

MAINE GIVES 48,000.

Her Motto Is "Dirigo," and She Shows the Way.

REED'S GREAT TRIUMPH.

Record of '92 Beaten by 9,000; '94, by 36,000.

The Greatest Vote Ever Cast in the State and the Greatest Plurality—The Entire State Rejoicing in Victory—Mr. Reed Makes a Speech to His Neighbors and Says the Star of Sewall Is Shining and that of Watson Rising, but that Neither Is of the First Magnitude—Incidents of the Vote and the Reception of the News—Manley Declares Powers's Plurality Will Be 50,000.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14.—If the Hon. William Jennings Bryan had his ear to the ground to-night he must have heard something good. The Hon. Arthur Sewall was near enough to see as well as hear. At midnight the returns of the State election indicated a Republican plurality of nearly 50,000 for Powers, Rep., for Governor.

The good old State of Maine, in a fit of temporary insanity, once allowed herself to go off on a tangent of greenbackism. It was said that because she had departed from the pathway of honest dollars she would do so again. The good people blamed the insinuation to-day and tumbled the banner of 53-cent dollars in the dust. There was almost a total eclipse of Bryan and Sewallism and silverism in the Dirigo State to-day, and some of the Popocratic brethren who helped place Mr. Sewall on the ticket at Chicago will be asking themselves why they did it, and they will come to realize the truth of the repeated assertion that the men of Populistic tendencies were simply "fooled" when the wealthy shipbuilding, bondholding bank President was put on the national ticket as a sop to the more decent elements of the party and as a bait to catch votes in the State of Maine.

It will be remembered how it was urged at Chicago that Maine, once for greenbackism, was "even now honeycombed with free-silver sentiment," and needed only a little stirring up of the smouldering embers of a flat currency to send the party and the State into a flame which would burst forth once more. Once started, they would drive the gold people like chaff before the wind. They did not stop to think that a large proportion of the men who made the greenback crusade had been gathered to their fathers, and that the new generation of Maine had no sort of use for any such folly.

When the Chicago delegates came home and set the man whom they had put off the National Committee as one of their standard bearers they proceeded to rule things with a high hand. In the first place they proposed to elect a low bidder for the candidate of the Democracy had had for years for Governor. They made it so uncomfortable for him because he would not subscribe to the anarchistic doctrines of the Popocratic Convention, that he was forced to resign. They said the Maine Democracy was for silver and for the candidate of the Popocracy, and they got Edward B. Winslow resigned and Melvin P. Frank was set up as a candidate for Governor.

It will be remembered that the Winslow and gold men said little, but looked forward to Sept. 14. Edward B. Winslow must smile as he gazes at the parade of the Popocracy, who he had hurried apparently beneath a pile of 48,000 plurality.

The real Democracy spoke to-day, and they did not waste their ammunition either by voting for a Democratic third ticket. They struck from the shoulder.

At St. Louis Capt. John D. Prindle led the crowd of Maine "rooters" who tried vainly to convince the assembled delegates that the Reed men had not lost heart.

This evening Capt. Prindle marshaled another procession, that of the members of the Lincoln Club and Republicans in general, and led the march to the residence of Thomas B. Reed on Deering street. Rockets were sent up all along the way, and the streets were simply packed.

From the time they started from the rooms of the Lincoln Club until the great audience gathered in front of Reed's house, there was a continuous cheer.

Mr. Reed received the news of the great landslide at the rooms of the Cumberland Club, where his friends gathered to congratulate him. About ten minutes before the parade started he left the club, and in company with Mr. Crawford of Texas, one of the faithful Reed men at St. Louis, drove to his residence.

There was a hush for an instant and then a mighty cheer. Nobody seemed to give the slightest joy of the hour and did it by cheering. It rose, died away, and rose again. At last there was a break in the tempest, and President George Libby of the Lincoln Club, himself the successful candidate for County Attorney, climbed over the massive stone separating the steps from his next door neighbors, and then the noise outside. There was a slight pause. The noise outside. The noise outside. The noise outside.

HOPE OF RESCUE WAS GONE

SEVEN LIVES LOST, THREE BY SUICIDE IN A WRACK.

