

The Sun

MONDAY, MAY 17, 1875.

Advertising Rates.

Regular advertisement, making 100,000 readers, each year...

The Weekly Man.

Subscription rates for the weekly man, including postage and delivery.

Amusements To-Day.

Amusement listings for the day, including theaters and public events.

The regular daily circulation of THE SUN.

Table showing circulation statistics for various days of the week.

When Will the Legislature Adjourn?

Discussion of the legislative session and the possibility of adjournment.

The verdict of the people will be that the Legislature of 1875 was a failure.

Analysis of the legislative performance and public opinion.

The Old and the New.

Reflections on the contrast between old and new values and practices.

The Old and the New.

Continuation of the reflection on old and new, focusing on social and political changes.

The Old and the New.

Further reflections on the old and new, discussing the impact of modernization.

The Old and the New.

Continuation of the reflection on old and new, touching on the future.

The Old and the New.

Further reflections on the old and new, discussing the role of the individual.

The Old and the New.

Continuation of the reflection on old and new, focusing on the state of the nation.

The Old and the New.

Final reflections on the old and new, concluding the piece.

besides prostituting their places in the service of rings, and marshals who have openly defied law in their partisan zeal...

The public feeling is well disposed toward Judge PIERREPONT, but it is infinitely in demand from him a stern reformation for reasons of office, who, instead of prosecuting criminals, should be standing in the dock themselves.

The Poetry of the Trial.

It was formerly the habit of poets to invoke the muse at the outbreak of an epic, and the muse, too, puts in a frequent appearance in all sort of poetry of a century ago.

That time, however, is a long way off yet, and no one need distress himself with its anticipation. It is like the plunging of the earth into the sun, which the astronomers either out an affair so remote that there is no occasion for anybody's altering his mode of life or arranging his library with reference to its occurrence.

It has got to come, come it will, in spite of our hopes or wishes; but one thing is very certain, and comforting too, neither we nor our children, nor their grandchildren, will see the decay of the English language, much less the swallowing up of our busy little planet by the greedy sun.

The BECKER trial, however, is a thing of the present, and it naturally engages all thoughts. To the poet it is impressively suggestive of the coming of the millennium, and hence, perhaps, there yet arise the beautiful figures of poetry. The particular muse who presides over the poetry of the trial, we are at a loss to select from among the three we have named.

Now about the gods. By all means let the Judges put them on. Not the Judges of the Supreme Court alone, but the Judges of all the other courts, including those of the Sessions and the Police Courts.

As the people are rather democratic in this city, and might be inclined to ridicule any such innovation at first, it might be a matter of prudence to introduce it gradually and by degrees. Let the Chief Justice begin it, wearing the crown only a little while at first, every day, retiring to change it for his ordinary dress whenever the laughs get general and loud.

Just before he was inaugurated, President GRANT had a conversation with Col. A. K. McClure, of Philadelphia, about which there was a great deal of talk at the time, and which, we dare say, is still remembered by many intelligent people.

Vitalizing a Party.

Shortly afterward Mr. BORNE was appointed Secretary of the Navy, although he told GRANT that, from physical disability, he was utterly incompetent to perform any of the duties of that post.

It is noteworthy that the old line of tradition in the Navy is to appoint a young man to secure as his successor, in the person of Baron LOMAX, one fully able to convert the department into an unprecedented scene of illegality, fraud, and plunder.

The young editor has thought out a pretty good plan that follows. It is that of a baby show of a new sort, the prize to be given to the baby that is the most beautiful and the most perfect.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

where a Democratic majority of ten thousand in 1868 was raised to a majority of fifty thousand in 1874, now has two representatives.

Perhaps after a while GRANT will understand that Col. McClure was when he advised him to appoint in his Cabinet good men, who have talents and influence at home; and that he was as foolish as he was presumptuous when he rejected this advice.

The Cincinnati Commercial has an interesting article on JEFFERSON'S opposition to the third term, and with extracts from letters of the great Democratic President.

Two Papers in Circulation.

A day that did not witness the circulation of some huge petition could hardly be considered a complete day in the history of New York.

We cheerfully and heartily commend the first of these papers. Several arguments may be adduced in its favor. In the first place, it would be a good thing for Mr. NICOLL'S creditors.

There may be those who regret that President GRANT so obstinately refuses to decline a third term, preferring rather to complete the shipwreck of the coming Republican party.

The Boston Post reports that a great address has sprung up between Mr. WASHINGTON and a general GRANT in Washington.

Mr. JEWETT'S report upon the condition of the Erie Railroad Company is worthy of its reputation as a man of intelligence, honor, and courage.

Now, I say this, knowing full well that the Boss, brown-stained and thick-headed as he is, would not be so stupid as to do this.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

THE BOSS'S PHILANTHROPY.

