football coach, calls mental poise is the spirit or the force that is likely to enable Princeton and Dartmouth to win in their respective games on Saturday. The psychological or mental factors have a greater influence in many football games than many people realize or appreciate.

For instance, you can figure here and now that Dartmouth, a college steeped in tradition of great gridiron feats, is coming to the Polo Grounds prepared to wipe out the sting of that defeat handed it by Cornell in Ithaca last year. This game stands out as one of the most promising, so far as excitement goes, of the several good things scheduled for this week-end.

Many figure the big Green team to be merely a set-up for the machine that Doble has assembled at Ithaca. This is a fair impression, but you can rest assured if Doble is not a young fellow going to get the battle of his young Saturday and Sunday, and striving to get his charges in the right mental frame of mind to meet the inevitable chances for victory will depend on it. The same reasoning can be applied to the Princeton-Harvard contest. It is a game that will be a psychological advantage, so to speak. It was their remarkable fighting spirit, their never-say-die attitude in the Chicago struggle, that enabled them to beat the Maroon. That same spirit may carry them through to victory at Cambridge.

These two games stand out as headliners this Saturday. But there is another attraction that, so far as an individual contest, is of the most promising. It is the annual Notre Dame-Army fracas on the plains at West Point. Nobody ever complained of not being well repaid for attending this collision. It is always one of the bitterest of a year's football meetings. This year's contest promises to be the most thrilling of all the games the Army and the Westerners have played.

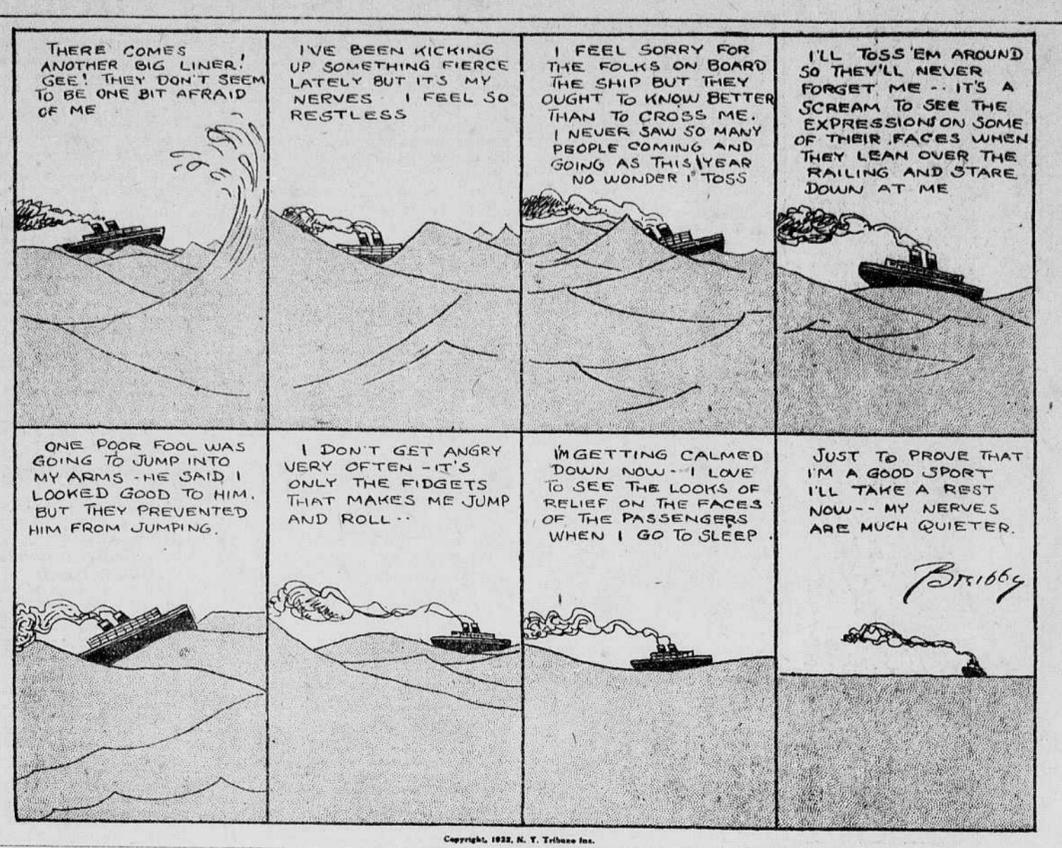

West Point has a better eleven by far than it had last year, and Rockne's crew, while it is not so smart or so finished as a team as last year's, being practically an entirely new eleven, is nevertheless one of the fastest and best in the country.