The Italian Bark Monte Tabor Drives on Peaked Hill Bar, Near Highland Light—The Captain and Two Others Kill Themselves—Four Drowned—Hint of Morder.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Sept. 14.—The Italian bark Monte Tabor, salt laden, from Trapani, Italy, for Boston, was driven on Peaked Hill, near Highland Light, on Tuesday morning, and was totally wrecked, seven lives being lost. Three of those on board committed suicide when the vessel grounded.

At 10 o'clock last night the Taor passed Highland Light under upper and lower main topsails, upper and lower fore topsails, fore course and jib, showing that it was not stressed of weather that drove the craft ashore. The Captain saw Highland Light, but according to the survivors he lost his bearings later.

The craft stood northward on the starboard tack in a heavy wind and sea, but sometime after passing Highland Light saw a red light flash for the first time in the morning, and was totally wrecked, seven lives being lost. Three of those on board committed suicide when the vessel grounded.

The men on the vessel for protection. Col. Fielding, who is said to have been a member, kind, and brave, went among his men, kissed each one, and said, "Salute!" Then, holding to the rails and rigging, he made his way aft into the cabin. The forward hands were on the fore end of the ship, which was continually deluged with water and gave signs of being about to founder.

The Hon. M. P. Frank, the Popocratic Democratic candidate for Governor, is the following view of the result of the election: "The Democratic party of Maine had adopted a platform which proved to be in direct opposition to the Chicago platform on the currency issue and nominated a candidate for Governor upon that platform. After the National Convention the party were obliged to change their position and put in nomination another candidate.

"The Republican party, having a thorough organization, had meanwhile taken advantage of the situation and committed substantially all the votes of the party to the currency question before the Democrats were reorganized on new lines.

"The change and the disorganized condition of the party enabled the Republicans to win the election. The Democrats were without funds to pay the expenses of the campaign, to make the gains they have lost.

"Considering the condition of the parties, the short time and limited means that the Democrats had, they did not do so badly. It is reasonable to expect that they have fought a gallant fight against adverse odds. The result of the election, however, is the result of the facts of the campaign, and has little effect on the national vote.

The same towns in 1894 gave Powers 2,000; in 1895, 3,000; in 1896, 48,000. The same towns in 1894 gave Powers 2,000; in 1895, 3,000; in 1896, 48,000. The same towns in 1894 gave Powers 2,000; in 1895, 3,000; in 1896, 48,000.

In 1894 the Republican landslide brought a Republican plurality of 39,000; that of 1895 of 11,000; and that of 1896 of 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000.

Reed's plurality two years ago was 8,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000.

Reed's plurality two years ago was 8,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000.

Reed's plurality two years ago was 8,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000.

Reed's plurality two years ago was 8,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000. This year's plurality was 48,000.

"CANCEL, IF BRYAN WINS."

Orders for Holiday Goods Now Have Political Conditions Attached.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 13.—Manufacturers and business houses, who supply goods for the holiday trade receive their orders of raw with political conditions attached. Large orders have been received at many of the factories in the State, but, as they are qualified orders, the manufacturers are not deriving much satisfaction from their receipt. The letters accompanying the orders have the following or similar postscripts:

"This order is understood to be cancelled in the event of Bryan's election."
"We shall not want these goods unless McKinley is elected."
"Ship the enclosed order if the election goes against Bryan."

A large Western patent medicine house, accustomed to place extensive contracts for advertisements with the newspapers of the State, in renewing contracts now provides that it may cancel them in case Bryan is elected.

Business men say that such methods of doing business shows what is feared in the commercial world, and give evidence of a widespread belief that the unparalleled disaster awaits the business interests of the country if Bryan is elected.

BALLINGTON BOOTH ORDAINED.
He Becomes a Presbyter of the Evangelical Church.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Ballington Booth, commander of the American Volunteers, was today ordained a Presbyter of the Evangelical Church, among the members of the First Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregational, and Reformed Episcopal Churches. The officiating minister was Bishop Fallows, St. Paul's Church, where the ceremony was performed.

