

HORACE GREELLY'S LETTERS.

ADVICE AND REFLECTIONS, CHIEFLY ON POETRY AND NEWSPAPER WORK.

"I Believe in Good, Bold Work, Nothing Else"—"Press Not Worth Writing, Except for Bread—Some of the Trials of an Editor in the Days When Steamships Arrived When They Could, and 7,000 Was a Very Goodly Number of Subscribers."

Most of the following letters were written by Horace Greeley when he had been in New York but a few years, and was struggling to combine literature and journalism in the New Yorker, a weekly, and was doing other editorial work which preceded the establishment of the Tribune.

A GOOD BUSINESS PARTNER NEEDED.

MY DEAR RANSOM: Yours of the 24th ult. was handed me this day by my friend Neale, who will tell you in what a state of indescribable disorder and haste he found me engaged in moving our large printing office on Friday and Saturday, down from a third story, across town, six rods back through an every obstructed narrow passage, up into a fourth story—our publication office—to-day, &c.

You are right in your interest in certain things, but I am not so sure that I can afford to pardon an immediate, though not incoherent reply. Let me first reply to the miscellaneous questions contained in your letter, before they are crowded off the sheet of forgotten.

You are right in your interest in certain things, but I am not so sure that I can afford to pardon an immediate, though not incoherent reply. Let me first reply to the miscellaneous questions contained in your letter, before they are crowded off the sheet of forgotten.

You inquire who is the wandering Willie of Bonnet? I presume he is a scribbler of whom you have heard a little or nothing. His name is William H. Attee, a Londoner by birth, and a police, law, and a speaker by profession, but known here as a shrewd, active, and unprincipled penny-a-liner, mainly for the small dailies.

As to the case of Robinson, there is some difference of opinion here, and I believe the majority think with me that he is unacquainted with the law, and that he is not to walk up the ladder. And yet, if money, influence, and splendid counsel (Ogden Hoffman and Hugh Maxwell) can save him he will not the gallow, and I believe that will be the result.

And now as to matters immediately concerning you and I. I can assure you that I am quite as favorably disposed as ever to the arrangement some time since suggested by you. As to the matter of the Bostonian, I have never thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

But this is not the arrangement which, as a permanent one, would suit either my wishes or those of the Bostonian. I have never had any thought of it, and I have never had any thought of it.

read, however, on the good management of the publication office. I am certain I can increase the patronage of the paper every year of its existence.

We have now, I think, very nearly or quite 7,000 subscribers to the following edition and 1,000 to the quarto. I do not expect and hardly wish to make any great addition to the list.

I estimate the subscription of the New Yorker at about $5,000, and the accounts due it $4,000. Very truly yours,

HORACE GREELLY.

R. F. RANSOM.

ANXIOUS TO SELL THE NEW YORKER.

OLD FRIENDS: I have this a shabby way of putting you off with half a letter apiece, when I owe each of you more than a whole one.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may. There is some prospect that it will begin to support itself, but the editing, which must be done for love, and if it will ever do this I am content to do my share toward editing it for nothing.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

of each of the papers I write for an amoralist or rather from love of Whiggery and of my young friends who have just engaged in the editorial line. Do you see the Vergeennes newspaper? It is edited by a hearty old friend of mine, for whom I am now writing a series of articles bearing on the election.

I am going along by hook and by crook in New York, and have hopes of seeing better times by and by. I mean to make an arrangement with Park Benjamin for assistance, for my load is getting too heavy, for Eldridge has been laid up with a sickness which kept him at the door for several days, and now, as soon as he is able, he goes to the country.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

come in as it happens, and the announcement "Great Western coming up" only calls on editors at 1 or 2 A. M. the same as surgeons would be called. It is edited by a hearty old friend of mine, for whom I am now writing a series of articles bearing on the election.

I am going along by hook and by crook in New York, and have hopes of seeing better times by and by. I mean to make an arrangement with Park Benjamin for assistance, for my load is getting too heavy, for Eldridge has been laid up with a sickness which kept him at the door for several days, and now, as soon as he is able, he goes to the country.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

My FRIEND: Your favor of Thursday reached me this morning, for which many thanks. I have little to tell, but I can only answer letters at all by replying on demand.

As to the New Yorker and such matters, I close my engagement here on Wednesday, Feb. 7, and make tracks forthwith for New York. I do not intend to back out of the New Yorker this year, though I may.

ANOTHER AMERICAN INDUSTRY.

