

WOULD SPEND OUR MONEY.

THE FLEA OF THE RAPID TRANSIT RAILROAD COMMISSION.

Because Nobody Else Could Be Induced to Sell the Bonds They Have Adopted, the City Should Pledge Its Credit and Raise the Money—A Vote to Determine Whether This Shall Be Done or Not.

The Board of Rapid Transit, which has been some time preparing a statement regarding its plans for favoring municipal construction of the proposed roads, sent out this communication yesterday:

The Rapid Transit law requires the Commission to adopt routes and plans for a rapid transit road, and to submit the same to the city authorities and property owners before they are adopted. It further requires that the Commission shall submit to the people of the city at the next general election the question whether a rapid transit road shall be constructed for the city at the public expense. In order to comply with the requirements of the law, the Commission has this day submitted to the voters at the election to be held on Nov. 6, 1894, the Commission was compelled to take the routes and plans for an underground road which had already been adopted by the former Rapid Transit Commission and for which all consents required by the law had already been obtained. Broadly stated, this road extends from the Battery, through Broadway to the Boulevard, along the Boulevard, and thence to the northern limits of the city. A branch also extends from Union square up Fourth avenue to Forty-third street.

Two ballots will be placed in the hands of each voter, one of which will read: "For municipal construction of rapid transit road," and the other will read, "Against municipal construction of rapid transit road." It is the theory of the law that a rapid transit road and plans for its construction shall be differently planned and even differently located from a road which may be built by private capital.

If, therefore, the vote for municipal construction shall prevail, the Rapid Transit Commission is authorized to make such changes in the route and plans for its construction as it may deem fit, and to adopt other routes, plans, or extensions of the road. If the vote shall be a favorable one, it is the theory of the law that the Commission shall be authorized to make such modifications as may be necessary for an extension of the route on the east side which shall adequately meet the requirements of the law, and to provide for the city for further rapid transit facilities. When the routes shall have been finally adopted, the Commission shall be authorized to make such changes in the route and plans for its construction as it may deem fit, and to adopt other routes, plans, or extensions of the road.

The law requires that the Commission shall make a contract with some person or persons to construct and operate the road. The contract shall be awarded to the lowest bidder, and the Commission shall be authorized to make such changes in the route and plans for its construction as it may deem fit, and to adopt other routes, plans, or extensions of the road.

DUTCH AND FLEMISH PAINTINGS.

Exhibited at the Fine Art Society Galleries of the Ethical Society.

There has been on view at the School of Fine Arts of Yale College for some time a collection of Dutch and Flemish paintings. The Dutch and Flemish schools of painting, Mr. Louis R. Ehrlich, a graduate of Yale, travelling in Europe for his health, spent some six or eight years in hunting around in out-of-the-way places in Italy and Germany for these works of the early Dutch and Flemish painters. For the collection of which he had cultivated an enthusiasm, returning to this country, he sought in vain for a place in the Metropolitan Museum to exhibit the results of his work, when Prof. Weir, at the head of the Department of Fine Arts at Yale, saw the collection and at once arranged for its display in New Haven. Many persons with an enthusiasm for the art of the Low Countries viewed the paintings there, and as a result of these visits arrangements were made to bring the collection to this city, and yesterday there was a private view at the galleries of the Fine Arts Society in West Fifty-seventh street, where the Dutch and Flemish paintings are to be shown in connection with the group exhibition of American paintings which has been open there all summer.

The collection is one of the very greatest in interest to the art student and the connoisseur, and will be likely to prove an agreeable surprise to all persons who know the period represented by the paintings in the Metropolitan Museum. In choosing pictures for his collection Mr. Ehrlich has not sought alone for the names of the best-known masters of the time, but has been guided by a broad-minded love of the art of the period. Many of the works are from the hands of obscure but gifted men of the period, and others are minor works of greater men.

Among the paintings of especial note are two works by Rubens, one a beautiful small canvas showing a scene of rustic merry-making, full of life and vigor, and the other a larger picture attributed to Frans Hals, one of a child half length, and the other of a young man drinking. Cornelis is represented by a portrait of a young woman. Others represented are Gerard Dou, David Teniers, the elder, in a tavern scene, and the younger Teniers in a landscape by Isaac Van Ostade, a cattle piece by Potter, three pictures by Jan Van Goyen, marines by Van der Capelle, and paintings by Jan Fyt, Van Beyeren, Kaif, Hobbema, Van der Neer, Ruysdael, Cuyper, Denner, Funck, Van Eckhout, De Vos, Gerard, Herp, Uytendaele, Neter, and others. The collection is a most valuable one, and the names of the artists and the subjects of the pictures are of great interest to the art student and the connoisseur.