All the staff officers under Commander Booth will also be ordained members of a Protestant Church, among them Col. Fielding, Col. Woolley of Buffalo, and Major Blackburn of San Francisco.

The fact that the leader of the new Salvation Army was to be ordained was kept a secret until to-day, and the announcement was a surprise to his friends and the Volunteers. Commander Booth addressed the Protestant ministers of Chicago at the First Methodist Church in the morning, explaining that it was the aim of the Volunteers to become an auxiliary of the Church, reaching those whom the Church did not. The ministers were won over to his support by the fervent appeal for recognition and aid.

At a meeting of the Volunteers and their friends to-night in the People's Institute Theatre, Commander Booth announced that Col. Fielding had been promoted to be brigade-general in command of the Northwestern forces.

TWO ALABAMA OUTLAWS KILLED.
Shot Down in the Woods Before They Could Get to Their Weapons.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 14.—Hart Thrasher, the noted hold-up man and jail breaker, who, a month ago, killed Deputy Sheriff Bass at Biocion, was shot and killed this evening near Horse Creek in Walker county, by ex-Deputy Sheriff C. H. Cole of Birmingham, Ala., with Bass, was one of several men whom Thrasher had vowed to kill in revenge for the death of his brother, a younger brother, Panther, another desperado, and that of Thrasher's wife, who he had shot and killed at the same time by Deputy Sheriff Hall, who was with Cole.

Thrasher and Bass had been running recently an illicit distillery and making counterfeit money in Walker county. They made frequent trips to Huntsville, where they sold their products. This evening, about 9 o'clock, the officers accosted them in the woods, and while the desperados tried to get their weapons, Cole and Hall fired. Two loads of buckshot were fired into Thrasher's body, while the latter was with a repeating rifle. The two men were shot and killed in a few moments, their bodies hanging over their heads. The bodies of the desperados will be brought here to-morrow.

MOB LAW IS INCITED.
Indiana Preachers Adopt a Resolution on the "Political Unrest."

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 14.—After a sharp debate at the Northwest Indiana Methodist Conference adopted by a small majority a resolution in which it was said that the political unrest in the country is a threat of a storm; that the churches should be held to the duty of endeavoring to bring about a better social order, and that it is proposed to overthrow organized law. This condition, it is declared, demands the prayerful attention of the people.

Mr. Colvin, who offered the resolution, defended it on the ground that it is in line with the advice given by Bishop Bowman.

THE Czar and the Queen Were to Be Blown Up.

A Great Conspiracy Nipped When Nearing the Point of Execution—Kearney and Mains Caught in Holland Soon After the Arrest of Tynan and Bell—Nihilists Here Loaded Tynan With Money on Condition that They Strike a Blow at Russia as Well as at England—Instructed by a Russian Professor—Their Imprisonment Correspondence Seized—Balmoral Castle Was to Be Attacked—They Little Knew that Detectives Were Watching Them—Great Excitement in England.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The greatest dynamite plot ever known has been defeated by the arrest of four of the principal conspirators. This startling but vague statement, made to me by a high authority of Scotland Yard, is the only official explanation yet forthcoming of the simultaneous arrest of Tynan, Kearney, alias Wallace, Mains, and Bell yesterday. Until four days ago that was all the English detectives themselves really knew of the conspiracy, although they have been using every resource in their power for four months to penetrate the mystery. The story of how the secret finally came into their possession is an amazing narrative, which I do not set fully credit, although it comes to me from a source entitled to respect.

It should be explained, first, that information came to the British authorities in May last from agents in New York and Chicago to the effect that the physical party of Irish sympathizers were preparing to create a series of terror in London with the object of bringing the Irish question again to the front in public attention and active politics. There have been many agents of the English police in the coteries of dynamitars and other violent members of the Fenian brotherhood and Clan-na-Gael in America. Rumors of the intended activity of this party became public, but they gained little credence in this country, where the simple sanity of such methods is now universally recognized.

The information received by Scotland Yard, however, became definite and positive, and elaborate preparations were made by Inspector Melville as long ago as June to deal with any emergency. A certain Irish-American leader of the Fenian brotherhood appeared in London early in July, and was frequently in consultation with two or three suspects in former dynamite conspiracies, including a notorious member of Parliament.

