and about Stantwich. He has never been in any sort of trouble since he was released from prison. He has been more or less friendly with Charles E. Waterbury for a year or so, but he never worked for him. He is a young man like Waterbury.

It is suspected that the Mail Wagon Robbery of Dec. 22 on a Pennsylvania Ferry-boat and that of Tuesday Night on the Hoboken Ferry were committed by the same band of organized thieves.

Seven pouches of first-class mail matter were stolen from mail wagons on the Hoboken ferryboat on Tuesday evening under circumstances which have led the Post Office authorities to suspect the existence of an organized gang of mail thieves.

The night was raw and humid, and the mail drivers dismounted from their wagons and went into the men's cabin. There is a rule of the Post Office that no mail driver shall leave his wagon unprotected, but this appears to be generally disregarded by drivers of mail wagons...

There are some packages missing here but they have not been traced. The train left and Walker hurried back to New York to report the affair. The train was not to be delayed by the robbery...
