

"The Best Home Reading."

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

Opinions of the Press.

The MAGAZINE is an overflowing store of good literature and exquisite art—a delightful production deserving all the fame and all the material success which have been won by it. The WEEKLY is a rarely illustrated chronicle of the year's events; there is no end of pleasure and profit in its pages. The BAZAR is a repository of fashion, and a gallery of some of the finest engravings of the time. The YOUNG PEOPLE is a treasure house fascinating to every boy and girl as well as to plenty of persons older. A remarkable and valuable, an instructive and delightful line of publications, indeed.—N. Y. Sun, Feb. 14, 1891.

Whether treated, each one as an individual production or generally as a class, HARPER'S PERIODICALS represent the highest types of American literary and illustrative work. . . . Never have the publishers of the MAGAZINE, or YOUNG PEOPLE lowered that high standard which was assumed in their first numbers. Modifications and improvements have of course followed, until to-day it is difficult to conceive how they could be bettered. Looking at the literary side alone, the best-known writers at home and abroad contribute to these publications. For the proper presentation of subject, pictorially, leading artists furnish their designs to be translated by woodcut, or process, whichever method shows better the illustrative idea. A column eulogistic of these publications might be written, and would barely suffice to specify their many singular merits. It must be at least satisfactory to the publishers to know that wherever English is the language in use there a MAGAZINE, a WEEKLY, a BAZAR, or a YOUNG PEOPLE bearing the imprint of Harper & Brothers is read. There are other triumphs than "the drum beat" which circle the world.—N. Y. Times, March 8, 1891.

It is safe to say that nowhere else, at any time, has such a mass of good literature and good art been given forth in periodical form as that issued each year by this oldest of existing American publishing houses.—Chicago Tribune, Feb. 14, 1891.

The bound volumes of Harper's publications for 1890 make of themselves almost a library; and it is difficult to conceive of any class which will not find in them a source of rare pleasure and profit. . . . Harper & Brothers' periodical publications have a distinctive field of their own, and in this field they are without successful rivals. . . . They contain little or nothing of a merely ephemeral nature, but are recognized repositories of good literature.—Boston Traveller, March 7, 1891.

Each of these periodicals has been for years a standard of excellence in its particular function; has presented an objective point of success, toward which the younger ventures have turned their eyes, and in spite of the many ably edited publications for which this country is at present distinguished, they still head the list, unsurpassed for the scope and variety of subject matter and literary excellence of treatment.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Feb. 14, 1891.

The periodical publications of Harper & Brothers have been exceptionally broad and effective editions. Some of the most accomplished and many of the most eminent authors in every field of good literature, the most distinguished scientists, publicists, historians, statesmen, travellers, essayists, novelists, and poets have made the most important contributions to their pages, and some of the most famous of contemporaneous artists have illustrated them. . . . The comprehensiveness of the influence of these four publications is exceedingly great. . . . It is good literature in the broadest and most general sense that the periodical publications of Harper & Brothers contain, and this good literature is admirably and generously supplemented with good art, which pleases as well as educates. In very many American homes these periodicals are the only library, and if in that character they are not exhaustive, they are, it must be admitted, a fair substitute for a library.—Philadelphia Ledger, March 31, 1891.

Stamps, the owner of it (Ketchikan Printing House, Philadelphia). The catalogue to Mr. Stamps's own work, and admirably good. The book contains numerous photographic illustrations, beautifully produced. The binding and the general make-up are superb. It is notable among catalogues.

We have received the second, third, and fourth parts of the new "English-German and German-English Dictionary," by Dr. Felix Flogel, now published by B. Westermann & Co. It is the largest and fullest work of the kind that has yet been undertaken, and if it is completed as it has been commenced, it will be invaluable to every student of German literature. Its typography and arrangement are admirable.

"The American Race," by Prof. Daniel G. Brinton (N. D. C. Hodson), classifies the native tribes of North and South America on the basis of language, and is an ethnographic description of the same. This is the first work of Brinton's that a systematic classification of the entire American race on the basis of language has ever been attempted.

A second edition of "Fly Fishing and Fly Making," by J. Harrington Keene, is issued by the Forest and Stream Publishing Company. The volume contains specimens of the material for making flies of forty-eight varieties.

"The Elements of Dynamic Electricity and Magnetism," by Philip Atkinson, a book for learners, abundantly illustrated, is published by the D. Van Nostrand Company.