A paragraph expressing suspicion regarding the motives of the visitor was sent to the printer, and he quickly returned to New York. He had been under close surveillance while here. The efforts of the Scotland Yard agents in America late in July secured the following information:

Conspirators, whose names were given, were contacted at a meeting in New York and Paris under Tynan's direction. Funds were supplied to the men sufficient for any emergency. They were to use dynamite, but when, where, against whom or what the detectives were unable to ascertain. The movements of the plotters were, however, faithfully followed, and the English police were kept advised of each step as it was taken. The conspirators were exceedingly active in making their preparations after their arrival, but the detectives were utterly unable to get a clue of their real plans. There was no justification for arrest at that stage, but it speedily became a matter of great importance to know definitely what point was aimed at. It was the belief of the Scotland Yard force engaged on the case three weeks ago that London was to be the scene of operations and that several public buildings, including the Houses of Parliament, were to be simultaneously blown up. Later they became convinced that an attack was to be made on the royal family at Balmoral during the visit of the Czar and the Queen.

Not many days ago Kearney and Mains went to Antwerp and began to manufacture infernal machines. At that time Bell was acting in the capacity of Tynan's secretary in Paris. One of the English police officers, who was in London, was going to assume the role of a special messenger from the Queen, and proposed to go to Copenhagen in that capacity. It is said he undertook to have made at a Paris jeweller's a silver keychain, which is the badge of the Queen's messengers. This made it appear that the Czar and the Queen were to be met at Copenhagen when the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

When Bell went to Glasgow the other day suspicion turned again to Balmoral Castle as the proposed scene of operations, and it was thought that perhaps Tynan's disguise as a Queen's messenger was designed to secure admission there when all the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

Additional police information from New York, three weeks ago, suggested that the plotters were acting in cooperation with Nihilist agents in that city, and that the first victim proceeded against would be the Czar at some point of his travels during the next few weeks.

I come now to the extraordinary device resorted to by the British authorities to gain possession of the secrets of the conspirators. The English newspapers have been filled for the past fortnight with discussions and surmises regarding the real reasons for the release of four Irish political prisoners. The Home Secretary has insisted that the condition of their health was the only motive for his action, and that it was purely an act of mercy under the regular rules of his department. The newspapers and prominent members of the Tory party have refused to accept this explanation. I have made no reference to the subject in my despatches to THE SUN because the nature of the information might be, and would have regarded the suggestion as preposterous had it not come from a well-informed quarter. Now, in the light of yesterday's events, it seems well-nigh impossible that the release of the Irish prisoners and these revelations can be merely another example of the long reach of the arm of coincidence.

The situation at the date of the release of Gallagher, Daly, and Whitehead was this: The Government knew that a gigantic plot for the use of dynamite in this country had been hatched in New York. It knew the names of the chief conspirators who had already set out on their foul mission. It did not know the names of the intended victims or the actual object of the conspiracy. The detectives were baffled and anxious. It was already suspected that the Russian Emperor was one of the victims aimed at. A hint to that effect had been received from the Russian Embassy in London. It would be a political factor of tremendous importance in the present great crisis in European affairs if England could be instrumental in defeating an attempt upon the life of the Czar. It was an extraordinary situation calling for extraordinary measures, and they were adopted. Nor is it fair to condemn any man suffering penal servitude for life for yielding to the temptation of proffered liberty on condition that he assist in thwarting a vile conspiracy for murder and outrage.

I shall not point out the member of the released quartet who is suspected of betraying Tynan. I will only say that four days ago most of the details of the plot came into the possession of the Scotland Yard authorities, and plans were swiftly made and executed for defeating the great conspiracy.