A BRILLIANT BIOGRAPHY.

Stupendous schemes for the filling of his 'Netherlands' and the Empowering of his Own—How the Self-Sacrificing Lover of his Race Helped Two Poor Young Men.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—THE SUN has several times proposed to pay handsomely for some thing good of Boss Shephard's, Grant's particular friend and Senator Babcock's partner in the jobbing and real estate business.

That's the way THE SUN is still open on several occasions. Now, the Boss is a very particular man, and I am resolved to stand by him to the last, I propose, therefore, to tell you a good many good things of him, and to risk in that large amount of money, which I am very much in want of at this time.

About twenty years ago I made the Boss's acquaintance in a quiet way. He was a modest young man then, but he was always remarkable for his modesty, and just beginning life as an honest plumber and gasfitter.

The Boss said that was exactly the thing. But he must be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale, and he would have to be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale.

Well, the Boss left me and that other poor fellow, and went into the business of a business agent. That is, he got into the old Georgetown City, and put in some time there.

Now, I say this, knowing full well that the Boss, brown-stained and thick-headed as he is, would not be so stupid as to do this.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

THE BOSS'S PHILANTHROPY.

A BRILLIANT BIOGRAPHY.

Stupendous schemes for the filling of his 'Netherlands' and the Empowering of his Own—How the Self-Sacrificing Lover of his Race Helped Two Poor Young Men.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—THE SUN has several times proposed to pay handsomely for some thing good of Boss Shephard's, Grant's particular friend and Senator Babcock's partner in the jobbing and real estate business.

That's the way THE SUN is still open on several occasions. Now, the Boss is a very particular man, and I am resolved to stand by him to the last, I propose, therefore, to tell you a good many good things of him, and to risk in that large amount of money, which I am very much in want of at this time.

About twenty years ago I made the Boss's acquaintance in a quiet way. He was a modest young man then, but he was always remarkable for his modesty, and just beginning life as an honest plumber and gasfitter.

The Boss said that was exactly the thing. But he must be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale, and he would have to be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale.

Well, the Boss left me and that other poor fellow, and went into the business of a business agent. That is, he got into the old Georgetown City, and put in some time there.

Now, I say this, knowing full well that the Boss, brown-stained and thick-headed as he is, would not be so stupid as to do this.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

THE BOSS'S PHILANTHROPY.

A BRILLIANT BIOGRAPHY.

Stupendous schemes for the filling of his 'Netherlands' and the Empowering of his Own—How the Self-Sacrificing Lover of his Race Helped Two Poor Young Men.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—THE SUN has several times proposed to pay handsomely for some thing good of Boss Shephard's, Grant's particular friend and Senator Babcock's partner in the jobbing and real estate business.

That's the way THE SUN is still open on several occasions. Now, the Boss is a very particular man, and I am resolved to stand by him to the last, I propose, therefore, to tell you a good many good things of him, and to risk in that large amount of money, which I am very much in want of at this time.

About twenty years ago I made the Boss's acquaintance in a quiet way. He was a modest young man then, but he was always remarkable for his modesty, and just beginning life as an honest plumber and gasfitter.

The Boss said that was exactly the thing. But he must be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale, and he would have to be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale.

Well, the Boss left me and that other poor fellow, and went into the business of a business agent. That is, he got into the old Georgetown City, and put in some time there.

Now, I say this, knowing full well that the Boss, brown-stained and thick-headed as he is, would not be so stupid as to do this.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

THE BOSS'S PHILANTHROPY.

A BRILLIANT BIOGRAPHY.

Stupendous schemes for the filling of his 'Netherlands' and the Empowering of his Own—How the Self-Sacrificing Lover of his Race Helped Two Poor Young Men.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—THE SUN has several times proposed to pay handsomely for some thing good of Boss Shephard's, Grant's particular friend and Senator Babcock's partner in the jobbing and real estate business.

That's the way THE SUN is still open on several occasions. Now, the Boss is a very particular man, and I am resolved to stand by him to the last, I propose, therefore, to tell you a good many good things of him, and to risk in that large amount of money, which I am very much in want of at this time.

About twenty years ago I made the Boss's acquaintance in a quiet way. He was a modest young man then, but he was always remarkable for his modesty, and just beginning life as an honest plumber and gasfitter.

The Boss said that was exactly the thing. But he must be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale, and he would have to be run on a high-toned, comprehensive scale.

Well, the Boss left me and that other poor fellow, and went into the business of a business agent. That is, he got into the old Georgetown City, and put in some time there.

Now, I say this, knowing full well that the Boss, brown-stained and thick-headed as he is, would not be so stupid as to do this.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.

It is a pity that the young editor and his friends are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show, and that they are so much interested in the baby show.