The Establishment of Looms for Making Goblets Tapestry on the Bronx River.

On the east bank of the river Bronx, a minute's walk from the railroad station at Williamsbridge, there stands an old-fashioned house, surrounded by drooping willow trees. From the rear of the house a series of stone steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

For many years this house was unoccupied. A year ago a New Yorker rented it, filled it with queer-looking implements, the like of which had never been seen in that neighborhood before, placed five men at work under the walls, and set a great sign over the door: "No Admittance."

For a year these men worked there quietly, making no noise, and never explaining to the neighbors that they were not counterfeiters or alchemists. A few days ago, however, the secret leaked out, and its nature and its history steps, that were cut and laid there more than a century ago, run down into the stream.

HEBREW TYPES OF TUNIS.

JEWISH HOUSEHOLD LIFE IN THEIR NORTH AFRICAN CITY.

Beauty of the Women and the High Feet. The Black-Headed Jew-Headed Jewesses. Jewish Household Life in Their North African City.

London, Nov. 22.—A short stay at Tunis on the route from Cairo to Algiers will be sufficient for the traveler and yet repay him for the halt, although the ancient Moorish city has not retained its most striking Mussulman characteristics, and is fast becoming European under the new régime of the northern half of the Jewish empire, and it is difficult to credit the statistical statement that the Jewish element is really only in the proportion of one to five of the population.

But this unit is the only active, energetic, business-giving, and generally portion of the Jewish community, and so completely pervades it that it creates the impression of being the majority.

From the low, narrow, and squarish parts of Tunis, where the Jews were formerly only found, they have migrated into the quarters occupied by the poorer classes, and some of them occupy the finest houses and buildings. Many have retained their national costumes, and abide by the customs of their forefathers, while differing essentially from the rest of the population.

In order to receive a just idea of the life of a Jewish household it is necessary to have admittance to the interior of the family, and to enter their homes whether they belong to the poorer or the richer classes. In the former the plan and distribution of the apartments is nearly invariably the same.

The houses consist of some five or six narrow rooms, opening into an inner court or patio. The walls are freshly whitewashed every autumn; sometimes a frame of colored tiles surrounds a doorway, or a curtain of bright blue cotton stuff hangs before it, upon which brilliant patches of color are scattered, generally representing religious emblems, such as the seven-flamed candlestick. These ornaments relieve the dead monotony of the blank surface.

The patio is paved in cracked marble slabs taken from some ruined palace, which itself had been erected from the ruins of Carthage. In one angle of the court stands the fountain, at which the women are constantly filling their household vessels, unconsciously reproducing the harmonious and picturesque attitudes of Rachel at the well on the Biblical narrative. At all times the courtyard is covered with a linen tent, by which shade and coolness is obtained.

Very different is the outward aspect of the abodes of the wealthy and prosperous Israelites. Their houses are not infrequently built in the Italian style, and are furnished with marble staircases, walls disappearing under tall mirrors, unpleasantly recalling the garish splendor of a Parisian café, and the inevitable patio is surrounded by a colonnade of delicate and artistic marble pillars. But even amid these modern surroundings the Jewish luxury the owners perpetuate their antique customs and preserve intact the traditions of their race, both as regards the observance of their religion and certain family details to which they attach all the importance of habit.

Thus, when a young man is called to call in a drawing room, which might be a London or Paris, one is suddenly amazed at seeing the hostess summon a child, who, at a given sign, lights a candle and fixes it on the wall, thus indicating the room in which the method of dropping a little of the wax as a socket for the taper that has never known a candlestick or candleholder.

The wealthy Jewish matrons take no excess of jewelry, and are content with a few pearls, necklaces, and rings, and a Turkish head-dress. They become enormously stout and fat, and are generally very old-fashioned in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five in Tunis, and the most famous is the one in the city, which is open on Fridays, when a bath is obligatory.

The extraordinary cleanliness of the Jews more than justifies the attempt to describe them in the eyes of the admirers of female physical advantages, and are prized far above the delicate and picturesque Arab women, who are girls of their race. This is so generally accepted a taste that Jewish matrons are kept on a diet most conducive to corpulence, and the requisite embonpoint is secured.

All the members of the baths fill an important place. The Jews of Tunis make no large and frequent use of them; the Arab and the Italian, however, do so. A Turkish bathing establishment in Tunis in 1884, when all the Moorish public baths were closed, and the Turkish baths opened all day and every day, there are four or five