I received late this evening, from a high police official, some further particulars of the plot as it was actually carried out. It is no mere fancy campaign of violence that has been planned. It was a great Anarchist conspiracy against European institutions. The chief instigator, so the Scotland Yard authorities declare, was a man whom they describe as a Russian professor in New York. He, as the representative of the Nihilists, endeavored to obtain the cooperation of Tynan and other Clan-na-Gael and Anarchists in the execution of their designs against the Czar. This Russian offered to supply unlimited funds and all necessary information in the use of explosives for both purposes if Tynan would undertake to recruit in London, and carry out, in England, the Fenian aims in England. Tynan and three others finally assumed the mission to inaugurate a general reign of terror in Europe. Their terrific plans, so the police assert, included the blowing up of Balmoral Castle while the Queen, Czar, Prince of Wales, and other members of the royal family were present, and a series of attacks on the Continent. Their plans were well advanced when the police stepped in utterly without warning yesterday and bagged the entire gang, with all their apparatus of death. Bombs and other equipment sufficient to destroy a largely were found in the hands of the conspirators.

They made the same mistake that Jameson made at Kruger's camp and carried with them the key to their cipher correspondence, which was found in large quantities. The details of this documentary evidence are not disclosed, but it is affirmed by the Rotterdam police that full particulars of the conspiracy were obtained by the authorities of this city. Inspector Melville recently went to Paris, where, it is supposed, he conferred with the police as to the best means of circumventing the plans of the conspirators. At that time the English papers were not aware of the existence of the plot, and their comments on the Inspector's journey to Paris they said, while pointing out the existence in London of a large Anarchist colony, that the Czar would, without doubt, be far safer in England without any positive protection than he would be in Paris with all the safeguards that might be adopted by the police of that city. The result of the inquiries obtained by the police does not appear to bear out the claims made by the newspapers.

It is said that the conspirators, before they left the United States, were taught how to mix chemicals to form high explosives and the use of clock work to cause explosions. Their teacher was a Russian, one of the members of the Nihilist and Fenian were brought together, and it was due to his efforts that the alliance between them was entered into.

THE Czar and the Queen Were to Be Blown Up.

A Great Conspiracy Nipped When Nearing the Point of Execution—Kearney and Mains Caught in Holland Soon After the Arrest of Tynan and Bell—Nihilists Here Loaded Tynan With Money on Condition that They Strike a Blow at Russia as Well as at England—Instructed by a Russian Professor—Their Imprisonment Correspondence Seized—Balmoral Castle Was to Be Attacked—They Little Knew that Detectives Were Watching Them—Great Excitement in England.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The greatest dynamite plot ever known has been defeated by the arrest of four of the principal conspirators. This startling but vague statement, made to me by a high authority of Scotland Yard, is the only official explanation yet forthcoming of the simultaneous arrest of Tynan, Kearney, alias Wallace, Mains, and Bell yesterday. Until four days ago that was all the English detectives themselves really knew of the conspiracy, although they have been using every resource in their power for four months to penetrate the mystery. The story of how the secret finally came into their possession is an amazing narrative, which I do not set fully credit, although it comes to me from a source entitled to respect.

It should be explained, first, that information came to the British authorities in May last from agents in New York and Chicago to the effect that the physical party of Irish sympathizers were preparing to create a series of terror in London with the object of bringing the Irish question again to the front in public attention and active politics. There have been many agents of the English police in the coteries of dynamitars and other violent members of the Fenian brotherhood and Clan-na-Gael in America. Rumors of the intended activity of this party became public, but they gained little credence in this country, where the simple sanity of such methods is now universally recognized.

The information received by Scotland Yard, however, became definite and positive, and elaborate preparations were made by Inspector Melville as long ago as June to deal with any emergency. A certain Irish-American leader of the Fenian brotherhood appeared in London early in July, and was frequently in consultation with two or three suspects in former dynamite conspiracies, including a notorious member of Parliament.

A paragraph expressing suspicion regarding the motives of the visitor was sent to the printer, and he quickly returned to New York. He had been under close surveillance while here. The efforts of the Scotland Yard agents in America late in July secured the following information:

Conspirators, whose names were given, were contacted at a meeting in New York and Paris under Tynan's direction. Funds were supplied to the men sufficient for any emergency. They were to use dynamite, but when, where, against whom or what the detectives were unable to ascertain. The movements of the plotters were, however, faithfully followed, and the English police were kept advised of each step as it was taken. The conspirators were exceedingly active in making their preparations after their arrival, but the detectives were utterly unable to get a clue of their real plans. There was no justification for arrest at that stage, but it speedily became a matter of great importance to know definitely what point was aimed at. It was the belief of the Scotland Yard force engaged on the case three weeks ago that London was to be the scene of operations and that several public buildings, including the Houses of Parliament, were to be simultaneously blown up. Later they became convinced that an attack was to be made on the royal family at Balmoral during the visit of the Czar and the Queen.