There are several other games which will probably be quite as thrilling as any of the three mentioned above. The Pittsburgh-Penn battle will be a sizzler, and unless the Red and Blue is to fade away from the picture it will have to stop Warner's team from the Pennsylvanians. Not only will Davies not be running against Old Penn this year, but as a team assistant he ought to be able to tell the Penn players how Warner does it.

Down in Dixie Georgetown and Georgia Tech will mingle in their annual combat, which is usually exciting enough to attract all of the natives from every part of Old Georgia. Penn State and Carnegie Tech will clash, and according to the wisecracks the Pittsburgh eleven this year is going to hand Bezdek a surprise. That, however, remains to be seen.

Syracuse will entertain McGill in an international conflict that should be most interesting. It was McGill that introduced football in this country back in 1878 or thereabouts. Only at that time the game was called rugby. Right probably will have to suffer for W. & J.'s win over Lafayette. The Eastonians are in no frame of mind now to be trifled with.

Gene Sarazen to Rest Two Weeks in Florida

GENE SARAZEN, national open golf champion, accompanied by Dr. F. A. Landolf, sailed yesterday for Miami, Fla., where he will spend two weeks getting into condition for his coming tour of the Pacific Coast. The youth said he was feeling as well as ever and would start playing golf again immediately.

While in Miami Sarazen will put in a long session daily in practice. His rapid recovery from his operation has been quite as remarkable as his rise to fame. The youngster seems endowed with an unusual physique.

Forward Passing Headquarters

If some stranger, inquiring for details, cares to know about the case, the forward passing headquarters of the world are located at Notre Dame and the master in charge of the lodge is an individual known as Knute Rockne.

Rockne and his Notre Dame team have made forward passing an art and a science where most of the others have in a way still figured it a guess.

At Notre Dame it isn't a guess. It is merely a matter of passing perfectly to the receiver and of having the receiver skilled in the knack of taking the ball out of the air, even at top speed.

Overpowering Fate
Last fall Rockne, in the closing stages of the race, had one of the greatest football machines we ever saw.

It is only an outside opinion, but it is our belief that through November Notre Dame could have beaten any football team in the world, and we know just how strong Iowa, Lafayette and W. and J. were then.

Iowa's great machine beat Notre Dame one touchdown earlier in the year, where the vital statistics show that Rockne's team gained almost four yards, against one.

But November was another story, when Rockne had his great cast working in perfect order.

From that star cast Notre Dame lost almost every member. Only one or two veterans came back. In addition to that, he lost Lieb, one of his stars, and other injuries cut down his forces.

He was forced to send new stuff into action, but he has now a team that is the best forward passing aggregation in the country, barring none.

When he played Georgia Tech in Atlanta several of his best men were in poor physical shape and it was for this reason we figured Tech to win.

But even against these heavy odds and the long trip, Rockne sailed along to another triumph.

Notre Dame and Army
On Saturday of this week the Army again will attempt to break up this baffling passing game which Rockne has built into such top science.

The Army for many years has been attempting to stop this passing game, without much luck.

They have tried out all the known defenses, but the defense that will check the passing game leaves the line attack in position to work, and Rockne always has at hand one or two great ground-gaining stars, such as Gipp, Mohardt, and now Castner, one of the best all-round football players in the United States.

The Army will find Castner a harder man to handle than any member of the star Yale backfield, and Yale has her share of backfield talent.

But Castner can kick, drop kick, pass, run and do anything else that may happen to be needed at the moment.

Frank Expected Back in Penn State Line-Up
STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 8.—Penn State coaches gave their charges their last hard scrimmage before the Carnegie Tech game to-day and will confine themselves to light work on Nov. 11, rather than take any chance of further injury to some of the star players. It is felt that Penn State must have its strongest line-up in the game this week in order to have any chance of victory over the fast-flying Skibo aggregation.

It is practically certain that Hap Frank, Harrisburg boy who has been playing star guard at left end all season, will return to the line-up for the Tech game. Frank was injured in the Syracuse contest and McCoy took his place against the Navy.

Fordham Gets Rest Before Drive for Three Final Games

A rest from the daily practice session was accorded the Fordham football players yesterday. The holiday was the first that the Fordham squad has had since practice began early in September. Heretofore, rain or shine, Frank Gargan has kept his charges on the go daily, never once allowing them to pass up an afternoon without the usual two to three hour session.

The reason for the day off was the splendid playing of the Maroon warriors against N. Y. U. on Election Day, when Fordham won, 14 to 6. In preparation for this and other previous hard games, the Fordham players have been under quite a severe mental and physical strain, and Gargan wisely decided to give them one day to themselves.

