Similar figure in Chicago for many years. This was when the late United States Senator James T. Aronson was in Chicago. He then wore a silk tie for the first and only time in his life, and his old friends and neighbors in Chicago hardly knew him. He had also been in the habit of wearing his hair long, and this was in keeping with the fashion of the day. When the late Senator Aronson died, he was a high sixties, but he had his hair cut to conform to the new elegance of his headgear. This also was the subject of widespread comment among his old friends in Chicago.

Mr. Harrison was a bustling, energetic Mayor and had thousands of friends among the Democrats of Illinois. He was the Democratic candidate for Governor several years ago, but was defeated. He has given days and nights to the success of the World's Fair in Chicago, and this fact contributed much to his popularity among all classes of citizens in that city.

COMMENT OF THE CHICAGO TIMES.

Mayor Harrison's Newspaper Pays Tribute to Its Editor.—The Chicago Times to-morrow morning will publish the following editorial on Mayor Harrison's assassination:

In the closing hours of the Columbian festival, wherein its towering success was being celebrated, a heavy blow fell upon the city in the death by the hand of an assassin, one of its noblest and most distinguished citizens. The reason for his death, for whose sake we have shed many a tear, was the fact that he was a man of high character and high ability, and his death was a great loss to the city. He was a man of high character and high ability, and his death was a great loss to the city.