Not many days ago Kearney and Mains went to Antwerp and began to manufacture infernal machines. At that time Bell was acting in the capacity of Tynan's secretary in Paris. One of the English police officers, who was in London, was going to assume the role of a special messenger from the Queen, and proposed to go to Copenhagen in that capacity. It is said he undertook to have made at a Paris jeweller's a silver keychain, which is the badge of the Queen's messengers. This made it appear that the Czar and the Queen were to be met at Copenhagen when the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

When Bell went to Glasgow the other day suspicion turned again to Balmoral Castle as the proposed scene of operations, and it was thought that perhaps Tynan's disguise as a Queen's messenger was designed to secure admission there when all the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

Additional police information from New York, three weeks ago, suggested that the plotters were acting in cooperation with Nihilist agents in that city, and that the first victim proceeded against would be the Czar at some point of his travels during the next few weeks.

I come now to the extraordinary device resorted to by the British authorities to gain possession of the secrets of the conspirators. The English newspapers have been filled for the past fortnight with discussions and surmises regarding the real reasons for the release of four Irish political prisoners. The Home Secretary has insisted that the condition of their health was the only motive for his action, and that it was purely an act of mercy under the regular rules of his department. The newspapers and prominent members of the Tory party have refused to accept this explanation. I have made no reference to the subject in my despatches to THE SUN because the nature of the information might be, and would have regarded the suggestion as preposterous had it not come from a well-informed quarter. Now, in the light of yesterday's events, it seems well-nigh impossible that the release of the Irish prisoners and these revelations can be merely another example of the long reach of the arm of coincidence.

The situation at the date of the release of Gallagher, Daly, and Whitehead was this: The Government knew that a gigantic plot for the use of dynamite in this country had been hatched in New York. It knew the names of the chief conspirators who had already set out on their foul mission. It did not know the names of the intended victims or the actual object of the conspiracy. The detectives were baffled and anxious. It was already suspected that the Russian Emperor was one of the victims aimed at. A hint to that effect had been received from the Russian Embassy in London. It would be a political factor of tremendous importance in the present great crisis in European affairs if England could be instrumental in defeating an attempt upon the life of the Czar. It was an extraordinary situation calling for extraordinary measures, and they were adopted. Nor is it fair to condemn any man suffering penal servitude for life for yielding to the temptation of proffered liberty on condition that he assist in thwarting a vile conspiracy for murder and outrage.

I shall not point out the member of the released quartet who is suspected of betraying Tynan. I will only say that four days ago most of the details of the plot came into the possession of the Scotland Yard authorities, and plans were swiftly made and executed for defeating the great conspiracy.

I received late this evening, from a high police official, some further particulars of the plot as it was actually carried out. It is no mere fancy campaign of violence that has been planned. It was a great Anarchist conspiracy against European institutions. The chief instigator, so the Scotland Yard authorities declare, was a man whom they describe as a Russian professor in New York. He, as the representative of the Nihilists, endeavored to obtain the cooperation of Tynan and other Clan-na-Gael and Anarchists in the execution of their designs against the Czar. This Russian offered to supply unlimited funds and all necessary information in the use of explosives for both purposes if Tynan would undertake to recruit in London, and carry out, in England, the Fenian aims in England. Tynan and three others finally assumed the mission to inaugurate a general reign of terror in Europe. Their terrific plans, so the police assert, included the blowing up of Balmoral Castle while the Queen, Czar, Prince of Wales, and other members of the royal family were present, and a series of attacks on the Continent. Their plans were well advanced when the police stepped in utterly without warning yesterday and bagged the entire gang, with all their apparatus of death. Bombs and other equipment sufficient to destroy a largely were found in the hands of the conspirators.