The thirteen Fordham players who broke into the N. Y. U. game reported to Dr. Jake Weber, Fordham athletic trainer, in fine condition. But for a few bruises they were none the worse for their participation in that strenuous Fordham-N. Y. U. tussle.

Despite their respite of yesterday, Gargan will get down to "brass tacks" with his charges this afternoon. They will be driven just as hard as ever, for though they have already met seven hard teams, there still remain three worthy opponents for the Maroon to tackle this year.

These teams are Colby, Holy Cross, and Muhlenberg. Colby will be encountered Saturday at Fordham Field, in the Maroon's last home game of the season. Fordham is figured to beat the Maine team but will have no surefire for Gargan's men will, in meeting Colby on Saturday, be playing their third game within a period of eight days.

A week from Saturday, the Maroon will step up against Holy Cross, one of Fordham's biggest rivals. The Bronxites will have their hands full of that afternoon, for Holy Cross' "conquered Georgetown, 13 to 0, and Georgetown has beaten Fordham 28 to 13. The Fordham team that will face Holy Cross, however, will be a much stronger and more confident team than that which took to the gridiron against Georgetown.

Muhlenberg, which will be met on November 25, should be easy for Fordham. Last season, however, it almost beat Fordham but this season Muhlenberg has shown very little.

For the first time this season Coach Thompson of New York University eleven a day of rest after a hard battle. The University Heights team will play the City College team on Saturday.

The loss of Bonforte, Violet right guard and Rosenberg, veteran left guard, last season were taken most keenly felt in Tuesday's game. Captain Walter Taylor, who was injured in the Columbia tussle, it is expected, will have fully recovered so that he will be able to play the entire game next Saturday. Trainer Von Elling hopes to have both Rosenberg and Bonforte back in the game against City College.

Montclair A. C. Leads League in Met. Class B. Squash Tennis

Rand, of the Harvard Club, Defeats Piel, of New York A. C., in Feature Match on the New Casino's Courts; Bergfeld, Seller, Luchars and Hearn Win

By Fred Hawthorne
The second series of matches in the metropolitan Class B squash tennis championship tournament was played yesterday, Harvard defeating the New York Athletic Club by a total of 6 matches to 1, on the latter courts, and the Montclair Athletic Club winning 6 matches to 1 from Heights Casino, of Brooklyn, on the Casino's new courts. As a result yesterday's victory the team of the Montclair A. C. now leads the league with two victories and no defeats. The next matches will be played Tuesday.

One of the most stirring struggles of the day occurred in the match between R. C. Rand, of the Harvard Club, and Gottfried Piel, of the New York A. C., with Rand finally carrying off the honors by a score of 15-5, 8-15, 15-14. Rand won the first game handsily enough, but Piel, improving steadily, squared accounts by winning the second game. In the last game Rand led at 13-11, but then Piel made a great rally and drew level, at 13-11. It was thereupon agreed to play for five points. Rand required five hands before he could get the ball into play of service, but once he had got warmed to his work he reeled off beautiful shots just above the tell-tale, and his striking and footing were so fast that Piel could get only one more point before Rand had clinched the game and the match.

Montclair A. C. player to win his match, which he did by defeating Geoffrey Taylor, of Harvard, by a score of 15-7, 15-11, the result never being in doubt. Four of the seven matches were forced to extra games by the Winged Foot players.

Frank Seller, the Montclair A. U. veteran, took his match in straight games from F. E. Walton on the Heights Casino courts, winning at 15-8, 15-9. Seller has his racket under fine control and his shots into the corners won many of the rallies for him. Only two of the matches at the Casino went to extra games, one of these, between Robert Luchars, of Montclair, and Edward V. Vollmer, of the Casino, only going to Luchars after the score had reached 18-17, 8-15, 15-17. The two men were so evenly matched that the final result was in doubt right up to the deciding point.

Cornelius Hearn Jr. saved the Casino team from a whitewash by defeating J. Ayres, of Montclair, by a score of 15-15, 15-12, generally having the match in hand, although Ayres pressed him all the way. The new, reconstructed courts of the Heights Casino, which were used yesterday for the first time this season, were remarkably fast and true, and all the players expressed their satisfaction with the new flooring and walls and the improved lighting conditions.

Colgate Squad Practices Through Pouring Rain
HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Colgate went through a stiff practice today in preparation for her game with Rochester on Saturday. The workout was taken in a pouring rain that made football almost impossible and the backs slipped before they could get started.

The feature of the play was a touchdown by "Bus" Doody, 240-pound tackle. He picked up a fumble on his 40-yard line and had a ten yard start before any one went after him. The problem of the coach is still centered around a quarterback. Townsend was used to-day, but Morgan may be shifted to the pilot position and Mason go to fullback.
