

CONFERRING THE PALLIUM.

ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN KEPT ON CARDINAL M'CLOSKEY'S THRONE.

Installed in the Archdiocese of New York with Imposing Ceremonies—The Cathedral Crowded with Priests and Laymen—Belongs to the Most Reverend Cardinal M'Closkey.

The pink beretta that in life crowned the venerable head of the late Cardinal M'Closkey hung yesterday, by a silken cord from the dome, over the high altar of St. Patrick's Cathedral. In accordance with the rite, it was suspended there at his death, to testify the vacancy of the see that he had ruled, to be laid reverently away only after the installation of his successor.

No temporal ruler ever succeeded to a falerer dominion for all quarters of the globe. New York includes not only the ecclesiastical province of New York but the dioceses of Brooklyn, Albany, Buffalo, Ogdensburg, Rochester, Newark, and Trenton, within whose boundaries are a most a million of faithful Catholics.

Never before was the cathedral so densely filled for all quarters of the globe. Catholics to witness the installation of their new ruler, Archbishop Corrigan, and his investiture with the pallium, the loftiest symbol of his authority.

Archbishop Corrigan, who wore over his traditional black vestments a gold-embroidered cloak of silver. Upon his head was a mitre of cloth of silver, and in his right hand he carried a crozier of gold.

At 10 o'clock the south transept door swung open, and a cross bearer, upholding a golden cross, entered the cathedral, and, bearing a crucifix, appeared. They preceded Archbishop Corrigan, who wore over his traditional black vestments a gold-embroidered cloak of silver.

A JUDGE SUE FOR LIBEL.

ACCUSING A MINISTER OF IMPROPER RELATIONS WITH HIS WIFE.

An Alleged Confession Brought About by a New Sides—The Clergyman Denounced as a Villain and an Imp of Darkness.

WORCESTER, March 4.—The libel suit of Rev. George Bremer against Judge Arthur A. Putnam for $10,000 damages was begun in Superior Court here yesterday. Mr. Bremer was formerly pastor of the Unitarian church in Uxbridge, and Mr. Putnam, who is Judge of the Second District Court of southern Worcester at that place, was one of his parishioners.

On the evening of Dec. 20, 1888, as Judge Putnam and his wife were sitting together in their home, a strange noise was heard outside, which it was afterward ascertained came from snow sliding off the roof. The noise frightened Mrs. Putnam into an attack of hysteria, and while in that condition she confessed to relations of a questionable sort with the minister. She then left the house, thinking that the next day Judge Putnam would bring the alleged confession and took it to Bremer, who denied that it was true, but on demand of Judge Putnam resigned and left town afterward.

At the trial, Judge Putnam testified that he had never seen the alleged confession, and that he had never seen the alleged confession, and that he had never seen the alleged confession.

MR. MORGAN'S PICTURES.

EXHIBITS Mounted at the Grand Frontier's Sale—A Mesmerist Bought $15,000.

There was a larger gathering of men and women waiting in the cold night air east of the doors for the second evening's sale of the Morgan collection than there was on the first night. The reason was that many of the finest gems on catalogue were to be offered. Half an hour before the time announced for the sale to begin the hall was filled by a laughing, talking throng of well-dressed people, waiting to see rich men struggle with each other for famous pictures. While they waited they looked at Bougereux's "Nut Gatherers," on the half-lighted easel.

Auctioneer Thomas E. Ryan began the sale by announcing that the picture offered was actually one of the Morgan collection, and that he would not receive a bid less than $25. Interest centered in the sale of J. G. Vibert's "The Cardinal's Menu," which brought the next highest price of the evening, though at a loss to the estate. Richard Halstead started the bidding at $10,000, and the bidding rose to $15,000, when Mr. Halstead bought the picture for $15,000.

GLADSTONE WINS THE DAY.

THE PREMIER MAKES A BRIGHT SPEECH AND THE TORIES WITHDRAW THEIR MOTION—PARSONS APPROVES THE GOVERNMENT'S COURSE.

LONDON, March 4.—The Parnellites have decided to array themselves against the Tories in their attempt to force the Government to show their hand. The Conservatives arranged to have Mr. Hugh Holmes, Conservative member for Dublin University, interrupt the Government's proposition to go into committee on the civil service estimates by an amendment declaring that the "House, before voting on the Irish estimates, wishes to know what policy the Government has agreed upon to restore and maintain order in Ireland."

Mr. Gladstone, speaking on Mr. Holmes's motion, declined to fall into the trap set for him. He said that he was not a simpleton as to yield to the artificial allurements of a motion which was intended to prevent the Government from considering the question of social order in Ireland, the view of the House of the Ministers of the Government of Ireland. These subjects were intricately associated. The Government was not prepared to consider the question of social order in Ireland, the view of the House of the Ministers of the Government of Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone characterized Mr. Holmes's motion as a "trap" and declared that the Government was not prepared to consider the question of social order in Ireland, the view of the House of the Ministers of the Government of Ireland.