They made the same mistake that Jameson made at Kruger's camp and carried with them the key to their cipher correspondence, which was found in large quantities. The details of this documentary evidence are not disclosed, but it is affirmed by the Rotterdam police that full particulars of the conspiracy were obtained by the authorities of this city. Inspector Melville recently went to Paris, where, it is supposed, he conferred with the police as to the best means of circumventing the plans of the conspirators. At that time the English papers were not aware of the existence of the plot, and their comments on the Inspector's journey to Paris they said, while pointing out the existence in London of a large Anarchist colony, that the Czar would, without doubt, be far safer in England without any positive protection than he would be in Paris with all the safeguards that might be adopted by the police of that city. The result of the inquiries obtained by the police does not appear to bear out the claims made by the newspapers.

It is said that the conspirators, before they left the United States, were taught how to mix chemicals to form high explosives and the use of clock work to cause explosions. Their teacher was a Russian, one of the members of the Nihilist and Fenian were brought together, and it was due to his efforts that the alliance between them was entered into.

THE Czar and the Queen Were to Be Blown Up.

A Great Conspiracy Nipped When Nearing the Point of Execution—Kearney and Mains Caught in Holland Soon After the Arrest of Tynan and Bell—Nihilists Here Loaded Tynan With Money on Condition that They Strike a Blow at Russia as Well as at England—Instructed by a Russian Professor—Their Imprisonment Correspondence Seized—Balmoral Castle Was to Be Attacked—They Little Knew that Detectives Were Watching Them—Great Excitement in England.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The greatest dynamite plot ever known has been defeated by the arrest of four of the principal conspirators. This startling but vague statement, made to me by a high authority of Scotland Yard, is the only official explanation yet forthcoming of the simultaneous arrest of Tynan, Kearney, alias Wallace, Mains, and Bell yesterday. Until four days ago that was all the English detectives themselves really knew of the conspiracy, although they have been using every resource in their power for four months to penetrate the mystery. The story of how the secret finally came into their possession is an amazing narrative, which I do not set fully credit, although it comes to me from a source entitled to respect.

It should be explained, first, that information came to the British authorities in May last from agents in New York and Chicago to the effect that the physical party of Irish sympathizers were preparing to create a series of terror in London with the object of bringing the Irish question again to the front in public attention and active politics. There have been many agents of the English police in the coteries of dynamitars and other violent members of the Fenian brotherhood and Clan-na-Gael in America. Rumors of the intended activity of this party became public, but they gained little credence in this country, where the simple sanity of such methods is now universally recognized.

The information received by Scotland Yard, however, became definite and positive, and elaborate preparations were made by Inspector Melville as long ago as June to deal with any emergency. A certain Irish-American leader of the Fenian brotherhood appeared in London early in July, and was frequently in consultation with two or three suspects in former dynamite conspiracies, including a notorious member of Parliament.

A paragraph expressing suspicion regarding the motives of the visitor was sent to the printer, and he quickly returned to New York. He had been under close surveillance while here. The efforts of the Scotland Yard agents in America late in July secured the following information:

Conspirators, whose names were given, were contacted at a meeting in New York and Paris under Tynan's direction. Funds were supplied to the men sufficient for any emergency. They were to use dynamite, but when, where, against whom or what the detectives were unable to ascertain. The movements of the plotters were, however, faithfully followed, and the English police were kept advised of each step as it was taken. The conspirators were exceedingly active in making their preparations after their arrival, but the detectives were utterly unable to get a clue of their real plans. There was no justification for arrest at that stage, but it speedily became a matter of great importance to know definitely what point was aimed at. It was the belief of the Scotland Yard force engaged on the case three weeks ago that London was to be the scene of operations and that several public buildings, including the Houses of Parliament, were to be simultaneously blown up. Later they became convinced that an attack was to be made on the royal family at Balmoral during the visit of the Czar and the Queen.

