

The Sun.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1883.

VOL. LI.--No. 55.

PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE HARMONY DISTURBED.

IRVING HALL AND THE COUNTY DEMOCRACY AGAINST TAMMANY.

County Democrats Object to the Nomination of Senator Grady, and Tammany Hall Declines to Nominate Its Own Candidates for the Senate--Mr. Grady's Withdrawal.

The union of the Democracy on nominations for Senators, which was almost assured on Monday, was broken yesterday. The Hon. John Kelly was told on Tuesday that the County Democrats in the Sixth Senate district were bitterly opposed to Senator Thomas F. Grady's renomination. It was also intimated to him that Comptroller Peter O. Thompson, an ex-Medical Doctor and other County Democratic leaders had used their best efforts to secure a union on the basis proposed by Tammany, but that the men in the Sixth Senate district would not hear of a union if Senator Grady's endorsement was one of the conditions. They were willing to endorse any other Tammany candidate. Mr. Kelly replied to the persons who gave him this information that he could not desert Mr. Grady and added: "I guess we shall have to have a fight along the whole line. I am sorry, but I can't see how it can be helped."

The County Democracy leaders met at 1 Union square at 11 A. M. yesterday, twenty-three Assembly districts being represented, and remained in session until 3 P. M. Mr. Kelly's ultimatum was reported, and then there was a general discussion on the situation. Commissioner Thompson, ex-Senator George C. Conkling, ex-Senator Mitchell, and others urged the necessity of united nominations for Senators. If there should be no union they said, the County Democrats would call on the Ninth, Eighth, and Tenth Senate districts, John Keenan, Charles Reilly, and P. J. Walsh, and others, to withdraw their names from nomination for union on the basis suggested by Tammany if Senator Grady was taken out of the field. But they would not endorse him in any event, and would not be induced to do so unless Mr. Grady's opponents that a union should not be prevented because of the opposition of one candidate. Mr. Grady's opponents questioned the right of the district leaders to say what the Sixth District Senate Convention should do. The delegates to that body were told that they could not be dictated to by any leaders.

The conference of length decided to express its opinion on the subject. The vote was 12 in favor of a union and 11 against. The 12 votes were from the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Twelfth districts, of two districts did not vote, and one district was unrepresented. Just after the vote had been taken, Col. Michael C. Murphy, president of the Tammany Club, and Sheriff Davidson that Senator Grady might be a candidate in the Fifth district although Tammany had conceded that distinction to Hall. The Tammany leaders, however, took the stand that town politicians against Mr. Grady, and they declared that they would not endorse him, while the County Democracy leaders then adjourned, and the politicians went to the Senate conference.

Just as this meeting adjourned about forty Tammany leaders, assembled in the big waggon. The Hon. John Kelly told them that the County Democracy and that Irving Hall had nominated Timothy J. Campbell in Mr. Grady's district.

Then one of the district leaders suggested that Senator Grady's nomination be withdrawn, and Mr. Kelly asked the leaders of the Assembly districts in that Senate district to say what Mr. Grady's supporters would do there.

Mr. Young, of the First district, thought that Mr. Grady could not carry the Fifth Senate district, and added that his candidate would be unable to win the nomination of Tammany.

He, however, took Young, who still retained the book to the station, while the club marched along at the meetings. Cap. Edwards picked up the book, and the members of the club chased him, crying and attracting the attention of crowds of citizens on the streets, who, without knowing anything about the cause of the disturbance, joined in the shoutings.

Mr. Young, on reaching Cole street, became afraid and slipped into a grocery store in the hope of finding a place where he could get a certificate of marriage, and was at once married by that officer. The fugitives were soon discovered and taken to Irving Hall's office. He was there brought face to face with Mr. Lorrain. The old man tried to meet with his wife, but she had left him.

Hurd was informed of the charge against him, and that Mr. Lorrain had not yet signed the certificate for his recognition.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for Mr. Robbins moved that the book be returned to him for further inspection and alteration.

In the heat of the debate Charles Baker, the junior of the High School, jumped from his seat, rushed up to the chairman's desk, and shouting, "I will not let you run out of the hall with me!"

A number of the students interrupted him, and that on the 2d of that month he and Aurelia were married, and that she was now in St. Louis.

When the club met last evening the committee surrendered the book to Vice-President Seward, and the new officers, Col. Campbell, who seemed to be dissatisfied with the work of revision, for