Not many days ago Kearney and Mains went to Antwerp and began to manufacture infernal machines. At that time Bell was acting in the capacity of Tynan's secretary in Paris. One of the English police officers, who was in London, was going to assume the role of a special messenger from the Queen, and proposed to go to Copenhagen in that capacity. It is said he undertook to have made at a Paris jeweller's a silver keychain, which is the badge of the Queen's messengers. This made it appear that the Czar and the Queen were to be met at Copenhagen when the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

When Bell went to Glasgow the other day suspicion turned again to Balmoral Castle as the proposed scene of operations, and it was thought that perhaps Tynan's disguise as a Queen's messenger was designed to secure admission there when all the royal family was assembled there when all the royal family was assembled there.

Additional police information from New York, three weeks ago, suggested that the plotters were acting in cooperation with Nihilist agents in that city, and that the first victim proceeded against would be the Czar at some point of his travels during the next few weeks.

I come now to the extraordinary device resorted to by the British authorities to gain possession of the secrets of the conspirators. The English newspapers have been filled for the past fortnight with discussions and surmises regarding the real reasons for the release of four Irish political prisoners. The Home Secretary has insisted that the condition of their health was the only motive for his action, and that it was purely an act of mercy under the regular rules of his department. The newspapers and prominent members of the Tory party have refused to accept this explanation. I have made no reference to the subject in my despatches to THE SUN because the nature of the information might be, and would have regarded the suggestion as preposterous had it not come from a well-informed quarter. Now, in the light of yesterday's events, it seems well-nigh impossible that the release of the Irish prisoners and these revelations can be merely another example of the long reach of the arm of coincidence.

The situation at the date of the release of Gallagher, Daly, and Whitehead was this: The Government knew that a gigantic plot for the use of dynamite in this country had been hatched in New York. It knew the names of the chief conspirators who had already set out on their foul mission. It did not know the names of the intended victims or the actual object of the conspiracy. The detectives were baffled and anxious. It was already suspected that the Russian Emperor was one of the victims aimed at. A hint to that effect had been received from the Russian Embassy in London. It would be a political factor of tremendous importance in the present great crisis in European affairs if England could be instrumental in defeating an attempt upon the life of the Czar. It was an extraordinary situation calling for extraordinary measures, and they were adopted. Nor is it fair to condemn any man suffering penal servitude for life for yielding to the temptation of proffered liberty on condition that he assist in thwarting a vile conspiracy for murder and outrage.

I shall not point out the member of the released quartet who is suspected of betraying Tynan. I will only say that four days ago most of the details of the plot came into the possession of the Scotland Yard authorities, and plans were swiftly made and executed for defeating the great conspiracy.

I received late this evening, from a high police official, some further particulars of the plot as it was actually carried out. It is no mere fancy campaign of violence that has been planned. It was a great Anarchist conspiracy against European institutions. The chief instigator, so the Scotland Yard authorities declare, was a man whom they describe as a Russian professor in New York. He, as the representative of the Nihilists, endeavored to obtain the cooperation of Tynan and other Clan-na-Gael and Anarchists in the execution of their designs against the Czar. This Russian offered to supply unlimited funds and all necessary information in the use of explosives for both purposes if Tynan would undertake to recruit in London, and carry out, in England, the Fenian aims in England. Tynan and three others finally assumed the mission to inaugurate a general reign of terror in Europe. Their terrific plans, so the police assert, included the blowing up of Balmoral Castle while the Queen, Czar, Prince of Wales, and other members of the royal family were present, and a series of attacks on the Continent. Their plans were well advanced when the police stepped in utterly without warning yesterday and bagged the entire gang, with all their apparatus of death. Bombs and other equipment sufficient to destroy a largely were found in the hands of the conspirators.

They made the same mistake that Jameson made at Kruger's camp and carried with them the key to their cipher correspondence, which was found in large quantities. The details of this documentary evidence are not disclosed, but it is affirmed by the Rotterdam police that full particulars of the conspiracy were obtained by the authorities of this city. Inspector Melville recently went to Paris, where, it is supposed, he conferred with the police as to the best means of circumventing the plans of the conspirators. At that time the English papers were not aware of the existence of the plot, and their comments on the Inspector's journey to Paris they said, while pointing out the existence in London of a large